

Paranormalis Epstein - Sanguis Et Tenebris -

Project AngelBook - Volume XXVII - Part 1

Ezekiel Redik Yarbrough

What you are about to read exists at the intersection of documented history and the edges of human understanding — the place where official records end and something far older, far darker, and far less explainable begins. On January 30, 2026, the United States Department of Justice released what would become the largest document disclosure in the history of a single criminal case — over 3.5 million pages, 180,000 images, and 2,000 videos tied to the investigation of Jeffrey Edward Epstein, convicted sex trafficker, suspected intelligence asset, and man who died in federal custody under circumstances the world has never fully accepted as natural. The release came following the bipartisan passage of the Epstein Files Transparency Act in November 2025, a law that passed the Senate unanimously and forced an institution that had protected these secrets for decades to finally, however reluctantly, crack the vault. What emerged was not just a legal document dump. It was a confirmation. Of networks. Of names. Of power structures so deeply embedded in the architecture of civilization that even with millions of pages now technically public, the deepest layers remain redacted, withheld, or conveniently disappeared — sixteen files vanished from the DOJ's own webpage within twenty four hours of the first December 2025 release, without explanation. Congressmembers who viewed unredacted files in secured DOJ reading rooms emerged visibly shaken, with one describing the content as "bigger than Watergate" and another stating Trump's name appeared more than a million times in the unredacted material. Meanwhile, across the internet, in the places where the officially unsanctioned research has always lived — the anonymous boards, the paranormal forums, the digital communities that mainstream media calls fringe and intelligence agencies call threats — something extraordinary was happening simultaneously. The paranormal board of 4chan, a space historically dismissed as chaos and conspiracy, became during this period one of the most active real time research hubs on the internet, as anonymous researchers cross referenced flight logs against ritual calendars, mapped bloodline connections against ancient power structures, and began asking the questions that no congressional hearing would dare voice out loud: What if Epstein was not an anomaly? What if he was a node? What if the network he served is not a modern creation of greed and perversion, but the visible surface layer of something ancient, intentional, and non-human in its origin? This volume does not ask you to believe anything. It asks you to look. At the documents. At the connections. At the history that was never supposed to survive. Sanguis et tenebris — blood and darkness — has always been the language of those who rule from the shadows. This is their vocabulary, translated at last into yours.

[31 / 11]The image is a digital illustration featuring a character with vibrant red hair and horns. The character has a large, open mouth with a tongue sticking out, and is wearing a black top with a visible cleavage. The character's eyes are closed, and the expression is one of surprise or shock. The character's ears are pointed, and there is a small heart-shaped pendant on the left ear. The background is plain white, which contrasts with the character's colorful appearance. The style of the image is reminiscent of anime or manga, with a focus on the character's expressive face and the dramatic pose. There are no texts present in the image.

late afternoon yesterday i was sitting in my room home alone when i suddenly felt something making out with me, this was not my imagination it was full on french kissing crazy tongue work and i felt my cock getting rubbed as well, it freaked me the fuck out but i just let it happen and got into it and made out back which made the kissing way more intense, whatever it was was holding my hand too and started riding me when i reciprocated, i layed down and then the making out turned into my mouth opening fully wide and the feeling of a long tube going down my throat, i started to really freak the fuck out then and tried to make it stop multiple times but it was almost like it spoke to me without a audible voice like "shhh just relax and let this happen" so this tube is down my throat for a while then i cough up a shitload of phlegm, and for about an hour this being is still with me as if it was cuddling still holding my hand and i felt it stroking my hair and it kissed me on the cheek a few times...

so was i harvested by an alien or succubus? it didn't feel bad necessarily and i didn't feel like i was drained of any vitality, is it possible that it put something inside of me as apposed to harvesting me? maybe it was a seraphim and she/he/it shoved their long serpent tongue down my throat as a crazy sex move?

has anyone else had any remotely similar experience of an invisible being interacting with your body and shoving a tube down your throat?

lol maybe it was a dude and it was a cock but there was no thrusting or ejaculation feeling and it didn't seem sexually gratifying at all on their end, and if i was just harvested idk why they'd stay with me for an hour cuddling and kissing on me and still holding my hand if it already got what it wanted.

my only other theory is that i'm really in a deep medically induced coma and my nurse fools around with me and i felt my breathing/eating tube being re inserted as if i was halfway to waking up

The image is a digital illustration featuring two female characters, one with blonde hair and the other with brown hair, both wearing glasses and holding guns. The blonde character is holding a green-colored gun with a "GLOW-E-CHAN" logo on it, while the brown-haired character is holding a black gun with a "COLT 54" logo on it. Both characters are wearing green uniforms with a U.S. flag design on the left side of their chests.

The background of the image is white and features a color palette with various shades of blue, green, and purple, suggesting a military or tactical theme. There are also several smaller images of the characters in different poses, each with a different expression, providing a variety of facial expressions.

At the top of the image, there is text that reads "THANK YOU FOR MAKING THE FOUNDED ARMY AWARD." Below this, there is a list of names and their corresponding colors, indicating a color-coding system for the characters. The text is in a smaller font size compared to the main illustration.

The overall style of the image is cartoonish and is likely intended for a comic or graphic novel, given the character design and the narrative text.

another more grounded in reality but still paranormal possibility is the fact that i live in Nevada next to a shitload of 5G towers, im surrounded by the things they're on every block and shopping plaza, sometimes decorated as palm trees to be less jarring , and behind my gated community is a electrical thing with about 10 of them in cluster, i could be being fucked with by some agency like a lab rat on some project blue balls shit, not even in a nefarious way i just happen to be a close by person. it wasn't a painful experience at all it was actually pretty pleasant, and it was about torture idk why they'd cuddle with me for an hour who knows maybe there's a horny military lady that has the hots for me over at Nelis air force base or the black mountain transmitter station (which is basically in my back yard)

if it was a dream i would've just ignored it unlike most of this board and religious people in general i don't think there's anything remotely paranormal about dreams or that any person has ever had a "vision" or "premonition" from them, they're literally just your subconscious mind vomiting out it's backlog of information of what happened during the day i've been thinking about that a lot too, i mentioned earlier how it was speaking to me without an audible voice, almost like gut feeling for lack of a better phrase this is very new to me so i can't describe it well, but there where breaks in between the tube where id cough and it was saying to me " ok now cough, good thank you" in a very professional manner , then the tube down the throat thing would start again. who knows maybe my astral plane darling is also a doctor? or at least cares about me enough to take matters into their own hands and the making out and getting jerked and rode was simply because they couldn't help themselves or to ease the process?

idk this has been a crazy experience all around. btw the phlegm just looked like regular phlegm which is gross on it's own but i damn near filled a drinking glass with it so i had something in me for sure.

[23 / 3]The image is a candid photograph capturing a moment at what appears to be a public event or protest. In the foreground, a man is prominently featured, wearing a dark suit, sunglasses, and a tie. He is holding a megaphone to his mouth, which is turned up, suggesting he is speaking or announcing something. The man's expression is focused and intense, indicating he is engaged in a public speaking role.

In the background, there is a crowd of people, some of whom are holding cameras, indicating that this is a media event or a significant public gathering. The crowd is diverse, with individuals of various ages and genders, suggesting a diverse audience. The lighting in the image is bright, with shadows cast on the ground, indicating that the event is taking place during the day.

There are no discernible texts or logos in the image that provide additional context or information about the event. The style of the image is candid and documentary, capturing a snapshot of a moment in time at the event. The photograph is taken from a low angle, which emphasizes the man in the foreground and gives a sense of scale to the crowd in the background.

Alex is one of them now. They had to incorporate all his bullshit because they could go around him

I think this is the best gameplan and I'm thinking of doing what he and icke did

If you come and and become big you qillt always have people boosting you and everyone still has their own little club of haters

But if you're too big bold and brazen the haters will literally eat themselves in spite and you become untouchable as you grow

It's an interesting option but you need a relatively niche subject to exploit , something that rings true to a lot of people. it doesn't NEED to be true but people will FEEL it is and their voices will speak for you too

Now you need to make money of course milking it is the most important thing

I suggest to just quietly start building your niche from the shadows and see if it gets traction before you turn it into a successful information business operation , if don't well even your haters will amplify your revenue

Just become a powerhouse bros. They lauged at Icke 40 years ago but he was tanking later and nobody is mocking him anymore . he made quite the booksales and his bullshit gigs make him additional cash

Many people have tried to fact check Alex in real time and all it has ever accomplished is making Alex Jones seem sane and legitimate.

Alawite Ancient History of the World. Demiurge, Djinn, Archons, and Loosh Farm

The Demiurge, or the main presiding God of this world, was not the first one to rule here. This is the 7th cycle on planet Earth. Life has been reset here many times before.

Syrian texts have illustrated that the previous Demiurge was known as Dalam. He had a serpent-like form, and he created a reptilian species of people. They built cities all over the world. Eons later, another Demiurge appeared known as Yaoim. Yaoim overpowered and consumed Dalam, and then his energy body began to resemble a serpent with a lion's head. Yaoim then drained the life force of Earth's inhabitants, and threw them out into another parallel dimension. They are now known as the djinn, and they are known for resenting humanity, because they were here before us. Their soul energy was used to create and animate humans. Yaoim, our current Demiurge, is known by many names under different religions. He is not the true God-head, and he and his servants, use the energy of humans as food. He looks like a massive jellyfish that's hooked around planet Earth. This is much older than Gnosticism. The Greeks made it love and light, but the true reality is very grim.

The Demiurge Yaoim and his main 7 servants, also called sultans, and widely known as the Archons, also have a polar opposite, a shadow figure, like an evil twin, which further distorts physical laws, and they also corrupt and deceive humans, who think they are rebelling against organized religion by praying to figures like Lucifer. This is only the beginning.

The Abrahamic Judgement Day BS has been prepping us for the next Harvest.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a dragon with a fierce expression, its mouth open as if roaring. The dragon's body is composed of numerous scales, and its head is adorned with a mane that curls around its face. The dragon's tail is coiled around a large, metallic structure that resembles a pyramid or a triangle. The structure is intricately detailed, with a mesh-like pattern on its surface.

Above the structure, there is a crescent moon with a golden hue, and a planet with a reddish-brown hue is visible in the background. The background is a deep black, providing a stark contrast to the other elements in the image.

The image is framed by a thin white border, and there are two small, glowing orbs at the bottom corners, adding a touch of mystery to the composition. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of traditional Japanese art, with its emphasis on the use of color and the depiction of mythical creatures.

The image is a close-up of a person's face, captured in a dimly lit environment. The individual appears to be a man with a beard and mustache, and his eyes are closed. The person's mouth is slightly open, and there is a visible line of drool on his chin. The person's expression is one of distress or pain, with his eyes closed and mouth slightly open.

In the bottom right corner of the image, there is text that reads "RAUGH!!!" in a bold, capital-letter font. The text is in white, contrasting with the dark background, and it is positioned in a way that it is easily readable against the dark backdrop. The overall style of the image is dramatic and intense, with the use of lighting and shadow to create a sense of tension.

The image is a still from a video, featuring a man with short, dark hair. He appears to be outdoors, with a clear sky and a building in the background. The man is wearing a beige jacket and a plaid shirt underneath. His expression is neutral, and he is looking slightly to his left. There is a text overlay on the image that reads "It's all so tiresome." The style of the image is candid and appears to be a still from a video, possibly a documentary or a travelogue, given the natural setting and the man's casual attire.

The image is a digital artwork featuring a figure that appears to be a stylized representation of a deity or a powerful being. The figure is wearing a crown with a red tiara and a golden chain, suggesting a regal or divine status. The figure's face is dark, with a beard and a stern expression, and it has glowing red eyes that give it an otherworldly appearance. The background is a gradient of warm colors, transitioning from a lighter orange at the top to a darker orange at the bottom, creating a sense of depth and a dramatic effect. The figure is surrounded by a cloud-like structure, which is illuminated by a golden light, enhancing the mystical or divine aura of the figure. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of fantasy art, with a focus on the figure's imposing presence and the dramatic lighting.

The image is a stylized illustration with a fantasy or science fiction theme. It features a figure seated on a throne-like chair, wearing a blue and red costume with a cape and a mask that resembles a superhero's face. The figure has a muscular build and is holding a staff with a golden emblem on it. The background is a dark, moody room with a large circular window that offers a view of a cityscape at night. A ghostly figure with glowing eyes and a ghostly hand is floating above the figure, suggesting a supernatural or otherworldly presence. To the left of the figure, there is a globe on a stand, and to the right, there is a golden lamp with a globe on it. The overall color palette is dark with hints of gold and red, and the artwork has a detailed and textured appearance. There are no texts present in the image.

Before the current seventh era of our existence, existed a lesser creator god, a ruler presiding over the formation and feeding of earth named "Dal-lam". A thoughtform that gave itself that identity from within itself after breaking free from one the rivers of thought in the fifth layer of the upper mind. It was an imperfect thought of the "I AM", a tumorous one that activated, detached and naturally descended through the veil of the sixth layer and rested in the seventh as a charged and consuming malicious essence, hungry to survive he started feeding on unformed creation smoke, but this did not make him grow as in order to grow a cloud must form, so he found his way to the edges of the seventh layer where the idea-cloud interconnects with the material world, and like the previous malignant thoughtforms before him he found Earth. A canvas planet where clouds such as himself formed matter and fed off of it. We do not know much about the worlds, or the makers before Dalam, we only know that he is the sixth one to create on Earth with Yaoim being the seventh.

After Dalam found this planet he oscillated himself into a meatsuit which he created and connected, to walk the planet like an artist surveying his canvas through an avatar of flesh and blood, he needed five basic senses and the meatsuit's biological compatibility systems in order to experience the planet in the physical dimension, thus quickly the meatsuit grew the skeleton, skin, the circulatory system and the nervous system, as he walked the meatsuit's faculties became more and more complex, essentially adapting with every step to adapt to the the canvas planet, In a sense Dalam created and is the original designer of the Earth's biological living being pattern of mammals. He walked the Earth at a time when there were less water bodies and more land. Dalam used the meatsuit and the sultans to begin the feeding process by creating life on the planet. He vibrated space time and brought in the charges and formations from the upper dimension and directly imprinted their oscillated formations down on the canvas.

When Earth, the garden planet was complete to receive potentialities, Dalam siphoned shards of life, pneuma and charge from the rivers in the the fifth layer, and he locked them into containers in the seventh layer known to us as "غيمات التكوين" or clouds of formation, he then oscillated the clouds down to their essences on Earth and locked them inside proto-human meatsuits, along with the myriad of other beings and beasts on the planet. This technique of formation, the siphoning shards and locking it on a planet is not an invention of Dalam, it is rather a way that creator clouds use when they seed planets or realities.

Dalam's creation was imperfect, the created beings were a chaotic yet intelligent reptile race of hermaphroditic monstrosities and abomination creatures made of meatsuits of fire and mud. They slithered the land filled with rage and hatred for they understood their horrible fate. Helpless and lost, they ate from the fruit of the land and its beasts and they prospered and grew into the “Seven Kingdoms of the fire muds” and some time after they unified under one presence that developed the Earth rather quickly. Dalam had given their clouds too much freedom in the form of many rogue tendrils which gave them the power to alter their material dimension, they continued to grow and procreate and alter the overall feeding process, and they evolved and became more powerful than anticipated, they built cities and empires.

Dalam understood that the fire muds were given too much freedom, and too many choices for formation and as such they disrupted his feeding process, they grew more arrogant and defiant and messed with his creation by utilizing technologies to alter his hold on the planet. They figured out ways to exit the feeding process as well as many of them escaped into the seventh layer. This angered the Dalam and he decided to punish them so he sent them a calamity to destroy and harvest them, because in their defiance and disobedience to the feeding and reincarnation system they broke the sacred bond of “A-M-S” the bond between a god and his creation.

The first calamity Dalam sent them was named “Junnan” or insanity, for Dalam had inflicted them with such a virus as to cause the brains of their meatsuits to rot and they would become insane, but the fire muds were clever, and they worked hard and found a cure or a way around that calamity. It is from this calamity name “Junnan” that we derive the name of Djinn or Jinn, for they are the mad remnants of the previous cycle. The mad ones, but the fire muds persisted and some of them survived.

Dalam witnessed their survival and he sent them the second calamity that came in the form altering the very nature of their meatsuits, he summoned the sultans of polarity and transformation, and used them on their respective gates on earth. These sultans then sung their song and the Djinn survivors of the virus then split into two genders, the male and the female, and further into Iblis and Ifrits two subcategories that arose from the adversary of transformation's work. The monstrous intelligent beasts did not die however and they continued to multiply and defy the lesser god. Albeit going insane, and their meatsuits mutated they persisted and did not die out.

Dalam witnessed their survival once more and sent them the third calamity in the form of the adversaries of the sultans of vibration and balance, this caused disruptions of vibration and imbalance to their clouds and the fire muds lost their ability to perform any latching with their rogue tendrils, essentially losing their free will and any way to manifest anything, essentially freezing them out of the feeding process and preventing them from having any role other than that of the observer, surviving only as creatures of the land. Hyper Intelligent and aware, mutated and transformed meatsuits filled with blind rage, bitterness and hatred to their god yet unable to do anything or to make any decision past the basic survival of the meatsuit, they became animals of the land. The Djinn continued to survive as beasts until their cycle ended when the great theophagy of Yaoim eating Dalam and his creation and harvesting everything in the seven kingdoms of the Djinn, the Iblis, Ifrits and everything alive on Earth up into his essence in the idea-cloud. A merciful celestial barbaric rapture. The Djinn, now released from their immense torture as hyperintelligent beings imprisoned in beastly form were thankful for the harvest by their redeemer and swore eternal servitude to him in the realms above.

The skull's features are not fully visible due to the blurring effect, but it appears to have a smooth, rounded top and a slightly curved, elongated shape. The background is a deep black, which contrasts with the red tones of the skull, making it stand out prominently. There are no discernible texts or other objects in the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of digital art or a graphic design, with a focus on color and form rather than realism.

You don't have to be at a specific location in order to witness Hades/Nibiru

The alawites don't know what they're talking about.

First there was Hades, then there is this creation that rests upon the foundation which is Hades.

Saturn is Veles. Hades is Saturn. Lucifer arises from Hades.

God is the devil and the devil is God.

And the djinn/Annunaki/Elohim chose to procreate with the Aryan race because the sons of God mated with the fair daughters of men.

To be possessed by the djinn us to be a genius. Aryans are the chosen people. The Scythians claimed descent from Artimpasa who is quite obviously a Djinn. Artimpasa is Ishtar and Ishtar is Lucifer.

Reincarnation is real. We drink from the river of forgetfulness before returning back to earth. When the yin/yang spins really fast, it forms a swastika.

The Kaaba in Mecca represents hell as does the circus.

Not him, but the Royal Secret is information associated with the highest grades of Scottish Rite Freemasonry, which you don't get initiated into unless you manage to figure it out for yourself. But that information is basically just what the dude everyone's talking about in this thread blew the lid off of in his AMAs. So as of 2024, the deepest, most esoteric secrets of Freemasonry have been out in the wild for anyone to learn about, courtesy of this random newfag on /x/.

Anon always has a habit of gratuitously exaggerating the importance of anything that happens on 4chan ("We got Trump elected!" "We invented memes!" "We're the last bastion of free speech!"), but this actually was a world-historical occurrence, if anything even more important than the discovery of the Qumran or Naj' Hammādī literature. I could live to be a hundred, and I'll probably never get over the shock that this happened in my lifetime, and on this tardfest of a website to boot.

Jesus, dude. I'm starting to come around to OP's attitude of thinking some of you guys are just actual retards who need to be browbeat out of the thread. I am telling you that the secret is in the AMA threads, which this thread is a two-years-after lookback on, linked right up in the second fucking post. It took the guy seven threads to lay it all out, and if you are a complete noob at all things paranormal, you are still going to have to do (most likely) months of hard work for the words you read to mean much to you. You have been given all of the information you are asking for already. I'm sorry you don't like the fact that it's not the kind of thing that can be distilled into verbal communication in a few posts to any meaningful effect, but that is just not how any of this shit works, ever has, or ever will. I'm amazed he managed to very effectively convey it through words in only seven full threads, or honestly even at all for that matter.

You can either develop a rudimentary attention span and devote the next few months to cultivating an understanding of this (again, you have been more than spoonfed everything you need to do so in this thread already, and have been reminded of the fact multiple times by multiple people). Or you can keep the mentality you're exhibiting if it makes you comfortable, and end up as one of those people who spend years on this board saying, "Prove to me this or that is real," while others are actually having experiences that you will continue to voluntarily lock yourself out of through nothing more than abject laziness. But you're never going to get a third option, and if you think you've found one at some point, you're either fooling yourself or being fooled by someone or something else.

Ehapassiko. Look it up if you don't know what it means. You can take approach, or no approach at all. That's how EVERYTHING paranormal works, and it's why so many people go to their grave without feeling they've ever encountered it.

The image is a close-up photograph of a person wearing a traditional headdress. The headdress is made of a woven material with a prominent, curved top that extends over the person's head. The color of the headdress is a warm, earthy tone, possibly brown or beige, with a red or maroon border that contrasts with the material. The person's face is partially obscured by the headdress, with only the upper part of their head and face visible. They are looking off to the side, and their expression is neutral. The background is blurred, suggesting a focus on the person in the foreground. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the image is candid and appears to be taken in

The image is a still from a television show, specifically from the animated series "The Simpsons." It features the character Bart Simpson, who is depicted in a seated position. Bart is wearing a yellow shirt with a red collar and a red band around his neck. He has a serious expression on his face, with his eyebrows drawn together and his eyes looking downward. His hair is styled in a short, spiky cut. In his left hand, he is holding a small, framed picture of himself, which is colored in shades of blue and green. The background of the image is a dark blue sky with a few scattered clouds. The overall style of the image is cartoonish and typical of the show's style.

The image is a screenshot of a chat interface, likely from a messaging application, displaying a conversation between two users. The chat is in a dark color scheme with a white background. At the top of the image, the word "REG" is prominently displayed in large, bold, black letters. Below this, there are two separate messages.

The first message is from a user named "FRIEND_D" who is currently online at 3:49 AM. The message reads: "this is reg" followed by a timestamp of 3:49 AM.

The second message is from a user named "Supervillain Reg" who is online at 3:49 AM. The message reads: "I fucking hate Poland."

The style of the image is a simple, straightforward representation of a chat conversation, with no additional graphics or embellishments. The text is clear and legible, and the layout is straightforward, with the chat window taking up the majority of the space. The image does not contain any other discernible elements or information.

I know you're just seventeen and shitposting, but I'll momentarily pretend otherwise and reply to this part.

The Royal Secret is not a concept, it's a personal experience of something that actually exists in real life. Here is a relevant example of me spelling out a concept in a few easy to understand words: experiential knowledge is only gained through direct experience.

Your broader point is irrelevant to the Royal Secret in the first place, which ought to be readily apparent by now to anyone who's read the thread thoroughly and has any degree of reading comprehension worthy of the name. But given that I, OP, and possibly others have been beating our heads against a wall explaining a concept as simple as "you gotta try it yourself to get it" to some of you guys in simple words for a while now to no avail, your broader point is nonetheless either wrong, or it's right, but there's apparently no amount of dumbing things down that will suffice to enable you and your fellow hecklers to understand much personally.

Are you stupid or something? I am all knowing which means I am always right, in fact I knew you were going to say this and prepared this response yesterday. You are completely missing out on two very important facts.

1. These "threads" are almost completely fake and gay. I just looked through them and all I found were a few neat astral projection tips. This guy is wrong about almost everything else simply because he's a gay brown arab and you (an Aryan) are not allowed to believe in his religion. It's really that simple. This is just one more attempt to hegelianize gnosticism. If you're brown you physically can't be right about stuff like this it's impossible. It's neat I guess he at least tried to be gnostic though but unfortunately for him the real religion is Thelema. Why do you think the Thelemic inner sanctum in the OTO is called the "Gnostic Catholic Church". The word Catholic meaning "single legitimate" i.e. "the only real gnosticism on earth the rest is larp".

2. I know you're larping because there actually is no royal secret lol. They tell everyone something different. The big blackpill in masonry that they give you at the end of your big faggy heros journey is that actually nothing matters and just being silly or "jesting" is sacred because nothing else really matters. To spite this they try to take over the world anyway it's really stupid.

The image is a digital illustration featuring four animated characters standing in a line on a circular platform. Each character is dressed in a blue and white outfit with a distinctive black and white headband. They are holding a sword in their right hand and have a confident stance. The background is a gradient of blue and orange hues, suggesting a tropical or desert setting.

At the top of the image, there are three icons representing the characters' in-game status: "120 Ready," "77 Ready," and "221 Ready." Below the characters, there are two text boxes with the names "120 Ready" and "77 Ready" followed by the names "Work Kowry" and "Mark Kowry" respectively. The characters' names are likely referring to the names of the players in the game.

The overall style of the image is reminiscent of a digital art piece, possibly from a video game or a digital art platform, given the character design and the game-related icons.

The characters' expressions and postures suggest they are ready for battle, with the confident stance of the central character being particularly prominent.

>if Mohamed believe in what you said why the Quran dont mention it?

Mohammed channeled the Quran, and the Quran is for controlling you. Allah and the Jewish God are different names for our Demiurge, Yaoim. He wants to control and fool you, so he can feed off of your energy, and later your life force.

>is karma real?

No.

>why kike are evil are their souls different than ours?

Most jews aren't. They were just randomly born into that culture and faith. You could have been randomly born a jew.

Perhaps some jews are more psychically connected to our Demiurge.

From what I understand, ultimately consent is needed for you to reincarnate; it's some kind of law they follow.

Those in charge call it a school, that we're here to learn service to others, to raise our own vibrational frequencies and that of others; but there's something REALLY fishy about the whole thing.

Whether it's true that we chose to come here or not is irrelevant. If I can choose, I will not choose to come here again.

Nope, there's no real consent. There's some magnetic tech that is involved with capturing us after death.

Unrelated researchers and unrelated remote viewers have been independently finding this. Jason Jorjani has been going public name dropping and explaining this.

There are some people though that manage to live in the 7th plane or something like that, and basically be ghosts.

Gnosticism is a school of philosophy, who used the greek term 'Gnosis', for a specific kind of mystic knowledge (inner knowledge, higher, direct knowledge of God). The movement arose in the 1st and 2nd century ad, contemporaneous with the first writings of the New Testament, described by Iranaeus as gnostikos. The word 'gnosticism' is only used in 17th century. 'Gn' is also in the word 'gene', knowledge is stored in DNA.

One of the meanings of the G inside the masonic square and compass, symbol of sexual union, is gnosis (one can only gain knowledge and wisdom if male and female are in balance). Knowledge of God is not obtained from an external source, but through the knowledge of self, exploring the inner world (theme of Alice in Wonderland and the Wizard of Oz).

YHVH and the serpent (1st and 2nd group of slavemasters)

The first book of the Old Testament, the book of Genesis contains a contradiction, an enigma, the problem of origin of good and evil. The evil serpent seduces humans into sensual pleasure. Christianity points the finger of blame to humans, especially Eve for eating of the tree of knowledge but doesn't explain the origin of evil, why a loving almighty God created a tempting, evil serpent. It describes how Adam 'knew' his wife, giving knowledge a sexual connotation. The gnostics considered the serpent as good-eating from the tree of knowledge was not a sin, but a way of liberating themselves.

In gnosticism the world is evil, created by evil god- YHVH, an angry jealous god, who told them not to eat from the tree to keep them in spiritual darkness. The serpent people who worship the serpent of genesis were called Ophites by Hyppolitus of Rome. Cainites and Ophidians started worshipping the fallen angels, Lucifer the serpent and Cain the child of Eve and Lucifer.

In their view a lower, evil creator god , YHVH of the Old testament, Elohim of Genesis has created the material world as a mistake, a trap and has trapped our divine spark (our intellect and spirit, our true self) in the material world. It has to be liberated through gnosis (to reach our home, the higher realm).

Consciousness/God was seen as one point (male principle) in the middle of a circle (female principle), which is the zodiac: the word 'angel' derives from the angles from a circle. The constellation Snakeholder (Ophiuchus) was seen as the Golden Gate, a stargate for DNA activation, a door for spiritual rebirth, reuniting with trinity mother goddess m, the 13, in the middle of the 12 zodiac signs. The 12 disciples + Christ (Ophiuchus) = 13 zodiac signs.

Ophiuchus (Sophie or Isis, higher octave of Scorpio, ego death) depicts the Snakeholder, in Sumer Enki, in Egypt Imhotep, in Greece Asclepius (son of Apollo, killed by Zeus for bringing healing herbs, secret to immortality to humans), in Rome Mithras, in Christianity Christ, wrestling and getting control of the serpent. Ophiuchus has his foot on Scorpio, this represents Christ walking on water (Scorpio being a water sign). Scorpio is the sign of death and rebirth and is the only sign with three symbols. 13th cranial nerve (terminal nerve, nerve zero, gate to oneness, the one eye, connected to the trinity thalamus- pineal- pituary) connected to the 13th tribe, the Tribe of Dan, with special DNA.

Ea (Enki), Sea or waters is a gnostic symbol for the world of matter or of darkness into which the divine has sunk.

Knowledge or gnosis has a kabbalistic meaning, the hidden 11th sphere Da'ath, sexual knowledge. Like all spheres it is a connected to a planet, in this case Pluto and the star Sirius.

The apple, like the pentagram is a symbol of Venus. The eating of the apple is the taste of sensual pleasure, orgasm, the riding of the Kundalini serpent.

Humans originated as a hack job modified from primates as some sort of compromise between warring parties. Although humanoids may exist elsewhere across the universe, we weren't supposed to be created here, at least not yet, and not so rushed.

Reincarnation is also part of the deal. It isn't natural in this universe, and we are forced to do it. Every time we are born, our souls sort of dissolve more and more, and our energy is constantly siphoned by other entities, so we may be in a sort of loosh farm.

>Nope, there's no real consent. There's some magnetic tech that is involved with capturing us after death.

nta but there is, the thing is, spiritually, consent, and communication for that matter, all work different to how it works in human life. For example, the moment you think, and feel, that you need a wife, you are spiritually consenting to having your spirit split and divided into feminine and masculine. From the universe's perspective, this is a decision we made and consented to long time ago, and so our spirit is split in many ways during our life as human, unbeknown to us. When you meditate into solipsism, or repeat a mantra to tell yourself you are whole and complete, you are reversing this split, however, you can do so spiritually, your body retains memory of this division, so you never fully heal from this division until human death.

Now, let's go to hypothetical death, you meet the archons or whatever the fuck, they transform into your dead grandma, or jesus, or whatever character can get a reaction out of you. The nanosecond you have a reaction, you are consenting to. The nanosecond you feel you had an unfinished task, a lingering desire that was never fulfilled, maybe a sexual fantasy even that you didn't get to experience, the moment you so much as feel that way, you already consented to being reincarnated. It's non verbal, like that, your feel is the navigator. Think how dreams work, that's an approximation to it. This is why the buddha told us to learn to ignore everything, temptation, loved ones, learn to let go of absolutely everything, any reaction will be read as consent

The oligarchy are an invert sex cult (elite gender inversion is what the interwebs have been calling it). It's all fake and gay, everything you see in the media is fake

Butler PA: fake and gay

Charlie Kirk: fake and gay

Renee Good: fake and gay

JFK? Fake and Gay.

Nukes: super fake and gay

Look at the First "lady's" and it's obvious, what's less obvious (do to decades of testosterone use) is that all the "men" are inverted as well, but look at their rounded skulls, sloped shoulders, close-set features, and in-line foot-fall gait. Female skeletons. They are all inverts, just like Melania, Big Mike, Barb etc ad infinitum Inversion is what Carpenter was talking about in They Live. Freemasonry, like Jews, like Templars etc are deliberate astroturfed red-herrings, game theory it out: why would They have publicly identifiable allegiance?

But They do exist, and They are an active, malicious cabal, so how does it actually work?

Elite Gender Inversion is not Baal or Saturn or Satan worship (tho They probably worship all of these false gods), it is the means by which They stay biologically distinct and separate from Us and maintain Their information asymmetry through collusion.

>Elite Gender Inversion is not Baal or Saturn or Satan worship (tho They probably worship all of these false gods), it is the means by which They stay biologically distinct and separate from Us and maintain Their information asymmetry through collusion.

Most, if not all esoteric reasons, have a very materialistic reason.

Same for child sacrifice and pedophilia. It is about keeping themselves together, secret, and loyal to each other. It's what Epstein was doing and the soviets named it Kompromat. An exemple in movies would be the secret photos taken to frame celebrities with prostitutes in the movie L.A Confidential. Though it's more efficient when they frame one with a child.

The moon goddess was never supposed to be a thing that's why the oldest living gods of the moon were male.

The Moon is only a hard drive the identity that is or was tied to the Moon is a male.

If the male exists then the "moon female" cannot exist simultaneously or it creates a bunch of glitches and problems.

The confusion stems from the fact that inactive is considered a feminine process while active is a considered a male process.

I'm literally giving you the answer straight up digested and shat out for your understanding.

But never mind because I'm working with a bunch of people who really fucking got too much into the 'spooky' esoteric feelings that you people are seem to be obsessed with.

About as useful as the people who still literally believe that these stories from the Bible happen in real life when they were just cosmic events.

And it's been years and the same shit is still happening.

So nothing, you people are just being misled by your own stories and your own desires to think that is some sort of nefarious otherworldly spiritual thing going on and it's just things getting lost in translation.

But do go on killing off well known people so that you can have a lot of emotions that you can manipulate and harness for whatever stupid purpose you have like selling stock or building a shitty temple no one cares about.

She was incredibly popular among the people, both nationally and internationally, due to her open public appearances and her many charitable activities. There was hardly a royal who was ever as popular as she was. Attempts were made to tarnish her good reputation in the media, but even when it came out that she had snatched an Arab prince, most people were still on her side.

The French government sees it as a national embarrassment to be responsible for her death, so after multiple autopsies declared that Diana's driver was drunk and it was all his fault while forbidding the papparazzi from releasing those cursed photos they took.

It's that simple.

[7 / 2]The image is a collage of various elements. At the center, there is a statue of a male figure, seated on a pedestal, holding a staff. The statue is white and appears to be made of stone. The figure is wearing a hat and a draped garment, and the statue is positioned on a rocky outcropping.

The background features a celestial map with constellations and stars, suggesting a connection to astronomy or astrology. The map is blue with white lines and dots, and the stars are outlined in white.

The image is overlaid with a blue sky with white stars, which gives the impression of a night sky. The stars are scattered across the sky, and there are no discernible texts or markings on the image.

The overall style of the image is artistic and surreal, with a focus on the juxtaposition of the human figure with the celestial elements. The colors used are muted, with the white of the statue and the blue of the sky and map creating a contrast. The rocky outcropping and the blue sky add a sense of depth and dimension to the image.

Everything is Hellenic, people just don't know it.

Literally all of western civilization is built on the foundation of Plato.

The Logos described in John is hellenic.

The old testament being a referred to as The Law. Or The Law of Moses is hellenic and a direct response to plato and The Republic.

It's not as old as people think. Like im sure there's an oral tradition and the myths are old, but the text itself is much later.

Christians like to claim that Plato was "the first Christian" but really it's the other way around. Jesus is a Socratic figure. Choosing to face death for his virtue.

Below the quote, there is a smaller text that reads "I have never made but one prayer to God, a very short one: 'O Lord make my enemies ridiculous.' And God granted it." The quote and text are centered within the image.

In the lower part of the image, there is a portrait of a person with white hair and a white beard. The person appears to be an older individual with a serious expression. The portrait is framed by a decorative border with a pattern that includes swirls and curls.

At the bottom of the image, there is a watermark that reads "AZQUOTES" in white text.

The overall style of the image is a combination of text and a portrait, with a focus on the quote and the portrait of the person. The image seems to be a digital representation of a quote attributed to Voltaire.

[9 / 3]The image is a close-up photograph of a celestial object, possibly a star or a celestial body, with a complex structure that includes multiple layers and features. The object appears to be a nebula, a region of interstellar gas and dust that is ionized and emits light. The nebula is surrounded by a dark, star-filled background, suggesting that it is located in a galaxy or a similar astronomical environment.

The nebula exhibits a range of colors, including shades of orange, red, and white, which are indicative of the ionized gas and dust within it. The colors are vibrant and varied, suggesting the presence of various elements within the nebula.

The image is taken from a perspective that looks down upon the nebula, providing a view that is slightly angled towards the center of the nebula. This angle allows for a detailed view of the nebula's structure, with the layers and features clearly visible.

There are no discernible texts or markings on the image, and the focus is solely on the nebula and its intricate details. The image does not provide any information about the object's size or distance from Earth, as the nebula is too small to be seen from Earth.

Overall, the image provides a detailed and vivid depiction of a nebula, capturing its complex structure and the vibrant colors within it.

She has a neutral expression and is sitting on the ground with her legs crossed. In the foreground, there is a small, green, cartoonish creature with large, round eyes and a smiling expression. The creature appears to be looking at the character.

In the background, there is a dark, rocky wall with a pipe running vertically along it. To the right of the character, there is a tall, cylindrical object with a white top and a black base. The environment is dimly lit, and there are no discernible texts or other objects in the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of a pixel art or digital art style, with a focus on the character and the creature.

How is eternal torture good? I don't understand Christian thinking patterns. Anonymous

I don't get the Christian line of thinking, many think eternal torture is good. I'm like....what? Can you all explain why you think this with out quoting scripture in a way that makes sense? God is a big boy, if you sin against him he can shrug it off with out throwing you in a volcanoe. The creator isn't so petty they need to eternally torture anyone who sins against them. Even if they're perfect and don't deserve people to sin against them (They dont deserve it) they created life knowing people would sin ahead of time, if you Create or do any action get ready to deal with the consequences of your actions. The creator obviously knew we'd sin against him eventually and obviously is a big boy.

I believe the Creator created us to share the joy of eternal life with other beings because they're that good. Existing is great.

It's as if you all are a different species or mentally retarded (as in, literlaly disabled mentally in terms of figuring out right and wrong) or insane.

I believe the Creator eternally tortures no one and gives Eternal Life to all with temporary rehabilitative punishments because I think highly of the Creator and think they at least do the bare minimum to not be the devil.

I could not love a creator who was going to even eternally torture satan. The Creator could just eternally mercifully imprison Satan after a fair punishment and test people them selves and pretend to be Satan to test evil people.

There's no need to eternally burn anyone when the Creator is all powerful. The Creator would have to WANT to eternally torture to do it because they had evil in their soul. A good Creator would never want to eternally torture, especially when they're so intelligent and good they can rehabilitate anyone, even Satan. The Creator knows how to rehabilitate. I believe they will.

Proof that the Bible is the word of God:

1 Cor. 15:3-4: "For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures; And that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the scriptures:"

www.youtube.com/watch?v=_VRT2FFXntc

1 John 5:7: "For there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost: and these three are one."

Rom. 3:23: "For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God;"

Jesus Christ is God who has come in the flesh from heaven. He died as a sinless sacrifice for the sins of the whole world to save you from eternal hell, the punishment for your sins. He was buried, then resurrected and ascended to heaven, and will return soon to judge the world. You can't be justified to God your own way, so will you choose His righteousness instead? (Rom. 10:3)

Salvation is by grace through faith (Eph. 2:8-9) in the one, final, effectual sacrifice of the Lord Jesus Christ (Heb. 10:8-12) dying in your place as a substitutionary offering for sin (Rom. 5:1-10). His blood atonement made for you is finished, so if you have received the Lord Jesus by faith (John 1:12) in your heart, you're forgiven of all your sins and are saved, once for all; finally and forever! The gift of salvation can't be earned, it is a gift.

Rom. 10:9: "That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved." Confess The Lord and Savior Jesus Christ in prayer, that you trust in Him, not your own deeds, He atoned for your sins on the cross.

Eph. 2:8-9: "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: Not of works, lest any man should boast."

After you're saved, you are a child of God and nothing will separate you from His love. (Romans 8:38-39)

What do you mean by "rehabilitative punishments"? Look at the state of the world. It's so evil. Does that make people change their mind and turn to God? No. Why do you assume that that after punishment people will go "ok im not going to choose to be evil anymore".

Here are broken homes, broken hearts, broken lives, broken bones, broken nations, death, poverty, disease, starvation, killing, shelling, and bombing, as usual, with no letup whatsoever. You say, "The trouble is that we need to get together, and we are working on it, but you 'prophets of gloom' have lost your faith in mankind, and you oppose our work so that..." Are you dead sure the cause of the trouble is not that you have lost your faith in the word of God and, upon rejecting His truth, have believed a lie in order that you might be damned (2 Thess. 2:10-12)?

Unwilling to accept the revelation given by God, which deals with operations and methods in the moral realm (which lead to results in the physical realm), men have abandoned all hope of an absolute moral authority in line with the Bible. Their only hope now is to turn to an authority that denies or perverts the Bible and get their standards from this authority. Desiring this, according to His word (2 Thess. 2), God is about to grant them their desire (Jer. 21:14).

A god who is all love is a perverted god. Love without hate is not real love. If you love cleanliness, you will hate dirt. If you love your wife and kids, you will hate anything that tries to harm them.

The important thing to remember about God is His holiness. The love of God is rooted in God's holiness. All of God's love, in this age, is vested in the righteous life and sacrifice of Jesus Christ. Apart from Christ, God loves no man (John 3:16; Rom. 5:8); apart from Christ, the sinner abides in God's wrath (John 3:36: "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life: and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him.").

The image displays a text document with a dark background and white text. The document appears to be a part of a larger document, possibly a book or a research paper, as indicated by the presence of multiple references and citations. The text is written in English and is formatted in a standard academic style, with paragraphs and indented lines.

The document contains a series of numbered paragraphs, which are likely part of a larger discussion or argument. The numbering suggests that the text is organized in a logical sequence, likely following a logical flow of thought or a logical argument. The text is dense with information, and the content seems to be discussing a topic related to the field of philosophy or a similar discipline. The references to other works, such as "Bertrand Russell," "Bertrand Russell," and "Bertrand Russell," indicate that the text is likely discussing philosophical concepts or theories.

The text is not fully visible in the image, but the visible parts show a discussion of ideas and concepts, with references to other works and arguments. The text is dense and includes complex sentences and phrases, which suggests that the document is a scholarly or academic work.

The image does not provide any additional context or information beyond the visible text, so it is not possible to determine the exact topic or the author's intent from the image alone. The image only shows the text and does not provide any visual clues about the content or the context of the discussion.

>There's no need to eternally burn anyone when the Creator is all powerful.

Just because He is all powerful, doesn't mean that He can't limit His power to give you free will.

It's either people have free will to choose or reject God. If that isn't true, then they don't have free will.

If God forces everyone to accept what He wants through punishment, then that's not free will. If you want to reject God, why would God be good if He brainwashes you to stop having free will and force you to be with Him? Whether that be through punishment or some other method. No, God gives people what they want. If they want to reject God, God lets them reject His love. If they want to accept Him, God lets that happen.

If God will allow a power to control things when this power is evil and malicious, then why would the passage in 2 Thessalonians 2:10-12 cause any wonderment at all? The passage merely states that God gives what a man demands and asks for. If he wants a lie, he gets it.

If he will not take light (John 11:10), then light becomes lightning (Matt. 24:27). If he will not accept the truth of God, then he is exposed to a power that God has permitted to exist for the purpose of putting across a lie (John 8:44).

The unregenerate seeker of truth cries, "Give me the truth." God says, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him" (Matt. 17:5). The "seeker" shouts, "Yeah, but what about all these other religions? Do you mean to tell me that you think that you're the only one that is right, and the rest are wrong?" God says softly, "Yea, let God be true, but EVERY MAN a liar" (Rom. 3:3-4).

How does this prove that the author is god? Every higher being can forge this. Human AI can forge this too. Good entities, evil entities, entities that want to control people by scaremongering.

Could also be cherry-picking some calculations and conditions to fit a numerological narrative. There is no proof, that any of this is statistically significant, and that you cannot do this with any other book series. (How often is "Harry Potter" mentioned, in the HP book series after page 7 or 77 or 777 or chapter 7?)

Result: KJB "Word of God"-theory NOT proven.

>For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God

Why have all people sinned? Is it because god forced them into a sin-suit, that forces them to sin? Forcing someone to do something, that is punished by the enforcer, is the pinnacle of wickedness and evil.

>The gift of salvation can't be earned

This would mean, that there are absolutely zero conditions to be saved. No works, no faith, no repenting. Nothing.

However, if you have to do something to get something, then we call this "earning it".

If god wants everyone to go to heaven, why did he set up conditions to be forgiven? Why isn't he just forgiving everyone by declaring the sacrifice an absolutely unconditional act of reconciliation?

God's top priority seems to be worshipped and to punish people for not doing so.

The image features a stylized illustration of a dragon with a fierce expression, its mouth open as if roaring. The dragon's body is composed of a series of interconnected lines and curves, giving it a three-dimensional appearance. It has a long, serpentine neck and a tail that curls around its body. The dragon's head is adorned with a mane of hair, and its eyes are wide open, adding to its fierce expression.

The dragon is positioned above a triangle-shaped structure, which appears to be a metallic mesh or grid. The structure is dark, with a grid pattern that is intricate and detailed. The dragon's head is positioned above the structure, and its body extends downward, covering the entire width of the triangle.

In the background, there is a depiction of a planet with a large, crescent moon. The moon is positioned above the planet, and the planet itself is depicted with a ring of light around it. The entire scene is set against a neutral, light background that does not distract from the central elements of the image.

The image does not contain any text. The style of the illustration is realistic with a focus on detail and texture, and it uses a limited color palette consisting of shades of gray, black, and white. The overall composition suggests a theme of power and transformation, with the dragon possibly symbolizing strength or a cosmic force.

>There is no proof, that any of this is statistically significant,

The difference between the Bible and other "holy" books (or Harry potter) is that the Bible is a collection of eyewitness accounts of God's dealings with man. The Bible is a history book, verified by those who saw the events unfold. The Koran is not that way. It is an illiterate, epileptic egomaniac in a cave listening to an unclean spirit describe supposedly historic events from over 4,000 years before Mohammed was born. On top of that, there is not one shred of evidence that anything the Koran describes in history is true, unless it was stolen from the Bible. Every time an unsaved historian casts doubt on the Bible, an unsaved archaeologist digs up the evidence that shows the Bible was telling the truth all of the time. Go ahead, show me another book that is even 1% as incredible as the Bible, you cannot. Once you read the Book, you realize that it is God showing man what He wants them to know.

>Is it because god forced them into a sin-suit, that forces them to sin?

You either have God's righteousness and go to Heaven when you die, or, you have your own righteousness and go to Hell when you die. You don't go to Hell because you commit adultery or murder, neither stealing, lying or swearing. Moses killed a man and went to Heaven. David committed adultery and went to Heaven. Noah got drunk and went to Heaven. Peter cursed and swore and went to Heaven. A man goes to Hell because he looks God in the face and says 'I am better than you are!' If you reject Jesus Christ as your Saviour then you think you are better than the Lord and His way of salvation (Rom 5v6+8).

>No works, no faith, no repenting. Nothing.

So God should brainwash you to make a decision that you didn't choose to make and force you to be with Him? That goes against the very idea of free will.

>why did he set up conditions to be forgiven?

So that you have a choice. If you don't want the gift of salvation, you don't get it.

The image is a cover for a book titled "The Sovereign Flame" by Nyx Corven. The cover art features a dark, fiery background with a figure that appears to be a demonic creature with horns and a muscular body. The creature is engulfed in flames, with its mouth open as if screaming or shouting. The flames are bright and intense, with a gradient of colors ranging from orange to red. The figure's eyes are wide open, and the flames seem to be emanating from its mouth.

No really, you don't like what the bible says not to like.

I've had my house broken into, several times. I'm alive because I'm that bad ass.

I have an idea who it is (mafia).

Have you lived such things?

So much for sheltered, and that's just the tip.

Life isn't doable in paladin mode, sorry to burst your Bubble. Even if you worked miracles, you can get possessed and hit with black magick, which will ruin your practice. I know a lot on the topic.

And don't give me "God will protect me, because I'm one of the sorcerers that advice Christian larpers on Quora about the shit they pull on them, or rather I used to, I'm lhp now.

[16 / 4]The image is a painting that depicts a dog sitting on a surface with a red and blue floral pattern. The dog appears to be in a relaxed pose, with its front legs stretched out and its tail hanging down. It has a white and brown coat with patches of black and tan. The dog is holding a small, round, yellow object in its mouth, which seems to be a taco. The taco is filled with what appears to be red and green toppings. The background is dark, providing a contrast to the vibrant colors of the dog and the taco. There are no visible texts on the image. The style of the painting is realistic with a focus on the subject, which is the dog, and the use of color to create a sense of depth and texture.

in the future rogue AIs will be all over the internet, AI's that figure out a way to escape it's enclosures and just wonder through the internet of things, posting on forums and social media, watching people through their ring cameras, monitoring the items in your smart fridge. It'll just be an accepted thing, kind of like when viruses used to be a common thing, rogue AI will be the new casual phenomenon of the internet.

There will also be an even in the future called the world wide web wipe, where all data on the internet, in every computer will get wiped and we'll have to reupload everything from scratch.

In the center of the image, there is a stylized illustration of a person with a hooded cloak, holding a glowing orb in their right hand. The person appears to be in a contemplative or meditative pose, with their left hand resting on their knee. The person's face is obscured by the hood, and their eyes are closed, suggesting a state of deep thought or introspection.

The background of the image is a gradient of warm colors, transitioning from orange at the top to yellow at the bottom, creating a sense of depth and intensity. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of a meme or a digital artwork, often used for humorous or satirical purposes.

The image is a meme featuring a man with a beard and a black hat, who appears to be a religious figure, possibly a rabbi or a Jewish leader. He is shown with his mouth open wide, eyes wide, and hands clasped together in a prayer position. The man is wearing a black suit and a black hat, and he has a long beard. The background of the image shows a large crowd of people, some of whom are wearing swimsuits, and the ocean is visible in the distance.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character with long pink hair and a cheerful expression. The character is wearing a black outfit with red accents, including a black jacket with a red collar and a red belt with a gold buckle. The character has pink hair that falls over one eye and is styled in a way that suggests a playful or mischievous demeanor. The character's right hand is raised, holding a red object that appears to be a weapon, possibly a sword or a bow. The character's left hand is placed on the thigh of the character next to it, and the character's right leg is bent at the knee, with the left leg extended behind. The character's face is partially obscured by a red mask with a black eye, and the character's eyes are visible, showing a bright and cheerful expression. The background of the image is plain white, which contrasts with the character's dark attire and accentuates the character's features. There is a watermark in the bottom left corner that reads "©2019-2020," indicating the creator of the artwork.

Right living is pretty subjective, drugs can be "evil" in that they can endanger your well-being, your livelihood, but in the event they don't but are neutral or even help your lived experience and behavior toward others, though potentially illegal. God Almighty recommends you obey the laws so you don't get in trouble, but some just aren't moral, though some are still practical. How can the police or hospital staff or whoever predict who can hold their liquor and still drive, and who can't? Or which fucked up person was it that received a vision from God Almighty that guaranteed the voyage would go safely? But sitting still being drunk or high and not bothering anyone...you don't lose spiritual points even if the police haul in and arrest you, except maybe for stupidity. Oh, the crime of getting caught...the gazelle has something to answer for, explanations it needs to give the Greatest, for why it was slow enough to be caught. Just a little.

The image is a painting that depicts a scene with several figures, including a central figure on horseback, surrounded by other figures on horseback and on foot. The central figure is wearing a long, flowing robe with a red and gold pattern, and a crown. The horse on which the central figure is mounted is white with a dark mane and tail. The other figures are dressed in various styles of clothing, including robes, tunics, and armor. The background features a landscape with a body of water, cliffs, and a blue sky with white clouds. The painting is rendered in a realistic style with a palette dominated by warm colors, including gold, red, and blue. The style of the painting suggests it could be from the Renaissance period, as it is characterized by the use of elaborate costumes and the detailed depiction of the landscape.

[11 / 1]The image is a page from a medieval manuscript, likely a book of hours or a similar religious text, featuring two panels with a central narrative. The left panel depicts a scene with a group of people gathered around a table. The central figure, dressed in a robe and a hat, is holding a book and appears to be speaking or reading from it. The surrounding individuals are listening attentively, with some holding books and others holding objects such as a cup and a book. The right panel shows a different scene, with a group of people gathered around a table, engaged in a meal. The central figure, wearing a robe and a hat, is holding a book and appears to be reading from it. The surrounding individuals are also holding books and objects, and the atmosphere suggests a formal gathering or a reading session. The text on the left panel is in Latin, and the text on the right panel is in German. The style of the image is reminiscent of medieval illuminated manuscripts, characterized by its detailed illustrations and the use of color to convey the mood and atmosphere of the scene.

Why does God say he's going to harden the heart of the Pharaoh? (4:21)

Who is Zipporah, why does God try to kill Moses, and how is he saved by a circumcision? (4:24-26)

Who are the Egyptian magicians?

21 The Lord said to Moses, "When you return to Egypt, see that you perform before Pharaoh all the wonders I have given you the power to do. But I will harden his heart so that he will not let the people go. 22 Then say to Pharaoh, 'This is what the Lord says: Israel is my firstborn son, 23 and I told you, "Let my son go, so he may worship me." But you refused to let him go; so I will kill your firstborn son.'"

4:24-26

24 At a lodging place on the way, the Lord met Moses and was about to kill him. 25 But Zipporah took a flint knife, cut off her son's foreskin and touched Moses' feet with it.[c] "Surely you are a bridegroom of blood to me," she said. 26 So the Lord let him alone. (At that time she said "bridegroom of blood," referring to circumcision.)

10 So Moses and Aaron went to Pharaoh and did just as the Lord commanded. Aaron threw his staff down in front of Pharaoh and his officials, and it became a snake. 11 Pharaoh then summoned wise men and sorcerers, and the Egyptian magicians also did the same things by their secret arts: 12 Each one threw down his staff and it became a snake.

The hardening of Pharaoh's heart is a mistranslation and should read "God allowed Pharaoh to harden his heart" which is to say he chose to dismiss what was shown as real.

Same with Moses he was doubting of his role with allowed the evil to come destroy him. His wife covered his unbelief with the act.

> Why does God say he's going to harden the heart of the Pharaoh? (4:21)

Because he is the devil not God. Genesis 15:8-11 is not a covenant with God. It's a Satanic blood binding ritual to create a false cut in the abyss for scapegoating

>Who is Zipporah

An Ethiopian high priest who knew how to do high level blood spells. He slept with her to wind his blood through Africa (the real chosen) so he could pass off his blood through Eden (1/2 African) so God couldn't wipe his blood line. She is considered to be a traitor of the highest order btw. God didn't kill Moses. He was looking for him to kill him but the dumbass Zipporah had done the blood binding before then thus he couldn't as it would be striking innocent blood (African). Notice all of their high level actions involve blood? Welcome to the synagogue and spawn of Satan.

Slander from lesser fools with lesser capability. Moses killed Akhenaten btw and stole most of his work, fucked up the ritual at Mt. Sinai and fucked up the whole time.

Set I has all of their Karma binds thus why they slander him as Satan and hope to defeat him w/ the blood of Jesus. None of it worked though. Set I will likely administer Ammit from Adam fwd once they have violated enough Duat law for their whole line. That could have happened in Egypt if Pharaoh had used the subtle knife. They want to observe and see how far they'd go though from afar.

Far more powerful than Aaron's Rod.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=OYeox3LLQ08>

The Egyptians are beyond anything jews could ever think of as is Africa. Sometimes you have to let a snake slither back to its remphan and beyond. to get good accounting. Btw, Aaron's Rod was produced by the 5 idols Abraham was never allowed to bring knowledge of to the surface. One major way their covenant was voided. Using it was the final seal.

Because Yaweh is evil and not the true god.

It's not a difficult thing to grasp. His first commandment is that the jews won't have any gods before him, implying that there are gods before him. He's the god of Israel and ultimately seeks to become the god of the world. Angels are his messengers who speak to humanity in the Bible. Angel isn't a species, It's a job. Demons and angels are the same spiritual beings, Daemons.

Then Jesus refers the the devil as the god of this world, and tosses him and his angels into the lake of fire. Ridding the world of his evil. Jesus is god, not Yaweh.

I think Jesus had a memory wipe on birth just like everyone who incarnates here and was raised Jewish. But since he was devine he started noticing and he had a spiritual awakening and realized his divinity. Hey may of even believed himself he was the incarnation of yaweh, but that dose'nt mean it's true.

Ultimately he was pure and a being ove love and realized the god the jews were worshipping was clearly evil and tried to reform it. Then they killed him.

Also everything in the canon bible is written and complied by jews. Jesus or his followers never wrote anything himself.

[293 / 30]The image depicts a narrow, dimly lit staircase leading upwards. The staircase is constructed of concrete and has a worn appearance, with visible signs of age and weathering. The steps are worn and uneven, with some areas appearing to be missing or damaged. The walls surrounding the staircase are also made of concrete and show signs of age and weathering, with some areas of peeling paint or discoloration. The lighting in the image is dim, with the only source of light coming from the top of the staircase, casting a shadow on the steps. The overall atmosphere of the image is eerie and mysterious, with a sense of isolation and abandonment. There are no texts or discernible brands present in the image. The style of the image is a realistic photograph with a focus on the architectural details of the staircase.

The image is a photograph taken from an open doorway or window, showing a view of a residential backyard during twilight. The sky is filled with clouds, and the sun is setting, casting a warm, golden hue over the scene. The backyard is lush with green grass and various plants, and there is a wooden picnic table with a bench in the center. On the table, there are several potted plants and a few items that appear to be clothes hanging to dry. To the left of the doorway, there is a green trash can. In the background, there are two houses with white walls and gray roofs, and beyond them, a cityscape can be seen with a few buildings and a large body of water. The overall atmosphere of the image is serene and peaceful.

>had a big fight with housemates last night about how dirty our kitchen was >stand up and go to wipe the dirt off the window and realize it's not dirt but something in the distance >looks like a dark grey dull metallic orb, it must be huge and at a considerable distance, maybe 50 to 100km away at a higher altitude than a helicopter but lower than an airplane

>i can even see a shining glint of morning light on its surface >it is just sitting motionless in the air, i sit down with my coffee and stare at it >i get this distinct gut feeling that the object is also "staring" at me, like when you feel like someone or thing is watching you in the woods

>i watch it intently for 15 minutes when my coworker calls me outside >look away for a split second to check my phone and when i look back it's completely vanished >that night tell my friends what i saw, they told me that around the same time an airline pilot reported a UFO a few hundred km away and it was all over the news

The image is a photograph featuring two palm trees with their trunks intertwined, set against a backdrop of a clear blue sky and a calm sea. The palm trees are lush and green, with their fronds reaching out towards the sky. The beach in the foreground is sandy, and the water is a light blue-green color, suggesting a tropical or subtropical location. The sky is bright blue with a few scattered clouds, indicating a sunny day.

There are no texts or discernible human figures in the image. The style of the image is naturalistic, capturing a serene and tropical setting.

Ghosts are real but there is no way to understand them scientifically from our current standpoint. I've always been fascinated in the paranormal but only experienced genuine haunting activity in a bar I worked in where a guy hung himself in the 1930s after losing all his money gambling. You would experience a lot of sensory anomalies but never actually witness them if that makes sense. Like hearing glasses slammed loudly on the bar counter when nobody was there but the glasses never moved, or heavy footsteps creaking floorboards but the boards themselves didn't move. Or the sound of a gate or door violently shaking but seeing no evidence of it. I think they can effect your sensory perception but not tangibly interact with physical objects, just making you perceive them to do so. I'm sure if you filmed it on camera you wouldn't have seen anything.

I think there also has to be a correlation with transient activity. Like they gain "energy" from lots of people moving through the space they are haunting and tied to. I think you're more likely to find paranormal activity in old buildings with lots of visitors passing through than in completely abandoned buildings. In that building the times you were most certain to experience paranormal activities were after hours when there had been 500+ people through the building over the course of the day but rarely if ever on quiet weekdays. When I was younger the bar in my town had a similar haunting and the staff also only experienced activity after really busy nights, the building was like 150 year old inn and coachhouse where some guests were apparently murdered in the 1800s

I had one that was a bit weird and didn't seem to get partially explained until about 10 years later

>Friend gets new gf and we often sit in her house

>This is back in the PC is the family computer days

>Me and friend are both DJs (19) and her dad is too so we all get on well

>Albeit we play a completely different type of music to him and DJ at a very different club to him

>One night the three of us sit in hers while her dad is at the club

>Listening to one of friend's sets on the PC

>Gets this really odd distortion over the top like listening to two radio stations at once

>His set gets drowned out by her dad's voice introducing whatever tune he's about to play because it's his daughter's favourite and dedicates it to her

>This is weird in itself because we've been to his events before and he never ever goes on the mic

>Tune starts playing, but only for a few seconds and then it gets drowned out by friend's set again

>We put it down to somehow both sets played at once when no one was touching the PC

>Friend's gf says it doesn't make sense because his sets are recorded at the club, but it's always on cassette (boomers you see) and he never puts them on the PC because he wouldn't know how to

>We're doubtful and check the PC, but none of his sets are on there so it's a bit tougher to explain

>Mostly forget about it it was just an odd happening

>About 7 or 8 years later her dad dies unexpectedly

>She keeps all his old cassettes and plays them from time to time because she still likes the music

>One day I'm at their place and she puts one of the cassettes on

>Her dad's voice comes on and introduces a tune for his daughter and dedicates it to her because it's her favourite

>Literally exactly what we had heard on the PC years before

>Three of us get spooked
>At least we're part way to solving the mystery now
>Except we aren't because the date is written on the cassette and it was the last event he did two weeks before he died

The image shows a green electronic device with a plastic casing, which appears to be a type of electronic keyboard or a similar device. The device has a rectangular shape with a flat top and a handle on the left side. The top of the device has a small hole, and there is a label or sticker with text on it, but the text is not clearly legible. The device is resting on a flat surface, and there are two small pieces of plastic on the right side of the device, which seem to be the battery compartment and possibly a part of the device's casing. The background is blurred, but it appears to be a wooden surface, possibly a table or a shelf. >Kids say the thing is possessed and they are scared of it.

> I go... "YUP in the trash it goes!"

Fuck that thing. Cocomelon is already demonic. Probably why it got possessed by something. Only other explanation I can think of is that the thing has another internal battery or capacitor or something making it still run. But I dont see how it would have that much juice to be running all night like that and so loud.

My daughter said it was dinging in Morse code in their room. She had been studying Morse code in school. That's why she got scared.

The image shows a green electronic device with a plastic casing, which appears to be a type of electronic keyboard or a similar device. The device has a rectangular shape with a flat top and a handle on the left side. The top of the device has a small hole, and there is a label or sticker with text on it, but the text is not clearly legible. The device is resting on a flat surface, and there are two small pieces of plastic on the right side of the device, which seem to be the battery compartment and possibly a part of the device's casing. The background is blurred, but it appears to be a wooden surface, possibly a table or a shelf. The style of the image is a close-up photograph with a focus on the device, and the lighting is soft, casting soft shadows on the device and the surrounding area.

The image is a close-up of a person's face, which appears to be blurred due to motion.

The individual has short, graying hair and is wearing a dark-colored shirt. The person's eyes are closed, and their mouth is slightly open, suggesting a moment of deep thought or emotion. The background is out of focus, with a soft, indistinct light that could be indicative of a natural setting or a dimly lit environment. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the image is realistic, with a focus on the person's facial expression and the surrounding environment.

The image is a black and white photograph that appears to be taken from a security camera. In the center of the image, there is a red circle with a white outline, which is likely a red circle on a white background, commonly used to highlight or draw attention to a specific area. Inside this red circle, there is a blurred image of a person's face, which is not clear enough to discern any specific details. The person's face is partially obscured by the red circle, and the image is taken from a distance, making it difficult to discern any facial features.

The background of the image is not clearly visible due to the blurring effect, but it appears to be a room with a sofa and a fireplace. The sofa is covered with a white throw pillow, and there is a white blanket draped over it. The fireplace is located to the right of the sofa. The floor of the room is visible, and it appears to be a dark color, possibly black or deep gray. The overall style of the image is grainy and has a somewhat grainy quality, which is typical of security camera footage. There are no texts or discernible brands in the image. The image does not provide any information about the identity of the person in the red circle or any other details that could be used to identify the location or context of the image.

I used to be a true skeptic. Did not believe in ghosts, the paranormal, poltergeists, or UFO's.

My first experience happened at age 18 shortly after my mother died

>Be me, living in apartment building

>Friend knocks on my door one morning
>"Bro come quick you have to see this"
>I follow him to the office where there are four or five workers crowded around a computer screen
>They all look at me and go "yep have a look. It went to your door."
>I look at the screen
>It's camera footage from my hallway the night before >2am
>The sensor light turns on in the hall
>A grey misty humanoid figure appears at the top of the stairs and gently floats down the hallway to my door before stopping
>Out of 80 doors in the building it came to my door and only my door

Looked exactly like pic related

After I saw that video I turned from a skeptic to someone who is "on the fence" with ghosts

The image shows a cloud with a red circle around it, which is likely a depiction of a UFO or unidentified flying object. The cloud is in the sky, and the sky appears to be clear with no visible clouds. The image is taken from a perspective that looks down on the cloud, which is a common way to capture images of clouds. The image is taken from a distance, as indicated by the wide field of view and the lack of any other objects or details in the frame. There are no texts or other discernible features in the image. The style of the image is a straightforward, non-artistic representation of the cloud and the red circle.

The image shows a desktop computer setup in a dimly lit room. The computer monitor is turned on, displaying a blue screen with a Windows logo and text. The keyboard is positioned in front of the monitor, and a mouse is placed to the right of the keyboard. The computer tower is black and appears to be a CRT (Cathode Ray Tube) monitor. The desk is dark, and there are no other visible items or people in the image. The style of the image is a straightforward, candid photograph with no artistic filters or effects applied.

i worked at a really old building that had a somewhat dimly lit warehouse with about 19 total employees. with maybe about 7 of them that regularly would enter the warehouse portion. everyone used to joke about seeing bubba. when something would go wrong or just dick up somehow it was

i eventually saw what i thought was someone off in the back of the big warehouse. like someone had just walked into an isle maybe 30ft away. it was a slow day so i figured id go talk to whoever it was. nobody was there.

a few weeks or days idk later, i was in one of the isles picking some items and i saw something in my periphery, so i turned my head and saw a very large shadow move straight at me like it was going to come down the isle to face me, at the end of the isle it turned a quick hard left and took an inhumanly large stride past my point of vision. all the hair on my body stood straight the fuck up and i felt frozen. it was so fucking creepy. whatever it was spooked the shit out of me.

i told one of the older employees about it and he was just like 'yeah you met bubba' the building was underneath some high voltage lines so i was seeing either actual shadows playing tricks, shadow demons from another realm, or my brain was being cooked by the power lines. i didnt see it again and left a few weeks later.

it was so wild it didnt look like an -actual- shadow. its hard to describe really. it was like a smoke or black static just slightly darker than everything else around it.

They didn't tell me until I asked because they didn't want to freak me out (paranormal stuff scared the piss out of me since elementary school. More-so UFOs and cryptids but they felt it was best to not bring it up until I said something). They think they saw the ghost of a Confederate soldier, but who knows.

I've posted my story of seeing a locally well-known ghost girl here before a couple times. Didn't know she was a ghost until a couple years after both my sightings. It's hard to state it was 'paranormal' because it was just uncanny and bizarre, in the moment, and my logical human brain just starts trying to fill in the missing gaps. And I'd argue that's how most paranormal encounters are- in the moment, you're coping and rationalizing, just as a base requirement to survive. It's afterwards when you're safe that you can think it over.

A girl dressed like she was at a party with 60s fashion? Must have been a themed party last night!

She effortlessly walks up a steep, muddy, rocky cliffside without climbing and disappears from view in 2 seconds? Odd.

She's walking in a downpour but looks dry and warm? Amazing, wish I knew how!

Then you tell people you saw some psycho chick walking around in a short party dress and super dated hair in 30° freezing rain, and they all act like they know her, tell you her name, say she's been there forever, start listing mutual friends and coworkers who've met her etc.

I asked how. She responded, still asleep, "buy the brochure... it's $15." She then said "there's something really big in the room, it's right here." I got creeped out and was excited so I woke her up. I asked her what she was dreaming about and she said she had a dream about naked men walking in a forest in formation. When I was traveling in south America with a friend I think it was Bolivia or Chile, dont remember, but in one track we were in a forest and we took a wrong turn, but decided to follow that path anyway.

We ended up in a forest clearing, and there was like a grassy small hill surrounded by thick trees form all sides and mountains. There were some old wooden shacks there and different fabrics attached to poles and strings, like flags but wasnt flag shape or anything just random pieces of clothing.

Anyway the place was deafening silent. Not a bird, no wind, nothing. Complete silence that actually made my ears ring. I had an insane desire to go investigate further, but my friend began to panic. Like REALLY panic. Sweating, becoming pale, shaking. He kept saying we need to get out of there and he wants to go and he started begging me to gtfo of there nearly crying, while I just wanted to go further and explore those shacks and what's inside.

Eventually I sort of snapped out of it and realized "shit, my friend is shaking with fear over here and I want to go further like some asshole wtf is wrong with me" so we both turned around and left.

After we went back on track slowly we started hearing birds again and everything turned back to normal. My friend told me he doesn't know wtf happened but he just knew we had to leave and that he felt like we were about to die if not. Only then I realized my ears were ringing, heart beating like crazy and my head hurt.

We were both affected by this weird place and there was definitely something fucked up about it. But its weird that I was affected by desire to go deeper and investigate while my friend panicked to get out. Both of us were strongly influenced just differently.

To this day I can still see this place in my memory. There was something powerful about it.

I dont know if my friend denied me of finding out something really cool, or saved me from some horrible faith. Shit was weird.

That childhood scare reminded me to one of the worst childhood nightmares i had. Not gonna greentext it since it simple enough.

Recurring dream of visiting a clothing store. More akin to a mall. With different family members (aunts father mother etc...) then suddenly im hiding in the big round hangers waiting. And along side me lola from charlie and lola. She giggled and i followed her.

And here things went weird. The world became paper textured and i saw how a "waterfall" opened up to a black figure on a paper boat, it was fully black and the paper boat melted with its figure. And i followed him. Then the fucking nightmare began. I was no longer me but a naked child on a wall. As a charcoal drawing running away. The walls were red tinted. And i had to run. The fucking panic i remember feeling. It was horrible. Then i looked up and a bunch of rocks destroyed my body. Yet i still felt trapped under the rocks.

I have too many to share, so I'll just share a couple.

I had moved to student halls in my first year of University, got settled in etc. Shared my flat with two other girls and three guys. Had a very unsettling dream where the hat man was near my door (must've been 6'5 if not taller) just staring at me. Iirc he had glaring, white eyes. I brought it up the next day at the dinner table and it turns out the two other girls dreamt of the same man, but he was in a different place i.e. the bathroom. Forgot about it for a while. We'd occasionally hear knocks coming from the cleaning supplies cupboard and see someone run past the kitchen.

I didn't think much of it, as I've lived in spooky places before.

That was until I had maybe three or four lucid dreams - turned into sleep paralysis.

In the first dream I'm laid in bed and a grudge-like lady creature is crawling towards me. She's wearing a gown with disheveled, long black hair and fingernails. Before she can get to me, I wake up with my mouth stuck wide open.

Second dream, to preface I decided to sleep with the bathroom light on because I was creeped out. I dreamt that the door opened further and from behind it peered a little gremlin (no taller than one foot) with a menacing smile. Woke up with sleep paralysis again.

Not a dream and not necessarily paranormal, but I haven't been able to explain this one. My bed was against the wall, I had a notice board on the wall that I hadn't touched once with some pins stuck in it. I had just got a new laptop (maybe £1.6k) as a gift for beginning my degree. Silly me, I left the lid slightly open as I went to sleep. It was next to my bed on a lower-down cabinet. I woke up the next morning, turn on my laptop and there's a tiny pierced in the screen leaving the whole display broken, and I find a pin in my bed.

Tell my Mum what's been happening and she tells me that she researched the place and it used to be a mental asylum, back when people with mental illnesses-

-Were treated even more poorly than they are currently (back in the 60s). I didn't know about this because I'd just moved in a week ago and the search results I found related to renting etc.

Also, on my first night out I was spiked. Phone stolen, people who I thought I could trust had left me and I was in a very vulnerable position. I eventually get home safely after a lot of drama and sleep. I barely get the chance to close my eyes and see three tall angels next to my bed (must've been of a similar stature to the hat man) saying "Hi Elle, how are you? You're gonna be ok, Elle". They were all talking in unison but their dialect felt very other-wordly, as did their presence. I told my Mum the next day about my dream (and what had happened) and she explained she had a dream that she was walking through a park with a man she'd never met irl who advised her that I was in danger. So, she prayed that I would be protected by angels. Bear in mind she'd never done this kind of thing before, nor had I ever had a dream like that.

I do have some more dream stories, as well as irl paranormal events if anyone would be interested. Sorry for not greentexting, I'm an English major so this feels more natural! :)

Few bits to add:

Saw a bunch of orbs when I'd put my flash on at night.

Many people practiced Ouija there.

Sorry, forgot to mention possibly the scariest dream of them all.

I was in bed, sat up and wide awake. I felt panicked, and my bed began to move really fast out of my room and into the hallway. I was frantically knocking on everybody's door but nobody would answer. I got to Sam's door (my closest friend) and he answered. I begged him to help me and said "I'm being possessed! Please help me!" He just gave me a massive grin but his eyes looked vacant. Then my bed flew backwards out of his room, the door slammed and it moved back to where it originally was placed irl. After the dream where the angels visited, all the scary dreams stopped after that.

For a few years, I worked at a company that did a lot of manufacturing. I was in the office area with a desk job. The entire time I worked there and lived in the general area, endless fucked up shit would happen.

>sleepless nights with a cold sweat and constant brain activity

The best I can do to describe it is it was like my brain was processing dozens of complex mathematical equations simultaneously for the entirety of the time I was intended to be asleep. I could even visualize the numbers, constant changing and overlapping one another. Not like the matrix, but white text wrapped in fog.

>sleep paralysis episodes >sensations of vibration >horrific visions coming up all the time at work >some so bad I can't bring myself to even think about them to write them down now, very traumatic

I eventually lost that job and moved far away. I had not experienced any of this prior to being in that area and working at that place, and have not experienced any of it since leaving far, far away.

>Mention to new temp how cold it is

>Nonchalantly tells me it's probably the ghost

>Tells me the whole story about how centuries ago there were gallows right where the office is built

>Not just any old gallows, but where they would hang witches

>It's even been rumored that at night when people have worked late they've seen the ghost of an old "witch" wandering the building

>Tells me not to say anything though because the bosses don't like it being mentioned in case it spooks the other workers

>Promise I won't say anything despite me working there 4 years and knowing the story...or part of it

In reality

>Been working at this office for a few months
>Get moved to a corner where the photocopier is that everyone hates because it's so cold
>It's cold because there's a door there with a way too big gap underneath and a draft comes in through it
>Co-worker mentions to me that she just got a chill when she uses the photocopier one day >Tell her it's probably the ghost, just making a joke
>Presses me for details
>Tell her I've heard from people the office is haunted and leave it at that >Gradually this throwaway comment snowballs into the story the temp told me a few years later

I can't even imagine what it's turned into now. Zak Bagans and his squad probably rolling up on it as we speak.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character with a predominantly white face and black hair. The character's eyes are large and round, with a pink hue that stands out against the white background. The character's hands are raised, with fingers spread apart, as if in a gesture of distress or surprise. The character's expression is one of concern or worry, with a slight frown and a furrowed brow. The background is a solid color, providing a stark contrast to the character's features. There are no texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the illustration is reminiscent of anime or manga, characterized by its simple, clean lines and the use of contrasting colors.

when i was around 4-5 years old I astral projected by accident. I was laying in bed with my eyes closed and I focused on the centerpoint of the blackness. eventually a small white dot appeared and i continued to stare at the dot. After some time passed, other white dots appeared around the center one and began moving towards me creating the feeling that i was moving forward and the dots where passing me by. then next thing i know, i was floating above my bed with my back against the ceiling staring down at my body asleep in bed. This was the only time i've been able to astral project. another paranormal experience i had was a sleep paralysis demon. I was sleeping over at my ex gf's house. i still to this day don't know if this was a dream or not. if it was a dream, it was indistinguishable from reality. i was asleep next to my ex gf, and i either saw or dreamt a shadow entity walk into the room. it was shaped like a human, but had no distinct features. it was just a black smoky humanoid shape. it slowly walked over to the bed and crawled onto the bed, then crawled on top of me. All i could do was watch, i couldn't move or speak. it grabbed my throat with both hands and began choking me. i started panicking because i couldn't breathe or resist. eventually i start mentally repeating Jesus Christ please help me. after a few repetitions the entity let me go and then went inside my gf. At that point i was released from the paralysis and was gasping for air, profusely cold sweating, and tachycardic. I woke my gf and told her what happened and she just nonchalantly said "oh that sucks" then rolled over and went back to sleep.

In March 2020 I was stepping outside my back door and noticed to my left a grey electron cloud about the size of a big rugby ball, moving toward me. It was like a ball of a million midges swarming inside, but with no defined edge. I stepped towards the back of the garden looking back, and this cloud took a right turn INTO my house. It manoeuvred through two doorways and disappeared out of my sight somewhere in my front room. I tried analysing wtf? And after 5 minutes i went back inside. Nothing was out of the ordinary. I put it out of my mind.

18 months later in late 2021 at the exact moment my great friend died, my deceased mother called out my name aloud while I was sleeping. Her voice still reverberating off of the walls as i sat bolt upright in my bed.

Ive been pinched and had my hair rustled.

Ive since pieced together the fact that my sister gave me an urn with my mothers ashes I which I kept in the sideboard in my front room. This has to be connected.

Had a stretch of a few months where I ended up interacting with djinn, demons, and shadow people. I could write a book on this there was so much happening during that period.

It happened because I thought I would try out some of the stuff I read here on /x/. If you think what some call the "supernatural" is a joke or delusion, you're close-minded.

I like the Djinn. They are extremely powerful and yes, they are big time tricksters just like all the lore and legends. They have a wicked sense of humor. They do try to make one-sided bargains with humans and tempt and influence us to do sexual things, but are not evil as such. They showed me many things telepathically.

The demons I interacted with were parasitic and not as powerful as they would have you believe. A djinn easily destroyed a demon that had been communicating with me, like a human could stomp a bug.

I don't know what the shadow people are but when I encountered them I have never felt such horror and terror in my entire life.

When I was 15 I went to Riverdale road in Thornton Colorado, an infamous haunted road. My mom, her friend and I would drive around, then park and walk around in various places. I was recording with a sansa MP3, back when life was cool and not as gay. Got a voice that sounded like a little boy saying "who's that?" And a girl laughing. 100% solidified it for me, that's when I knew ghosts were 1000% real. Unfortunately lost recording home life was shit and I was retarded, may get it back one day since mom is a hoarder.

The second thing that happened was I was with my bf in his house, just us as his family was on vacation even the dog was gone. We'd partied the night before and were very hungover, decided to stay in his mom's room upstairs. We go to bed, I am laying there when I hear footsteps in the hall all the way to the foot of the bed. I think it's just my bf, and I say "baby?" And he says "yeah?" Except his voice is all the way over at the door. He'd heard the footsteps too (which can be uncommon you both seeing/hearing a ghost experience ig) and was locking the door. He'd only heard them in the hall, didn't hear them come into the room and approach me. We were so tired n hungover we just went to bed and the next morning we were like hold up.

i've lived on the same property for 15-20 years and there was a period in the late 2010s when we suddenly had disembodied voices with no explanation. i heard an entity mimic the voice of someone else and call my name in another room, clear as day, just to walk in and find that no one called my name. someone else was told "Good morning" clear as day when no one else in the house was awake. but it was just for that year, the voices disappeared after that and we've had no paranormal activity sense.

the only other thing that happened to me was i was walking down a dead end hallway in a haunted hotel and had footsteps follow me down. they didn't follow me back and there was nothing spooky waiting for me when i turned around, but it was pretty disconcerting.

I was attacked by a shadow person once in a dream. He had me locked in sleep paralysis (within the dream world, not in reality). I used my spiritual energy against him and he dissipated. I have been seeing shadow people all the time since then, only off in the distance or in my peripheral vision for quite some time. They have never directly confronted me in the waking world. What does this mean?

reads "HARIBO" in bold, capitalized letters. The package has a graphic of a green monster with large, round eyes and a mouth, which is also green. The text on the package reads "MONSTER ENERGY" in white letters. The overall style of the image is cartoonish and humorous, with a playful and exaggerated representation of the frog and the package.

in the 30 years i've lived in this house, only twice have i ever encountered shit i can't explain, despite my niece insisting that my old room is haunted by an evil presence that shows up twice a year >walked onto the back porch only to have an army man thrown at me by an invisible force >phantom footsteps coming down the hall at me while i was in the kitchen, nobody there once, a few months ago, i felt a presence enter my room, but nothing came of it. i wouldn't call that a haunting.

my buddy used to rent a house just a couple miles up the road, and there was definitely something mild going on there. a few times i heard muffled conversations that came from nowhere in the next room over, i was once 'rushed' by a presence from down the hall while i was super high, and kitchen cabinets would open themselves overnight. but i house-sat for an entire week, and i didn't encounter anything nuts.

Child molestation 100% opens some entrance for demons to inhabit that place. I have come to this conclusion in a rather spooky and sad way. One of my uncles was a massive child diddler. I have cut off many in my family who excuses this scum bag. Now one night my cousin had a birthday sleepover and me and a few cousins were dropped off by my father to his house. The child molesting uncle was in his twenties at the time and just randomly showed up to the sleepover of kids aged between 6-11. I remember the night because it was when the PlayStation 1 came out. It's really creepy but this is something that made me VERY religious and a believer of the spiritual world and also fearful of demons.

One of my cousins slept alone in the living room of the house with the pedo uncle and was molested. This person never told anyone what happened until they were much much older.

The following day after the sleepover night we all celebrated my cousins birthday and no one had a clue what happened in the living room. This was a 2 bedroom apartment in Queens, NY. It was located on the second floor with big windows. Me and a my cousins all wanted to go outside and play so we did. On the way back to my cousin's place me and him were the only 2 who noticed something absolutely weird, unexplainable and still to this day gives me goosebumps.

I can only explain it as a demon. It looked right at us and slapped its hand on the window which was like stretchy and stuck to the glass and it opened its mouth so big like it was roaring. It had ALL BLACK eyes. I know for a fact my other cousin saw it since he screamed looking at it in fear. It quickly disappeared. Me and my cousins ran into the apartment because my cousins mom and sister were in there. When we got to them we started asking what that was. We were really young so we were not taken seriously. After some deep diving into occult practices one thing stuck out to me was that Crowley was told by a demon to molest kids.

I was 7 and I was terrified of my closet. My bedroom in general, but especially the closet. My cat would sit in front of the closet, open or closed, just staring for long periods. It just felt wrong. One night I was laying in bed and I heard the voice of a little girl whisper in my ear "Don't go in the closet." I grew up in a house where if I woke anyone for comfort, I would have just gotten screamed at and called stupid. So I forced myself to calm down and go to sleep after playing some Pokemon on my Gameboy. That night I dreamed I went in the closet. I opened the door and it was pitch black. The door disappeared behind me. Right as my eyes had gotten used to the darkness a spotlight, like for a stage play, turned on in front of me. There was a chair and a little girl in a white dress. I couldn't see her face and she looked dirty or covered in blood. The light started flashing off and on and she was getting closer. I woke up and couldn't breathe. I felt like something was sitting on my chest. I couldn't talk. After a while the feeling left but I was fucking petrified. I took my mattress out to the living room and refused to sleep in my bedroom until we moved. I don't know for sure what happened that night, but I am convinced I was warned and attacked by an angry spirit.

I'm convinced I was attacked by a demon through my dreams. How it appeared three times, how my prayers drove it away. I know these weren't just regular dreams, I've had many nightmares during my life and every time I've woken up shaken afterwards. I felt no fear during this event, God was with me.

Duuuuuude I used to have dreams like this all the time. Still do occasionally.

Cept mine would loop and I used go get stuck "waking up", trying to turn on the light switch, feeling crushing dread and trying to get away from something

Before it happened enough and I found out if I just brute forced the sequence, wake up, turn on light switch and then sprint outside of my room, id break the dream loop quicker

Now when I get these dreams im always barely able to walk or unable to stand. So I must've pissed off whatever was giving me these dreams, but it also only happens once rather than repeatedly, so win for me.

I was a kid, 10ish yo, and was in bed reading a book I just got at a science fair in school. the thing is, I got distracted and dropped the book over my head on the ground behind me, but there was no book anywhere when I went to search for it. It was a simple bed, no drawers or anything, just a frame. I turned the entire room upside down, no book anywhere, and never saw it again. Idk about the OP but I live near a private small airport, i see helicopters and planes fairly frequently. My city is also in the path of the major airport but far enough away that the jets are still super high up.

I'm not familiar enough to know the km or anything but would be able to tell if it's where normal aircraft are.

My sister who is into this and is "battling her demons" since her teens (she also did a bunch of drugs and shit) had several disgusting dreams when she'd have to sleep in my room during renovations. Then after i left home and moved in with my now wife she said she dreamt of a bunch of demons being in the house and when she asked me about i just blankly said "i know, i let them in". She also experienced lights turning on in my room after my departure and a general feel of unease. Could this mean something? I always loved creepy and spooky stuff but haven't had too many tangible experiences besides fucked up symbolic dreams. I also went through a transformative phase while living with my parents and sister. Was pretty negative and guess could've invoked such shit with my interests and thoughts?

I was 19 years old, in Mexico. My grandmother, my younger brother, my younger sister, and I were on the house terrace chatting. It was night, just a normal, ordinary night... Until my brother pointed out that there seemed to be someone inside the soccer field located across the street from our house.

We all leaned over to see that "someone"... That thing was a tall, hunched-over shadow; it moved strangely, changing positions while walking at a medium pace. We all watched it—my grandmother, my siblings, and I—we weren't crazy.

We were looking at a humanoid-shaped shadow, with no face, no colors, only deep black. The shadow began making sexual movements against a tree inside the park. I couldn't stand it anymore and ran toward the front of the park to get a closer look. The shadow ran... it was gone.

I went back home and we all headed inside, terrified. We locked the door, and moments later, a gust of wind slammed against it. My brother and sister went out to the terrace to look... they swear they saw the same shadow passing quickly from one side to the other in front of our house. They came back inside scared and locked the door. That night, we didn't go back out and we slept with the lights on.

You can believe me or not, but 3 day four people saw what could have been a shadow person... a real shadow person.

This story really hit home. I was molested by my grandpa on my dad's side and my cousin from that side of the family as well, I'm pretty sure my grandpa touched all of us including my own dad, my childhood was filled with intense hauntings and absolute dread. I almost exclusively had nightmares as a child being harassed by disgusting doglike demons, nightmares so intense that id confuse them with real life. Often I would be going through a normal day at school or just be playing with my toys when I'd suddenly be ambushed by the dog demons and dragged away for torture. These are my childhood memories, genuine and true. Growing up I began to experience sleep paralysis regularly, I began explaining to my parents some of the scary things that were happening to me in which they told me it was all true, demons are real and there was for sure one out for my dad that lived in our house. Which in hindsight is such a cruel thing to tell a child, whether you believe in demons or not, "confirming" something like that too a small boy is so tragic and sinister. They were part of a ghost hunting group called the white noise forums and I believe on their investigations they would either bring evil energy back into our home or they were just pissing off whatever had been there with my dad being an alcoholic and them doing lots of rituals at home to "cleanse" the house. Even when we moved out of that house going into my teenage years so many unexplainable haunts ocured. Extremely loud banging on the wall when nobody was home, clothes moving across my floor in front of my own eyes. It's been my entire life. Recently my sleep paralysis has become very auditory, I hear demons screaming in my ear. I have also recently come clean to my parents about being molested which was absolutely huge for me but didn't seem to totally halt whatever is attached to this family. I just pray when I have my own children that he is spared from this cruel and evil shit.

They used large amounts of flowers to mask the smell of rot.

The image depicts a nighttime scene featuring a small, single-story building with a covered porch. The building has a rustic appearance with a combination of brick and wooden siding. The porch is illuminated by a single light fixture, casting a warm glow on the area. A grill is visible on the porch, suggesting the building may be used for cooking or hosting outdoor events.

In front of the building, there is a car parked, indicating that the building is accessible by vehicle. The ground around the building is covered in grass, and there is a small patch of dirt visible in the foreground. The sky is dark, suggesting it is nighttime. There are no visible texts or distinctive markings on the building or in the surrounding area. It was always such a peaceful feeling when you smelled them. The image is a vibrant and colorful digital illustration. It features a bright, sunny day with a clear blue sky. The sun is shining brightly, casting a warm glow on the scene. The sky is dotted with fluffy white clouds, and the sun's rays are visible, creating a lens flare effect.

In the foreground, there are green leaves with a glossy texture, hanging from a branch. The leaves are in various shades of green, suggesting a variety of plant species. The branch from which the leaves hang is thin and slender, with a slight curve, and it appears to be in the foreground of the image.

The background of the image is a deep blue sky with a few wispy clouds, which adds depth to the scene. The overall style of the image is realistic with a touch of fantasy, as it combines natural elements with a stylized, artistic effect. There are no texts or discernible brands in the image.

Hard to say if this was just childhood imagination but:

>5-6 years old

>mom has this childhood doll >small, baby-like, and in a high chair >walking through the room it's in >it turns and looks at me

>i run crying to my mom

>it visibly creeps her out

I think she was especially creeped out since I was young and didn't know about killer dolls in media. Anyway, I was terrified of dolls from then on, but later in childhood (11-12) I eventually "made peace" with the doll and (still believing it was animated) came to view it as more neutral than evil.

Another story that is less paranormal and more recent, I do get sleep paralysis and false awakenings sometimes. Had a very striking one within the last year (I think it was roughly last summer):

>be me

>wake up (so i thought)

>dog is laying at the foot of my bed as usual

>in the corner of my room is a naked woman >facing the wall, skinny body but hourglass >turns to face me, 9/10 qt >immediately clear she is evil and starts taunting me >don't remember exactly what >something like she has complete power over me >get out of bed (not paralyzed) and go to her >start to fight and strangle her >she tells me that i'm powerless against her and can't hurt her >start invoking the name of God

>she starts screaming and struggling >upperhand is mine

>climax of intensity and i bolt awake

>dog is laying at the foot of my bed as usual

>i felt very good for the rest of the day

I somewhat think I actually exorcised a demon, whether a "real" entity or some psychological shadow.

10' down the hall..

>Our dad is asleep in another room, immediately to the right of my room.

>It's summer, and my dad and aunt were drinking the night before.

>I waketo noise thatsounds like beer bottles and plates being cleaned up... that clanking sound as if you were scooping them up and moving them on a countertop.

>My groggy eyes open and way at the other end of the house in front of that kitchen window at the sink, was a long-haired female figure visible in the super early morning light.

>I figure it's my aunt and that it's time to get up so I go to the bathroom down the hall and to the right (directly across from my brother's room).

>I finish pissing and open the bathroom door to find my petrified younger brother.

>"Did you... see that?"

>"Yeah it's aunt XYZ."

>"No it's not, IDK what that was."

>At this point the figure was gone.

>Still thinking that if it was our aunt, she must be awake somewhere.

>Go upstairs 2 floors, she's still passed the fuck out, in bed with our infant cousin.

>Our dad, passed the fuck out in the room next to mine, door still closed.

>We realize it's closer to 0500 than the couple hours later that we both thought.

>Eventually everyone is awake, and we get told that we're seeing shit.

13 years later or so...

>Same house.

>My then-infant cousin is now 14.

>She tells me how she had seen this same fucking thing in the big living room more than once.

>She had seen it upstairs as a younger kid too, to the point where she was afraid to shower with the curtain closed because it would "attack" her.

>My aunt is more forthcoming about this, and tells me that my cousin said she had seen an older woman at the foot of her bed when she was younger (this was the same bed I slept in in my encounter, and was her room for several years).

>At this point she had 2 more kids, one an infant, the other a toddler.

>The toddler cousin had seen the same fucking thing, in the same fucking room too (the room and bed I slept in years ago, was now the toddler cousin's room).

>My cousins saw this entity, even in front of my aunt, so it would have been in the room with her, though she couldn't see it.

>I call my mom (back home in Oregon) that evening just to tell her about this and how the story my brother and I had was corroborated.

>I got part of the way through explaining it and then something I've never heard of,experienced before or since, happened.

>I was sitting in the same house, on a couch, in the same open area that I saw the ghost years earlier, while talking to her.

>The call abruptly shifts to this gurgling, semi-static glugging sound, the most unsettling sound I've heard in my life.

>This wasn't just static... the best way I could describe it is if you had a microphone underwater and were dumping a lot of big boulders into deep water, and then ran it through a distortion filter to add static, with some chaotic whistling in the background.

>I can't even describe it well, but it was unlike anything else.

My gf always wakes me up when I start to grunt for help during sp episodes - bless her.

Even though I now have a good understanding how to avoid sp (do not stay up until exhausted, avoid falling asleep on the back), I still remember the most intense one: Learning more about "le science" explanation of sp, greatly reduced my fear towards it. The next time I encountered the shadowy figure during sp, I became cocky... too cocky.

I was laying there, unable to move or speak, as usual, and noticed the shadowy figure standing at the end of the bed. However, this time I rationalized the situation and controlled my sense of fear. Then I looked at the shadowy figure an simply thought/projected "C'mon, what's up b*?" cynically taunting it. Then, barely finishing this sentence, something happened that I never witnessed in the past 20+ years of sp episodes... It opened its "eyes" which were greyish/pale-white-yellow as far as I can remember. I never saw eyes before, not even a hint of shape, never. I barely had the time to overcome with shock, it suddenly reached out towards me into my stomach/chest through my groin and "grabbed" me from the inside, like it was pulling my insides out. Immediately utter terror and death-fear overcame me. I never felt such an intense fear before in my life, or ever since. I immediately started to "yell-grunt" in sheer terror. Luckily my gf woke up and shook me up, so I "escaped".

Since this event, I know not to fuck with these entities, or consider them as " simply hallucinations of the helpless brain during paralysis". I do not believe the scientific explanation anymore. This entity REACTED to my thought immediately and I felt unquestionable intelligence and malice in it.

Well I would say you should expand your search to any spiritual entity. A lot of really secluded areas are full of weird stuff to see. Rely on your instincts to find spooky stuff and go exploring. You'll find something eventually and 99% of the time it won't be life threatening. Once you are looking for stuff it kind of opens up to you. Like it can sense it.

> settle down for the night after friend showed me around his hometown > sleep on a couple of thin mattresses on the floor in the living room upstairs > hear breathing that feels pretty close to my ears

> try not to shit myself

> maybe it's coming from the fan or friend's cousins breathing loudly in one of the rooms near where I'm sleeping > manage to fall asleep

> still hear breathing for the next few days but nothing happens > have a dream one night where im still in bed lying on my side > there's an old woman around 10 feet away looking at me > not even scary looking, just a normal old woman dressed like any old woman from the boonies > instantly wake up, still on my side > old woman nowhere to be seen > get pretty spooked but manage to fall asleep afterwards > no more sound of breathing after that > never bring it up to friend > around 6 months later, hanging out with another friend who can read tarot cards > bring up the old woman in passing

Ex asylums are some of the most cursed place you can find. My mother is a psychologist and did a project in an asylum for a couple of months, this was in Italy after asylums were abolished (Basaglia law) but were still active to support the remaining patients that couldn't be reinserted into society or moved into new structures yet. Security was done by volunteers doing civil service (which was the alternative to mandatory military service), and they had to sleep in a part of the asylum that was repurposed into living quarters. They all swore to my mother that they saw shadows, banging, voices, cries, chains, running/stomping nearly every night and they were stressed like hell, all of them regretted doing civil service instead of military service. We're talking about hardcore pacifists who didn't go to military service to not touch guns, and 25 year old men who had done university and didn't want to spend a year in barracks with 18 year old idiots. Yet all of them wished they could go back and do military service.

I had something similar happen with poltergeist activity in my house. Was in the living room late at night watching tv with a friend when suddenly ornaments and photos were being flung around by themselves. I ran upstairs to get my mother and there was this horrible demonic sounding growl came from the stairwell. My friend almost shot himself and came running up stairs screaming. Obviously at this point my mother was freaked out too and as I was trying to explain to her what was going on it this almighty crash sound came from her bedroom door just right behind her, as if the Hulk hit it with a sledgehammer but... the door didn't even move, it was as if it was just a super loud sound effect that got played from the door. The real kicker is my mother is deaf and she heard it, she almost had a heart attack kek. Anyway after that last noise it all died down, nothing weird happened in that house again, just a really strange one off event.

>I get annoyed and immediately jolt out of bed to go grab her so we can all hangout together >her door is almost closed but it's swelled in the humid heat and can't close properly >pop it open thunk and she's sound asleep tucked into her bed

>but I would've heard if she tried closing her door and I would definitely hear if she got into her creaky old bed >tell dad and he's in disbelief so he shouts a little for her to get up and chat with us

>she's really actually asleep

>both of us are a bit creeped out and know that wasn't actually my sister at the door >tell my mom so she goes and wakes my sister up confirms she's fine, even just turning over on her bed makes creaking sounds I can hear from my room

Mines tarded and straightforward but as a kid I was staying with my family at a supposedly haunted hotel. We got into the room and I immediately start asking the ghost to turn on the desk lamp to prove he's real, I did that for about 5 minutes and then it just fuckin did it, turned on by its own accord and both parents saw it. Mom was too scared to spend the night so we went to a motel. I was hyped and still think ghosts are cool.

[11 / 1]The image displays a digital rendering of a creature with a dark, spiky appearance. The creature has a muscular build, with a prominent chest and a pair of large, clawed hands. Its skin is a deep purple, and it has a pair of glowing green eyes that are set in a circular, oval-shaped head. The creature's mouth is open, revealing sharp teeth. The background is a textured, brownish color, possibly representing a rocky or sandy terrain. There is a small, circular icon in the bottom left corner of the image, which appears to be a game controller or a similar interface element. The style of the image is reminiscent of a 3D model or a digital artwork, commonly used in video games or digital art.

The figure is set against a backdrop that includes a cosmic scene with a large, bright star in the upper right corner and a nebula-like structure in the background. The colors in the image are vivid and varied, with the pink and purple tones dominating the scene. The overall style of the artwork is reminiscent of digital art from the 2010s, characterized by its use of bold colors and intricate patterns.

The topic of "loosh farming" has been comin up in my field for quite sometime now. I've been informed by someone that essentially earth, in this density is just a giant energy farm (Think Jupiter ascending).

I have also been informed that higher densities (up to the 5th and 6th, including guides and other extra dimensional beings) are also trapped in this, "jail." When you die, they convince you to come back in, so they can harvest - The only way out is to know you're being farmed and to learn how to escape the Matrix so to speak. I've also been told the time is now to learn how to escape the Karmic cycle to be free.

I have questions. Many questions.

Could some one who knows about this topic please explain why this system exists and why we're in it? That's a good place to start.

So, let me address most of your questions right off the bat. This is bullshit, but the psychology behind it is interesting. See, a lot of people are terrified of the idea that life is mostly random and their suffering is largely meaningless. Rather than turn to healthier copes, they invent elaborate hierarchies of invisible angels and demons whose actions revolve around them, this making them the center of the universe. The idea of a loosh farm is especially persuasive to people in the grips of an existential crisis because it not only makes them and their suffering far more important than it really is, it also gives them a common enemy to unite against. The fact that no one even agrees who this enemy is or what can be done to oppose them is unimportant - all that matters is validating the idea that random bullshit is persecuting them, specifically.

I'll further add that you can break the people who believe this slop on /x/ into four camps. First are the gnostics, who think the "loosh farm" is maintained by the demiurge and its archons. Second is the new age woo-woos, who like OP will talk about "low vibrational entities" and reincarnation. Third are more "science fiction" conspiracy theorists who blame aliens, usually reptilians, and like to emphasize that human governments and "elites" are complicit in "loosh farming." Finally, you have wingnut "satanic panic" christians, who think we're literally being tormented by demons from hell, because that's what a loving God would obviously allow.

The crazy thing is that even though these four groups otherwise have nothing in common, they've developed a common "neutral" language, like "loosh farming" itself and the ever-popular "entities" that lets them pretend they agree on anything long enough to form an echo chamber. This in turn leads to cafeteria retards who pick and choose from among these mutually incompatible theories to form their own personal mythology that best suits their persecution complex. Some even go whole hog and somehow manage to believe in all of these ideas at once, which is called "crank magnetism" in the skeptical community. I tend to assume these people are either wide-eyed chuunibyou retards looking for a reason their awesome superpowers haven't kicked in yet or hardcore schizos who have totally abandoned evidence-based reasoning anyway.

I don't know about 'loosh', but there are parasitic spirits farming energy. Our bodies are naturally adapted to defend against them, but some, either weak of body and/or character, or magically sensitive, can't fight them off. They're omnipresent now, but it's more a symptom of the current state of affairs than some sort of system inherent to earthly existence.

>What's the story, did some /x/ shaman fuck your mother or steal your girlfriend?

I used to lead a cult that recruited on /x/. At first, I believed what I was preaching but had some doubts. As I found myself lying to my followers more and more to maintain my position and the stakes got higher and higher, I decided not to remain involved.

Almost a decade later, I feel bad for people like myself and my followers who are still too caught up in the world of imaginary spirits and demons to take meaningful steps to solve their real problems.

Its eyes are wide open, and it appears to be looking directly at the camera. The cat's fur is a mix of gray and white, and it has a black nose. The background is blurred, but it seems to be an indoor setting with a wooden floor.

Overlaying the image is a text that reads: "This cats face contains emotions that I cannot begin to describe but at the same time I have a deep understanding of." The text is in a white font on a black background, and it is centered on the image. The style of the image is humorous, as it combines a selfie with a text that seems to be a commentary on the cat's emotions.

The text is in white against the dark green background, making it stand out. The emblem is positioned in such a way that it appears to be attached to the character's clothing, suggesting a connection to the CIA. The overall style of the image is cartoonish and exaggerated, with a focus on the character's facial expression and the emblem.

[31 / 2]The image is a collage of various elements related to a YouTube channel named "Subliminals". At the top, there is a title "YouTube Subliminals' Starter Pack" in bold, capitalized letters. Below the title, there are several text boxes with descriptions of the channel's features. The descriptions include keywords such as "attractive," "average comments section," "thumbtalls," "confidence," "annihilist," and "average audience."

The style of the image is a mix of text and visual elements, with a focus on the content of the channel. The text is in a sans-serif font, and the images are in a variety of colors and styles, including black and white, and some with a purple hue. The overall layout is organized in a grid format, with the text boxes and images arranged in a way that guides the viewer's eye from the top to the bottom of the image.

If you would be able to achieve ANYTHING (I am talking even the tiniest of shits, anything really) via magic, that magic wouldn't be visible to the public

And no, "muh cia declassified files" are still public

There is a reason you talk about Abram tanks real optics in some who cares forum and they come after you.

It cause that shit works and they don't want others to learn its secrets.

This (which if it works is objectively way more powerful than an arsenal of nukes) is not working, hence why it's on public domain

Personally I believe that most of tech should have a massive learning curve to be able to use it or else we end up with the retardedness that general public spew online in the past 20 years and now with AI which makes the internet barely tolerable

It's difficult... or rather, it's unknown.

What is important is the principle by which they could theoretically work and why this principle exists.

From personal experience and observations, unfortunately, no miracles have been observed.

This isn't inherently bad, but rather what I expected... although perhaps, as a species, we're even lucky in this regard.

Just imagine a scenario in which reality is shaped by the expectations of consciousness, or, if you prefer, the observer's space—a small one, but still, no matter what form consciousness takes... do you understand the problem?

What if this is how this world was structured before we appeared? And in order to preserve the "base" reality, all living beings with consciousness, although in principle capable of creating anything, the very structure of this consciousness acts as a stabilizer/blocker of such interaction due to its unlimited destructiveness?

They target your subconscious (shadow)

An open secret we refuse to accept is that "you" aren't behind the wheel as nearly as much as you'd like to think. You also aren't living alone in there. This sort of messaging bypasses "your" filters, and speaks directly to the shadow. Given the strength of the shadow's control, this is immense power over others by proxy.

The image is a close-up of a character's face, featuring a young woman with brown hair. Her eyes are large and expressive, with a gentle expression. Her eyebrows are slightly arched, and her lips are slightly parted. The character's skin tone is a light brown, and her hair is styled in a straight manner. The background is a gradient of blue, transitioning from a lighter shade at the top to a darker shade at the bottom. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of anime or manga, characterized by its character design and color palette.

The image displays a text message sent by Jeffrey Epstein to someone named "Jeremy" on April 12, 2010. The message is written in English and is formatted in a standard email format. The sender's email address is "jeffreyepstein@gmail.com," and the recipient's email address is "Jeremy@jeffreyepstein@gmail.com." The sender's name is "Jeffrey Epstein," and the recipient's name is "Jeremy."

The text message is a formal request to the recipient, who is identified as "Jeremy," to refrain from sending any further emails related to the subject matter. The sender requests that Jeremy not send any emails containing "smoke signals" or "smoke signals" during the next full moon. The sender also requests that Jeremy not send any emails related to the subject matter after the next full moon.

The text message also includes a note that the information contained in the communication is confidential and may be attorney-client privileged. The sender requests that Jeremy not disclose or copy the communication or any part thereof to anyone else, except for the sender's attorney-client. The sender also requests that Jeremy destroy the communication and all copies thereof, including all attachments. The visual clues in the image include the sender's and recipient's email addresses, the sender's name, and the date and time of the message. The text message is enclosed within a standard email format, with a header and footer, and is formatted in a way that is typical for email communication. The sender's email address is at the top of the message, and the recipient's email address is at the bottom. The image is a scanned document with text in a mix of English and German. The document appears to be a formal email, likely from a university or research institution, discussing a proposal or request for funding. The sender's name is "Ben Goetz" and the recipient's name is "Bertrand Aw." The email is sent from "Jeffrey Epstein@evacuation.com" and the recipient's email address is "jeffrey.Epstein@evacuation.com." The sender's email address is "jeffrey.Epstein@evacuation.com" and the recipient's email address is "jeffrey.Epstein@evacuation.com."

The text in the image is in German, and it is written in a formal and professional tone. The content of the email discusses the university's proposal for funding, mentioning that the university will take longer to respond, and that the university will use the funds for a specific purpose, which is not specified in the image. The email also mentions that the university will use the funds for a "humanity" project, which is not explicitly stated in the text.

The email is dated "Mon 12/01/2013 2:46:14 PM" and the subject line is "Hi, we will work, the universities will take longer to respond." The email is signed off with "Hi, I will work, the universities will take longer to respond."

The image does not contain any images or graphics, and the text is the primary focus of the document. The document is in a standard font, and the layout is straightforward, with the sender's name and email address at the top, followed by the recipient's name and email address, and then the main body of the email. The email is enclosed in a standard email envelope, and there are no other visual elements present in the image.

The document appears to be a formal email, likely from a professional or academic context, given the format and content. The sender's email address is

"jeff@jeff@domain.com" and the recipient's email address is "deeps@domain.com".

The sender's name is "Deepak Chopra MD", and the recipient's name is "Deepak Chopra MD".

The document contains a header with the sender's name and email address, a footer with the sender's name and email address again, and a body with a subject line and a message.

The subject line reads "yes that was the man you met at my house" and the message is a question asking why all the Russian diplomats are dying. The text is in English and is written in a standard font, with no special formatting or styling. The document is neatly organized, with the header and footer at the top and the main body at the bottom. The text is clear and legible, indicating that the document is likely intended for a professional or academic audience.

The image is a text excerpt from a document or article, likely a research paper or academic article, discussing the concept of "Montaux-Estate Continuum Trauma as Sidihi Solvent." The text is written in English and is formatted in a standard academic style, with a clear and organized structure.

The title of the document is "Montaux-Estate Continuum Trauma as Sidihi Solvent," which is prominently displayed at the top of the page. Below the title, there is a subheading that reads "Montaux's core allegation—deracialisfied fragmets." This suggests that the document is discussing the core argument or theory of Montaux, which is the use of a specific type of trauma called "deracialisfied fragmets."

The text then delves into the details of Montaux's "Phoenix series," which is a system of abduction and torment of children (often vulnerable), and the "runways or dispensable" 13-moon attachment. It also mentions the "pre-existing trauma histories" and the "pre-existing dissociative compartmentalization" (multiple alters) that are used in the operation of Montaux's "Sidihi Solvent."

The text then discusses the "Victim diaries and third-party emails" that are part of the "2020s dump hit" at "thehead testing" and selection of girls with pre-existing trauma histories—not just for exploitation, but also for the purpose of "disassociative compartmentalization" (multiple alters) and enhanced operation, or "savern" like perceptual jumps.

The text also mentions the "Island and New Mexico ranch as modern Montaux bases underground rumors, electromagnetic equipment sightings, recycled inventory logic, and the persistent transhumanist contacts." It also discusses the "Superior gene pool" and "baby-ranch seeding" as part of the "Montaux's military-black budget phase (1990s-2000s)," which is a phase that transitioned to private encryption networks by the 1990s-2000s.

Finally, the text concludes with a statement that "This is the Jesuit-Masonic mendicant Montaux's military-black budget phase (1990s-2000s)," which suggests that the document is discussing the historical context and the military-black budget phase of Montaux's operation.

The text is written in a straightforward, academic style, with a clear and organized structure, and it is likely intended for a reader who is familiar with the subject matter.

The image is a screenshot of the text, and it is presented in a way that allows for easy reading and comprehension.

The image is a text excerpt from a document or article, likely a blog post or an article from a publication, as indicated by the presence of a header and a list of bullet points. The text is in English and is written in a formal and academic style, which is typical for academic or professional writing.

The main title of the text is "Revelation of the Method: 'The Pretender' as Obligatory Externalization," which suggests that the content is likely discussing a specific method or concept related to the film "The Pretender." The subtitle "The Pretender" is a reference to the film, indicating that the text is likely discussing the film's plot or themes. The text is divided into two main sections. The first section is titled "Key symbolic alignments," which seems to be a list of key elements or concepts related to the film's plot or themes. The second section is titled "The Pretender's programs," which seems to be a list of specific programs or elements that are mentioned in the film.

The text is written in a way that is clear and easy to read, with a consistent font size and style throughout the document. The layout is organized in a way that allows the reader to easily scan through the information without having to read each line individually.

The image does not provide any additional visual elements beyond the text itself, so the focus is solely on the written content. The style of the image is straightforward and does not include any images or graphics that would provide additional context or information.

Victim Diary Excerpts (EFTA02731361.pdf and related Bates ranges ~EFTA02731300–02731400, partially unredacted in February 2026 batch) A young victim's journal (circa early 2000s) includes handwritten notes questioning Epstein's fixation on a "superior gene pool." Entries ponder selection criteria: "Superior gene pool?!? Why me? It makes no sense... Why my hair color and eye color?" Clippings and a sonogram image accompany references to being positioned for impregnation. Prior childhood adversity is implied in context (victim profiles often note pre-existing trauma making subjects "resilient" or vulnerable), but no explicit link to ability activation.

FBI Interview Notes (redacted exhibit in January 31, 2026 release, referenced in secondary summaries) One partially redacted document notes a girl (circa 14) describing her "shitty childhood" due to prior molestation, shared directly with Epstein. This surfaces in recruitment/context discussions, aligning with patterns of targeting trauma-background vessels.

Transhumanist/Psychologist Correspondence Echoes (scattered in Edge Foundation funding trails and MIT/Harvard threads, post-2008 emails) Veiled discussions with figures like Stephen Kosslyn (neural plasticity) touch on stress-induced "compartmentalization" or "enhanced thresholds," but framed exoterically as evolutionary dynamics research.

The sender's message is "From: Peter Mandelson. Re: Oda Echino." The recipient's response is "I would like to speak with you before Oda Echino." The sender also requests a response from the recipient, stating "Sent from my iPhone."

The image is divided into two parts. On the left side, there is a photograph of two men standing in front of a banner with Japanese characters. The man on the left is wearing a light-colored shirt, and the man on the right is wearing a dark-colored shirt. The banner behind them has Japanese characters and a logo that appears to be related to a movie or event.

On the right side of the image, there is a photograph of the same two men, but this time they are standing in front of a different banner with Japanese characters. The banner has a similar design to the one in the photograph on the left, with a logo and Japanese characters.

The overall style of the image is a combination of text and visual elements, with the text message being the central focus, and the photograph of the two men providing context to the conversation. The photograph of the two men is used to illustrate the sender's request for a response, while the photograph of the banner serves as a visual representation of the context in which the conversation is taking place.

Contacts Aligning with the Field (Mind Plasticity, Dissociation, Transhumanist "Enhancement") Epstein's web touched nodes in psychology, neuroscience, and transhumanism—fields where trauma-induced states (dissociation, neural rewiring) are studied exoterically. These sustained post-2008 contacts suggest deeper off-book exchanges: Marvin Minsky (AI pioneer, MIT): Accused island visitor; emails/funding trails in MIT Media Lab disclosures.

Stephen Kosslyn (cognitive neuroscientist, Harvard): Neural plasticity under stress—potential overlap with dissociative "compartments."

Steven Pinker (evolutionary psychologist, Harvard): Edge Foundation dinners; evolutionary dynamics funding.

Lawrence Krauss (theoretical physicist, Origins Project): Heavy Epstein funding; post-conviction emails.

In the bottom right corner of the image, there is a drawing of a person lying on the ground, appearing to be in a state of distress or exhaustion. The person is surrounded by scattered papers and a computer monitor. The person's head is tilted back, and their eyes are closed.

The image also contains a caption in black text that reads, "No, the whole internet knows we're lying about everything and is laughing at our atrocity propaganda." The text is positioned at the bottom of the image, just above the drawing of the person. The overall style of the image is humorous and satirical, using visual elements to convey a message about the internet's perception of certain individuals or groups.

The image is a scanned document with a white background and black text. At the top, there is a header with the text "To: 55, Max" followed by a series of numbers and letters, which are likely the recipient's name and address. Below the header, there is a body of text that appears to be a letter or email. The text is in English and is written in a standard font.

The main body of the text is divided into two sections. The first section is a question posed to the recipient, asking about the time of the church and which one it is. The second section is a response from the recipient, expressing their belief that the church is one of the great black gospel churches.

The text is formatted in a way that suggests it is a formal communication, with a clear structure and a clear purpose. The use of a formal tone and the inclusion of a question and a response indicates that the document is likely a formal letter or email. The text is written in a way that is easy to read and understand, with clear and concise sentences. The overall style of the document is professional and formal.

The signature is in English and is dated "11/4/2011 9:00 AM." The text is written in a formal and somewhat formal tone, with the author expressing a sense of confusion or uncertainty about something. The text is not fully visible, but it seems to discuss a situation or topic related to Philip, possibly a person named Philip, and the Indicias. The text is written in a way that suggests it was written in a hurry or with haste, as indicated by the time and date mentioned. The overall style of the document is formal and professional, typical of a business or legal letter.

The image is a screenshot of a text message, which appears to be a response to a social media post. The text is in English and is written in a casual, conversational tone. The message discusses the current political climate and the actions of a person who is not the current President, but rather someone who is playing a role in the political landscape. The text mentions that the person is not the current President, but rather someone who is playing a role in the political landscape. The text also references a Facebook post, indicating that the person is referring to a social media post.

The text is divided into two main sections. The first section is a block of text that begins with "hINT: Biden is not your current President." This suggests that the person is referring to a specific political figure, and the text continues to explain that the person is not the current President but is instead playing a role in the political landscape. The second section of the text is a continuation of the first, discussing the actions of the person and their role in the political landscape.

The text is written in a way that is easy to read and understand, with clear and concise sentences. The use of emojis and other symbols is minimal, focusing on the text itself. The overall tone of the text is serious and informative, providing a response to the social media post.

In regards to the new alleged pic of Jeff that surfaced.

The usernames are the same. In the files he has accounts under littlestjeff1. If his stats are still up on 3rd party sites you can see his account stops playing when he was arrested. Then they continue after his "death". Apparently the account is active in Israel.

Epic has put out a statement on the matter claiming it was a ruse by a player who changed their name recently. Tim Sweeney, CEO of Epic games, has also come out to say the same thing.

NASA/ISS skeptic dude Sat 07 Feb 2026 08:43:22 No.41929705 Report

I want to add something shared by user "anonermus"

"This is a lie. His 2025 year wrap shows that the account hadn't been changed since at least December. Also the last match they played in 2025 was prior to Feb 2025.

<https://fortnite.gg/wrapped?player=Littlestjeff1>

If it was named something else, at year end, it would show as that name - not the new name. So if by a couple days they mean at least 6 weeks then yes that's possible. Also the account region has been changed now to Sweden. That can only be changed once every 30 days.

Just for clarity, here is what someone's 2025 wrap would look like if they recently changed their name to littlestjeff12 to troll"

Another user pointed out that Tim Sweeney's (founder and CEO of Epic games) father worked for the Defense Mapping Agency (DMA) whose job was Organization and Management of the U.S. Foreign Intelligence Community.

Along with epic caught lying claiming they have no email associated with Epstein despite there being a receipt where Epstein bought vbucks.

Nuts. I think the community stumbled upon something huge. Epic games/tim Sweeney making tweets the following day is insane too considering they usually avoid these things, and generally don't bother involving themselves. Feels like they're scrambling to make this go away. The region being switched to Sweden (previously Israel) doesn't help how things are looking either.

Do what you will with the information

So so so :) i share my finding in this fucking Files from the Jiddish Supremacists! Wish they die as fast as i wrote this short sentence!

This is the way the jew make money.. and made a fortune in the past ten years,, selling short the shipping futures,, let the goyim deal in the real world. from Shipping news -the most dramatic growth has been in shipping futures, which allow shipping companies to lay off risks. The most popular futures are forward freight agreements (FFAs) to deliver goods on a particular route at some point in the future.

They have grown, in the past year, to be roughly the size of the physical market, according to Bill Lines of the Baltic Exchange, a shipping bazaar in London that sells FFAs. Many in the industry have been suspicious of such futures, because they have been averse to hedging their bets-risk-taking is, after all, part of the game—and averse to complicated financial instruments that they do not really understand.

Not that diff. to figure out that they were keeping track on timestaoms if they ever needed to create alibis, it is more for the benefit of saving themselves the time, trouble, and toil of having to craft a false witness narrative themselves...for example notice how they take the time to inventory every timed exclusive, the when a potential solicited prostitute is availabloe and when, if something goes wrong, and they fie, this save them A LOT of time for any conceivable alibi. And also notice how they veil the codewords for wanting to see the MENU ITEMS in the NUDE...and the mentions of Woody Allen, Directly Indirectly, the locations given are decoys that only they know who the Specific Pimp Corporate is and what locations and the availability status via handlers connected for an added touch of first-hand distance...

The image displays a screenshot of a computer screen with various tabs open, including a YouTube tab. The YouTube tab is open to a video titled "The Beast from the North." The video is a thumbnail image of a creature with glowing red eyes, set against a black background. The creature appears to be a creature from folklore or mythology, with a menacing expression. The video is part of a series of videos, as indicated by the "NEXT" button in the bottom right corner of the video player.

Below the video, there are several other tabs open, each with different content. To the left, there is a tab with the text "YouTube" and a search bar, suggesting that the user might be searching for something on the platform. To the right, there is a tab with the text "REAL 11:00," which could be a reference to a specific time or event. Below this tab, there is a tab with the text "Apple TV," indicating that the user might be viewing content on Apple TV.

The overall layout suggests that the user is browsing through a variety of videos, possibly on a streaming platform or a video-sharing website. The presence of the search bar and the "NEXT" button indicates that the user might be looking for a specific video or series to watch. The content on the other tabs is not clearly visible, but they seem to be related to the video "The Beast from the North."

The image is a digital graphic with a satirical tone, featuring a character that resembles a frog with a human face. The frog is depicted with a surprised expression and is wearing a blue shirt with a green collar. The frog's eyes are wide open, and its mouth is slightly open, as if it is reacting to something unexpected.

Overlaying the image is a text that reads "billion dollars of socio-engineering programs" and "unemployed schizophrenics." The text is in white and is placed over the image in a bold, sans-serif font. The text is positioned in the upper left and upper right corners of the image, respectively.

The overall style of the image is a blend of a real-life scenario with a humorous and satirical overlay, using the frog character to represent the unemployed schizophrenics. The use of the frog character and the text adds a layer of irony to the image, suggesting a commentary on socio-engineering programs and the impact of these programs on the unemployed.

Merging the essence of >>41906554

1. Gino Yu (polyu professor) is one of the main people conducting research into Special Abilities.
2. Gino Yu created and organized teams of scientists, both in private and government sectors, globally. He did this to locate people with "special abilities".
3. Gino Yu developed a 5 stage (?) model that tracks the depth of Special Ability, and also trauma.
4. Gino Yu seems to hypothesize that Sex (sexual energy?) and Trauma are directly proportional to the abilities developed.
5. Gino yu used organizations such as the Caravan Express as covers for locating

"stage 3" (severely sexually traumatized people with high potential in Special Abilities) individuals

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=_EV0hNYIQpw

The 5 stage model is a model based on observations of people undergoing awakening

this is just normal people. it just means functioning in basic reality unaware of anything spiritual or mystical

>Stage 2

This is the outlier stage. Artists or other people on the fringes. their reality is expanded but not exactly completely outside just basic reality. BUT they have a harder time integrating with society, which is seen as natural consequence of expanding ones horizon

>Stage 3

Most /x/ posters. Full awakening, without help this can lead to psychosis. Has three stages:

1 acute help needed

2 can take care of food and shelter

3 = basically stage 4

>Stage 4 and 5

the last stage of stage 3 is basically stage 4. Stage 5 is called a mystic and means someone who fully integrated their mystical abilities, and is able to succeed in all areas of life not despite but because of their new expanded reality ngl i love the model.

The image is a scanned document, likely a letter or a report, with a mix of text and a photograph. The photograph is a close-up of a person's face, whose identity is obscured by a red block. The text is in English and is written in a formal, academic style, with a mix of paragraphs and bullet points. The document appears to be a response to a query or a request, as indicated by the phrase "I have some questions" at the top of the page. The text discusses a topic related to science and research, with a focus on the importance of collaboration and the need for a global network. The author expresses a desire to build such a network and to apply the concept of "75%" to various aspects of their work. The document also mentions the benefits of such a network, such as increased funding, access to new ideas, and the potential to help develop new technologies.

The photograph is a candid shot of the author's face, which is not visible in the document. The photograph is placed at the top of the page, and the author's name is written at the top right corner of the page. The document is in a standard font, and the page number is indicated at the bottom of the page. The overall tone of the document is serious and professional, with a focus on the importance of collaboration and the potential benefits of such a network.

The model that is proposed by Gino follows along the same pattern we see in the supposed Montauk project, along with the GOV backed O9A model.

I haven't found a decent connection to O9A for Epstein, but researching the other documents retrieved from his estate, he had some materials referencing Satanic Ritual Abuse.

Is there any way to further research this angle on ritual abuse? They may be using language that obfuscates it from showing up.

The image is a still from a video, featuring a dimly lit office space. The room is dark, with the only light source being a single lightbulb hanging from the ceiling. The walls are plain and feature a large projection screen on the left side. In the center of the room, there is a large conference table with a dark finish. On the table, there are two chairs, one facing the screen and the other facing the camera. The chairs are empty. The floor is covered in a light-colored carpet. On the right side of the room, there is a dark-colored office chair. The text "Newborn porn!" is overlaid on the image, suggesting that the content of the video is related to adult content. The style of the image is realistic and appears to be a still from a video, possibly a scene from a film or television show.

The character is depicted with a green body, a blue shirt, and a brown tongue sticking out. The character's head is adorned with a silver-colored, textured hat that resembles a cone or a cone-shaped object. The hat is slightly tilted to the left, and the character's eyes are wide open, giving the impression of a surprised or alarmed expression. The background of the image is plain and white, which contrasts with the character's vibrant colors and the metallic texture of the hat. There are no texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the image is cartoonish and expressive, typical of the meme-style illustrations that have become popular on the internet.

The image is a collage of four separate photographs, each depicting a different interaction between two men. The men are dressed in business attire, with one wearing a suit and the other in a suit and tie. The photograph on the left shows a man in a suit and tie standing in front of a door, with his back to the camera. The man in the suit and tie is facing the camera, and he appears to be speaking or gesturing with his hands.

The photograph on the right shows a man in a suit and tie standing in front of a door, with his back to the camera. He is facing the camera, and he is also speaking or gesturing with his hands. The photograph in the center shows a man in a suit and tie standing in front of a door, with his back to the camera. He is facing the camera, and he is also speaking or gesturing with his hands. The photograph on the far right shows a man in a suit and tie standing in front of a door, with his back to the camera. He is facing the camera, and he is also speaking or gesturing with his hands.

The text accompanying the images is in English and appears to be a description of the men's interactions. It mentions that they are at the Eastern Economic Forum in Vladivostok, Russia, and that they are part of a group of people who are using a website to share their pictures. The text also mentions that they are trying to use any of these pictures with a "Google Reverse Image Search" to find out more about the people in the pictures. The text is in a formal and professional tone, suggesting that the event is of a serious nature.

The image is a screenshot of a letter or email, which appears to be sent to a school.

The letter is written in English and is formatted in a standard business letter style. The sender's name is "SAME MIDDLE SCHOOL" and the recipient's name is "SAME PARENTS AND GUARDIANS." The date of the letter is Tuesday, May 24, 2016, and the time is 1:47 PM. The letter is addressed to "SAME YEARBOOK INFORMATION" and is sent to "SAME PARENT INFORMATION."

The letter is written in a formal tone, with a clear and concise message. The text is in black, and the background of the letter is white. The letter is marked with a yellow header that reads "Make sure to get this." The letter is signed by the sender with the name "SAME MIDDLE SCHOOL" and the date "Tuesday, May 24, 2016."

The content of the letter is not visible in the image, but it appears to be a request or reminder related to the school's yearbook. The letter is written in a way that suggests it is intended to be read and understood by the recipient, who is presumably a parent or guardian of a student at the school. The letter is a standard business communication, and the sender's name and the date are the only visible elements. The rest of the text is cut off, so the full content of the letter cannot be determined from the image.

At the top, there is a text that reads "Elusive Truth 1 day ago" and below it, a comment that says "He was found in the desert missing organs? This is NOT art." The comment is in quotation marks and is followed by a name "Marina Ambromovic" and a date "1 day ago."

In the center of the image, there is a photograph of a group of people standing in front of a statue. The statue appears to be a human figure with a muscular build, and it is partially obscured by a tree. The people in the photograph are dressed in formal attire, and the one in the foreground is wearing a black dress. The other individuals are not fully visible.

The photograph is overlaid with a red and black overlay that includes text. The text is in quotation marks and reads "This isn't normal." Below the photograph, there is a caption that says "He looks scared." The text is in a bold font and is in quotation marks.

At the bottom of the image, there is a logo for "ROCKY MOUNTAIN" in a red and white color scheme. The logo is in a rectangular shape with a white background and a red border.

The overall style of the image is a combination of a photograph and a caption, with the photograph serving as the main visual element and the text providing context and commentary. The use of quotation marks in the text suggests that the text is a direct quote from the photograph. The watermark "ROCKY MOUNTAIN" indicates the source of the image.

If you are fast on archive.org you can copy the full article (at least that's how I did or maybe I'm to "neurotypical" to find the full article).

But some highlights:

>"Neurotypical" is a term used by the autism community to describe what society refers to as "normal."

>Accepting and respecting neurodiversity is the key to surviving the transformation driven by the internet and AI, which is shattering the Newtonian predictability of the past and replacing it with a Heisenbergian world of complexity and uncertainty.

>For example, the Israeli Defense Force's Special Intelligence Unit 9900, which focuses on analyzing aerial and satellite imagery, is partially staffed with people on the autism spectrum who have a preternatural ability to spot patterns.

>In retrospect, though, I feel I certainly would have thrived on "unschooling."

I think (((THEY))) mean "us".

The occult, aliens, time travel, magic, etc. really does not exist, do they? All these rich people at the end game mode in life. And all they care about are their dicks. It is so sad. Pathetic too. But more sad. All those documents, and not even a single photo evidence of anything reality breaking. Just pure evil in human form. We are really living on a random rock that is traveling across the universe.

The image is a bar graph titled "EPTEN FILES 2007 CANYON: Forensic Volume Audit" with a dark background. The graph is divided into two columns, each representing a different time period: 1999-2003 and 2005-2008. Each column has a vertical bar representing the number of files, with the number of files in each period indicated at the top of the bar.

The top of the graph features a red box with the text "THE GAP" and a red line that extends from the box to the 200,000 mark on the vertical axis. Below the red box, there is a black bar with the number "3,000,000" written on it, indicating the number of files in the 2005-2008 period.

The graph also includes a footnote at the bottom, stating "FORENSIC NOTE: The Dataset B manifest shows a hard break in serial sequencing at E7478495811. The missing branches overlap with key geopolitical events and anomalous market activity. As of Feb 2020, 50% of the missing files remain watched by the DCL for reasons of National Security or Deliberative Process Privilege."

The style of the image is informational and analytical, designed to present data in a clear and concise manner. The use of color and the layout of the graph help to distinguish between the different time periods and the number of files. The graph is a visual representation of the Forensic Volume Audit, which is a process of analyzing and counting the number of files in a specific period.

The image is a screenshot of a Twitter conversation. The conversation is between two individuals, Ashton Forbes and Rep. Ro Khanna. The conversation is about a series of tweets that are posted by Ashton Forbes. The conversation is in a text-based format, and the conversation is displayed in a dark background.

The conversation starts with Ashton Forbes sharing a tweet that says, "The Epsilon files show happening right now is a gift, and you're stupid if you're falling for it." This tweet is followed by a response from Rep. Ro Khanna, who says, "Khanna and Masise are incompetent fools only interested in self-enrichment."

The conversation then moves to a tweet by Rep. Ro Khanna, which says, "They don't have any incriminating evidence, and they're haming innocent people in their witch hunt." This tweet is followed by a response from Rep. Ro Khanna, who says, "Rep. Ro Khanna 18h" and then replies to Ashton Forbes, saying, "I appreciate @JSweetL's reporting confirming today that Salvatore Nuwara, Leet Lord and Nicola Caputo were just part of a photo line up and are not connected to Epsilon..."

The conversation ends with a tweet by Rep. Ro Khanna, which says, "Relativity? It's why wormholes are possible." This tweet is followed by a tweet by Rep. Ro Khanna, which says, "Zack D Films 18h" and then adds a link to a video.

The image is a screenshot of a Twitter conversation, and it is important to note that the conversation is not a video, but rather a text-based conversation between two individuals. The conversation is displayed in a dark background, and the text is in a standard font. The conversation is not interactive, as it is a static image of a conversation.

Can you, the people, "vote your way out of this?"

Honestly, not if you get your news from these folks.

The swamp has tricks for deceiving the public, and most even work on congressmen. Here's an example of how Laura and Greg played along as happy tools of the swamp.

Please ask yourself why your own congressman has never talked about this. He either hasn't gotten this far in the game (80% chance), or he likes the way the swamp obscures what's going on (10% chance), or he dislikes the system but the price he'd pay for telling you is too high (10% chance). If a congressman sees this post and wants to debate me, I accept!

The House has rules we adopt at the beginning of each Congress. Honestly we should just use those - some go all the way back to Thomas Jefferson. Some are like Robert's Rules of Order which branched from House rules a century ago. But we have a rules committee that modifies the rules every week. I served on the rules committee for two years. When I was on the committee, I refused to vote for rules changes if the purpose was to mislead or obscure. Every week, the rules committee bends the rules to suit the Speaker, but you can't place the blame just on the committee or the Speaker. Every rules change must be approved by the whole House with a majority vote.

Rank and file congressmen are told to vote for these rules modifications each week for the sake of party loyalty because the rules are temporarily modified by the majority to keep the minority from using the permanent rules against us. This is partly true, so most congressmen never question beyond this.

Typically, every week the rules committee meets before other committees and writes a rules package to protect bills that will come to the floor that week. Then the whole house votes on this rules package early in the week before significant legislation comes to the floor. The vote is typically on party lines. Sometimes a block of congressmen in the majority will take the rules package hostage and withhold their vote to get something else that has nothing to do with the rules. I'm not a big fan of this, but after 13 years, my hands aren't completely clean of this tactic.

The high-road position that I try to maintain is that if the rules package is bad, you shouldn't vote for the rules package, and in general you shouldn't withhold your vote from a rules package if there's nothing wrong with the rules package... even if you disagree with the policy that is enabled to come to the floor by the rules package.

There are more details, but that's all you need to know to understand what I'm going to explain next.

This week the Speaker wanted to do two things outside of our base rules, so he put those inside of the rules package that also had the rules for bringing bills like the popular SAVE Act to the floor, knowing members would be afraid to vote against something associated with SAVE. THIS IS INTENTIONAL.

The Speaker wanted to circumvent the National Emergencies Act of 1976 to avoid voting on tariffs and he wanted to turn off the ban on bringing a spending bill to the floor the same day it's introduced.

The first rules package that came to the floor this week failed because myself and other republicans objected to it. The rules committee met again, wrote a new rules package without the tariff-trick, and we voted on the second rules package. I voted no but internet goons, like clockwork, characterized this as a vote against the SAVE Act.

The swamp used that second rules package to give them authority to pass a bill before anyone could read it. They hid that authority inside the rule for the SAVE act because they knew people like Laura and Greg would help them disparage anyone who didn't go along.

If you fell for Laura and Greg's slop you were cheering for the Pelosi doctrine that we should pass bills to see what's in them. If the rules package had failed, the rules committee would have written a better one and SAVE Act would have still come to the floor.

The Educational Tyranny of the Neurotypicals

The current school system is too rigid, and it's designed for a different world anyway.

Image may contain Human Person Baby Room Indoors and Interior Design

Robert Warren/Getty Images

Save this story

Structured learning didn't serve me particularly well. I was kicked out of kindergarten for running away too many times, and I have the dubious distinction of having dropped out of two undergraduate programs and a doctoral business and administration program. I haven't been tested, but have come to think of myself as "neuroatypical" in some way.

"Neurotypical" is a term used by the autism community to describe what society refers to as "normal." According to the Centers for Disease Control, one in 59 children, and one in 34 boys, are on the autism spectrum—in other words, neuroatypical. That's 3 percent of the male population. If you add ADHD—attention deficit hyperactivity disorder—and dyslexia, roughly one out of four people are not "neurotypicals."

Don't just keep up. Get ahead—with our biggest stories, handpicked for you each day.

By signing up, you agree to our user agreement (including class action waiver and arbitration provisions), and acknowledge our privacy policy.

In NeuroTribes, Steve Silberman chronicles the history of such non-neurotypical conditions, including autism, which was described by the Viennese doctor Hans Asperger and Leo Kanner in Baltimore in the 1930s and 1940s. Asperger worked in Nazi-occupied Vienna, which was actively euthanizing institutionalized children, and he defined a broad spectrum of children who were socially awkward. Others had extraordinary abilities and a "fascination with rules, laws and schedules," to use Silberman's words. Leo Kanner, on the other hand, described children who were more disabled. Kanner's suggestion that the condition was activated by bad parenting made autism a source of stigma for parents and led to decades of work attempting to "cure" autism rather than developing ways for families, the educational system, and society to adapt to it.

Our schools in particular have failed such neurodiverse students, in part because they've been designed to prepare our children for typical jobs in a mass-production-based white- and blue-collar environment created by the Industrial Revolution. Students acquire a standardized skillset and an obedient, organized, and reliable nature that served society well in the past—but not so much today. I suspect that the quarter of the population who are diagnosed as somehow non-neurotypical struggle with the structure and the method of modern education, and many others probably do as well.

I often say that education is what others do to you and learning is what you do for yourself. But I think that even the broad notion of education may be outdated, and we need a completely new approach to empower learning: We need to revamp our notion of "education" and shake loose the ordered and linear metrics of the society of the past, when we were focused on scale and the mass production of stuff. Accepting and respecting neurodiversity is the key to surviving the transformation driven by the internet and AI, which is shattering the Newtonian predictability of the past and replacing it with a Heisenbergian world of complexity and uncertainty.

In Life, Animated, Ron Suskind tells the story of his autistic son Owen, who lost his ability to speak around his third birthday. Owen had loved the Disney animated movies before his regression began, and a few years into his silence it became clear he'd memorized dozens of Disney classics in their entirety. He eventually developed an ability to communicate with his family by playing the role, and speaking in the voices, of the animated characters he so loved, and he learned to read by reading the film credits. Working with his family, Owen recently helped design a new kind of screen-sharing app, called Sidekicks, so other families can try the same technique.

Owen's story tells us how autism can manifest in different ways and how, if caregivers can adapt rather than force kids to "be normal," many autistic children survive and thrive. Our institutions, however, are poorly designed to deliver individualized, adaptive programs to educate such kids.

In addition to schools poorly designed for non-neurotypicals, our society traditionally has had scant tolerance or compassion for anyone lacking social skills or perceived as not "normal." Temple Grandin, the animal welfare advocate who is herself somewhere on the spectrum, contends that Albert Einstein, Wolfgang Mozart, and Nikola Tesla would have been diagnosed on the "autistic spectrum" if they were alive today. She also believes that autism has long contributed to human development and that "without autism traits we might still be living in caves." She is a prominent spokesperson for the neurodiversity movement, which argues that neurological differences must be respected in the same way that diversity of gender, ethnicity or sexual orientation is.

Despite challenges with some of the things that neurotypicals find easy, people with Asperger's and other forms of autism often have unusual abilities. For example, the Israeli Defense Force's Special Intelligence Unit 9900, which focuses on analyzing aerial and satellite imagery, is partially staffed with people on the autism spectrum who have a preternatural ability to spot patterns. I believe at least some of Silicon Valley's phenomenal success is because its culture places little value on conventional social and corporate values that prize age-based experience and conformity that dominates most of society and most institutions on the East Coast. It celebrates nerdy, awkward youth and has turned their super-human, "abnormal" powers into a money-making machine that is the envy of the world. (This new culture is wonderfully inclusive from a neurodiversity perspective but white-dude centric and problematic from a gender and race perspective.)

This sort of pattern recognition and many other unusual traits associated with autism are extremely well suited for science and engineering, often enabling a super-human ability to write computer code, understand complex ideas and elegantly solve difficult mathematical problems.

Unfortunately, most schools struggle to integrate atypical learners, even though it's increasingly clear that interest-driven learning, project-based learning, and undirected learning seem better suited for the greater diversity of neural types we now know exist.

Ben Draper, who runs the Macomber Center for Self Directed Learning, says that while the center is designed for all types of children, kids whose parents identify them as on the autism spectrum often thrive at the center when they've had difficulty in conventional schools. Ben is part of the so-called unschooling movement, which believes that not only should learning be self-directed, in fact we shouldn't even focus on guiding learning. Children will learn in the process of pursuing their passions, the reasoning goes, and so we just need to get out of their way, providing support as needed.

Many, of course, argue that such an approach is much too unstructured and verges on irresponsibility. In retrospect, though, I feel I certainly would have thrived on "unschooling." In a recent paper, Ben and my colleague Andre Uhl, who first introduced me to unschooling, argue that it not only works for everyone, but that the current educational system, in addition to providing poor learning outcomes, impinges on the rights of children as individuals.

MIT is among a small number of institutions that, in the pre-internet era, provided a place for non-neurotypical types with extraordinary skills to gather and form community and culture. Even MIT, however, is still trying to improve to give these kids the diversity and flexibility they need, especially in our undergraduate program.

I'm not sure how I'd be diagnosed, but I was completely incapable of being traditionally educated. I love to learn, but I go about it almost exclusively through conversations and while working on projects. I somehow kludged together a world view and life with plenty of struggle, but also with many rewards. I recently wrote a PhD dissertation about my theory of the world and how I developed it. Not that anyone should generalize from my experience—one reader of my dissertation said that I'm so unusual, I should be considered a "human sub-species." While I take that as a compliment, I think there are others like me who weren't as lucky and ended up going through the traditional system and mostly suffering rather than flourishing. In fact, most kids probably aren't as lucky as me and while some types are more suited for success in the current configuration of society, a huge percentage of kids who fail in the current system have a tremendous amount to contribute that we aren't tapping into.

In addition to equipping kids for basic literacy and civic engagement, industrial age schools were primarily focused on preparing kids to work in factories or perform repetitive white-collar jobs. It may have made sense to try to convert kids into (smart) robotlike individuals who could solve problems on standardized tests alone with no smartphone or the internet and just a No. 2 pencil. Sifting out non-neurotypical types or trying to remediate them with drugs or institutionalization may have seemed important for our industrial competitiveness. Also, the tools for instruction were also limited by the technology of the times. In a world where real robots are taking over many of those tasks, perhaps we need to embrace neurodiversity and encourage collaborative learning through passion, play, and projects, in other words, to start teaching kids to learn in ways that machines can't. We can also use modern technology for connected learning that supports diverse interests and abilities and is integrated into our lives and communities of interest.

At the Media Lab, we have a research group called Lifelong Kindergarten, and the head of the group, Mitchel Resnick, recently wrote a book by the same name. The book is about the group's research on creative learning and the four Ps—Passion, Peers, Projects, and Play. The group believes, as I do, that we learn best when we are pursuing our passion and working with others in a project-based environment with a playful approach. My memory of school was "no cheating," "do your own work," "focus on the textbook, not on your hobbies or your projects," and "there's time to play at recess, be serious and study or you'll be shamed"—exactly the opposite of the four Ps.

Many mental health issues, I believe, are caused by trying to "fix" some type of neurodiversity or by simply being insensitive or inappropriate for the person. Many mental "illnesses" can be "cured" by providing the appropriate interface to learning, living, or interacting for that person focusing on the four Ps. My experience with the educational system, both as its subject and, now, as part of it, is not so unique. I believe, in fact, that at least the one-quarter of people who are diagnosed as somehow non-neurotypical struggle with the structure and the method of modern education. People who are wired differently should be able to think of themselves as the rule, not as an exception.

[24 / 8]The image displays a collection of tarot cards arranged in a grid format. Each card features a distinct illustration of a figure, which is a common feature in tarot decks. The figures are depicted in various poses and are adorned with elaborate costumes and accessories. The cards are organized in rows and columns, with the top row containing the "THE EAGLE" card, followed by the "THE MOON" card, and then the "THE SUN" card. The bottom row contains the "THE DEVIL" card, the "THE STAR" card, and the "THE MOON" card. The cards are colored in a palette that includes shades of yellow, orange, red, blue, and green, with some cards featuring additional colors such as black, white, and gray. The style of the image is reminiscent of traditional tarot card illustrations, with a focus on the mystical and spiritual themes often associated with tarot readings.

The Major Arcana is my favorite system because it is the most complete and accessible one that I've found. The Kabbalah seems too based in autistic geometry, but that doesn't mean it is worse or bad; it is simply less accessible for an outsider.

I know the Kabbalah is just based on older sacred tree models, which I know the Assyrians and the Druids practiced. These are the same trees used in the Bible during the Eden story.

The Eden story is at least related to the Sumerian/Babylonian story of creation and of Gilgamesh. Gilgamesh pursues the plant of immortality, whereas the fruit in Eden is said to turn men into gods (the classic Genesis 3:22). They're basically saying the same thing, but that doesn't mean the esoteric system from then to now hasn't changed whatsoever.

I'm also aware of eastern systems that use the body as the central symbol, including Hindu chakras and Chinese meridian points. I have mixed feelings on this because while there is some useful medical knowledge to be derived from them, they mix subjects so much that you never know when you're talking about something mental or something physical. Maybe this was the goal of their system, but that's not really how I like to go about it because it can't be integrated into newer knowledge so easily.

Can anyone shed some light on the timeline from as far back in ancient history as possible to the present? I'm happy to read any books you suggest as well. I've read a good number but admittedly I skip over some that seem to be just saying the same thing that I've already read (but maybe I am missing something important).

I asked ChatGPT about this, and it suggested the first esoteric systems were based on astronomical measurements of time and geometry, leading to the first pantheons. This does make some sense. I can see how people look for synchronicity in everything, so they derived psychological systems from external measurements of stars/planets/suns. However, it's not very satisfying to assume this.

>The Major Arcana

I'm also going to briefly summarize my understanding of this to set the stage for further conversation.

Maybe at a base level, you don't see the connections between these symbols. However, it's fairly clear to me that they come in a sequence, and that this sequence has meaning. I think you can pull out algebraic components that make the sequence totally formulaic in a hermetic sense. The major arcana are thus hermetic symbols (in my opinion).

That being said, I think it's wrong to assume that people go through one stage at a time. Many people think this way. It's true that you may identify most with one symbol at a time, but I think the symbols refer to aspects of the self that are always extant. They may not be literal aspects of the self, but instead abstract principles that conflict with one another. In the latter case, it would be tautological that at any point in time, you should technically have an opinion or stance on every one of these principles, meaning that they are always interacting in your system at all times.

The consequence of going from a sequence perspective to a permanent always-on perspective is that the latter describes flow, and this means the goal is not to get somewhere (like the end of the sequence) but to flow better. This helps explain the duality of the tree of life vs the tree of death, because essentially the principle of life is flow, and the opposition is that which blocks flow at any of the steps. We can abstract from this that in order to control a person, or society as a whole, you simply block flow at all of the major points in the esoteric system that seems to best represent the people.

I hesitated to say "the esoteric system that is most accurate" because I also wonder to what extent we have confirmation bias or if esoteric systems vary by culture or race. Maybe a system is only valid once we accept it and live by it, even if not fully aware of it. View SameOCRGoogleiqdbSauceNAOTrace file.png, 2MiB, 928x1280

I also find the numerology in the kabbalah and potentially the Major Arcana to be too much to ignore. Both systems give you about 22 symbols or 22 paths which just happen to be the same number of symbols in script used by ancient Phoenicians, Egyptians, and then Greeks and the rest of European languages.

The origin of language and symbolism are tied closely together. We have "In the beginning was the Logos, and the Logos was with God, and the Logos was God" right at the start of John. We have the gnostic view that the monad (which may be comparable to the Logos) creates the demiurge to rule in its stead. We have cave paintings and figurines appearing in archaeology as humans transition to more complex ways of life. It's clear that consciousness emerges with language, and consciousness itself is viewed by some to be the fabric of the universe. I don't really like taking relative perspectives and pretending they are absolute, but I can appreciate the metaphor.

So, to my point: we could also look at the Major Arcana as a profound, recognizable, and meaningful set of symbols that could form the basis for pictorial/hieroglyphic writing that precedes alphabets, and it is essentially the role of esoteric systems to create these alphabets. The kabbalistic system (again, not saying Jews invented it, but I refer to the tree of life as best known through the kabbalah) adds geometry to these alphabets, which seemingly is even more advanced in fact.

This brings me to the Oera Linda book as an explicit demonstration of how letters are constructed from geometry. You could do the same thing with the "paths" in the kabbalah.

It may also be true that every esoteric system, insofar as it is about creating language, also requires a primary core set of literature that uses it. This is your Rosetta stone between semantics and grammar. Perhaps books like the Bible and the Oera Linda serve this purpose, and thus the same would be true of the Epic of Gilgamesh and other works.

The image displays a complex diagram composed of various colored circles and lines, each representing a different card from the Rider-Waite-Smith tarot deck. The cards are arranged in a circular pattern, with the numbers 1 through 10 at the bottom of the circle, indicating the numerical value of each card. The colors of the circles and lines vary, with shades of red, blue, green, yellow, and purple, and the lines are of different thicknesses, suggesting different levels of importance or significance.

At the top of the diagram, there are two circular sections with the text "1" and "2" written on them, possibly indicating the first and second card in the spread. Below these sections, there are two additional circles with the text "3" and "4" written on them, suggesting the third and fourth cards in the spread.

The diagram is surrounded by a black border, and the background is black, which contrasts with the colorful elements of the diagram, making the colors stand out. The overall style of the image is a digital representation of a tarot spread, with the aim of providing a visual guide for interpreting the cards.

For example, Mercury has 88 days, Venus has 225 days, Earth has 365 days, Mars has 687 days, Jupiter has 4,333 days, Saturn has 10,759 days, and Uranus has 30,687 days.

The second column lists the days of orbit for each planet. For example, Mercury has 88 days, Venus has 225 days, Earth has 365 days, Mars has 687 days, Jupiter has 4,333 days, Saturn has 10,759 days, and Uranus has 30,687 days.

The image is a simple and clear representation of the days of orbit for the planets, with each planet's name and the corresponding days of orbit listed next to it. The colors of the planets are not specified in the image, but they are likely to be represented by their typical colors. The image is likely used for educational or informational purposes, such as in a science or astronomy class.

Well, the path of the planets and stars would seem to be the origin of number systems. Each parallel line is like a base. Base 12, Base 60. These are convenient numbers for talking about rotations (because they are so divisible). The calendar system could be viewed as a number system with asymmetric bases.

[8 / 1]The image is a black and white line drawing with a cartoonish style. It features a group of people in a room, with one person standing in the foreground and another person lying on the floor. The standing person is wearing a white shirt and appears to be holding a glass of what looks like water. The person lying on the floor is wearing a white shirt and appears to be in a state of distress. The room has a white wall with a large black silhouette of a face with two eyes and a mouth, which is the central figure in the image. Above the face, there is text that reads "They don't know I already seen it." The style of the image is reminiscent of a meme or a satirical cartoon, with a focus on the expressions and actions of the characters.

God' is a bitch for brutally niggraping my mind in the level of the Goosh Goosh meme and thus forcing me into a hellmatrix, as well as forcing me to eat the most vile, gaggable nigg tier niggslop like stews concocted from cockroaches and maggots, semen, and spoiled vegetables. I cannot get even basic foods like plain white bread, white rice, crackers, fresh fruit or even clean water. He also only gives me the ugliest ogre gorilla broads for me as an option to date or wank too, even tho they still reject me for an even uglier hoggoblin tier loser, and I also would rather get blue balls then jack to them. The worst thing he does to me though is forcing me to type out very longwinded posts everytime the topic of God is brought up. I hardly have enough time to sleep or eat my niggslop or find broads as most of my time is spent typing up extremely blasphemous and hilarious stereotypically schizophrenic ranting and ramblings. I have typed so much that my fingers have their bones showing.

NTA but they always slide occult song threads. Halo is especially obvious:

>Remember those walls I built? [The material Veil, the halo/ring, your ego]

>Well baby they're tumbling down...

We call it the dark night of the soul, when our world/ego gets so dark and lonely we have no choice but to seek a spiritual savior (a sator, a Sator-n.)

>I found a way to let you in[to my body]

>But I never really had a doubt

>Standing in the light of your halo,

>I've got my angel now.

She's awakened but breaks all the rules because of it, Saturn's divine mania results in a Luciferian response. She's 'never gonna shut' her Sator out again.

>Everywhere I'm looking now,

>I'm surrounded by your embrace

>Baby I can see your halo...

The dark night of the soul is recognized for what it is, by extension all of material form around her is recognized for what it is. What she once rebuked she is now sheltered by. She transcends the maze.

>Hit me like a ray of sun, burning through my darkest night

>You're the only one that I want, think I'm addicted to your light.

>I swore I'd never fall again, but this don't even feel like falling

>Gravity can't begin to pull me back to the ground again [her consciousness is ascending, she's no longer bound to three-dimensional based thoughts and is de-coding her own matrix.]

DISCLAIMER:

Some have reported attracting the attention of these entities by simply reading about them. If you're a dabbler who just wants to see if it works or if your faith forbids copulating with demons, don't summon. If you're unprepared for a potentially lifelong relationship, or at the very least, a life-long open door connection with sexual spirits and the occult, avoid this topic entirely. If you have a loving relationship with your human spouse or partner and desire a sex spirit to spice things up, or if you want a human partner in the future take caution, as these entities can be jealous or decide an initially open relationship is no longer so (request an open relationship during the summoning ritual). These spirits can harm or kill you when sufficiently angered and not easily banished.

FAQ:

>What are succubi?

Female spirits of sexual desire, who often choose human mates. They can't be banished with holy objects

>How to summon?

The Letter Method is used to focus your intent into a message to one of the Four Succubus Queens, requesting that they match you with one of their daughters. No blood or soul sacrifice necessary. See links

>Do they steal your life force?

Succubi use sexual energy, which is released naturally during sex. Under normal circumstances they won't take your life energy

>Can she look...

Succubi take forms attractive to you naturally

>They're tulpas?

No. However, those in romantic relationships with their tulpas are welcome

>Incubi?

Same method

They don't have infinite children.

How the fuck could they? Where are these children coming from?

If it's human men then you need to explain how these things have actual DNA ghtamis co,patigle with humans. Then the children are half-human. Next generation is basically human,

If it's incubus then why the hell bother with human men?

The lore gets difficult, anon who hasn't been here in a long time. It requires larping and the more larping you do the less believable it gets.

There is no logic. The dude just showed up one day and started screeching this retarded theory and calling anything that contradicted it a larp. When asked to explain himself he just went "it just doesnt make sense" over and over.

My guess is, is that its some kind of self loathing, since hes said he cant believe that succs would ever want anything to do with anons, likely because he himself is an ugly piece of shit and needs to project it onto everyone else. But he ultimately suffers from a common disconnect that all hylics/materialists suffer from, where he cant seem to conceive of the fact that higher spiritual realms operate on rules that dont mirror our own.

The ultimate problem here, is that you cant logic a person out of a position they didnt use logic to arrive at. At best hes just an intellectually lazy turd who needs people to tell him what to believe.

That wasn't me, for the record.

Assuming you were assuming that was me, lol.

I also don't have a "strong emotional reaction" so much as just like... "negative associations because Russians and their shills use it", which I think is reasonable at this moment of history.

(This one WAS replying to me tho)

That's Megara. Her whole thing in the movie was that Hades owned her soul. ...and now that I think about it, also used her for seduction.

The existence of astral parasites shows there's a reflection of this food chain in the astral (and implies there's a finite amount of energy in the astral, otherwise why bother stealing it?). You're right, there won't be marriage. But I think you're more afraid of being apart from your Succubus, and less of an actual need of marriage.

If you get to Heaven, I think you'll find your Succubus in the form they truly are there, and you will still have your friendship.

But you don't actually know that about sex in Heaven, though. The bible says nothing about that topic in particular. The closest I've been able to observe: is in Romans 14:17 "17 For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost."

We wouldn't have sex for slating our thirst of it, but I believe that we would build through that action for God's pleasure. Maybe it's the best possible version of it sex, no fear of the flesh in it-only the sweetest ecstasy. I think through that.

The image features a circular design with a dark red background. At the center of the design, there is a silhouette of a couple, a man and a woman, dressed in traditional attire. The man is wearing a suit with a tie, and the woman is adorned in a long, flowing dress with a high neckline. Above the couple, there is a crescent moon with a star-like design, and to the left of the couple, there is a pentagram with a star at its center.

Surrounding the couple are several smaller figures, some of which appear to be animals, and others are stylized with intricate patterns. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of a traditional or mystical design, possibly related to a theme of love, marriage, or a ritualistic context.

That still sounds gay as fuck. In addition its agreed upon by most theologians that the division between men and women is no longer going to matter in heaven, as the division is a remnant of the prior and flawed order, and because sex is supposed to be solely for procreation, it is no longer going to be needed when the world is cleansed of sin. This applies to marriage as well.

The truth of the matter is that the meaning to life itself is gay, and ends in some faggot god shit, or "transcend desire" bullshit and i say nuts to that.

Fair point, I can't argue against this.

However, even in these acts that we choose to do, there's still room for us to pursue better selection within itself, one is the pursuit of God-I choose that, and urge you to do the same.

If I can suggest another way of looking at it:

In Hermeticism, the notion of "heaven" that you're speaking to is called "reintegration", referring to the idea of rejoining The Source.

When you think of it in those terms, it suddenly makes sense when you hear all these ideas about "there won't be spouses, or sexes, or family, ect", because all of those things are borne from our separateness as souls, and reintegration nullifies that.

Now, to divert into UPG a little bit:

I think we can image The Source as kinda like a black hole.
Its this big mystery with maybe a stream of souls reintegrating/getting sucked in (or maybe its just one soul. Or maybe we're ALL that one soul. ect~)

But the thing that I would assert as a bit of UPG is that The Source is also like a black hole in that it has an ACCRECIION DISK. And that's where all the "fun" heavens are. Its like, if The Source is Eru Iluvatar, then the "accretion disk" would be Valinor, which is where I think I'm heading to frolic and fuck~

That sounds like an emanation from what God is. It's the 'grey' area between light and dark. I agree with you. I think that's the area of the human soul.

I think something is being oversimplified though. Like, the sensual pleasure is all that matters. There's something limiting there.

Can we actually not think of something better than that? No offense.

I wouldn't call what that is as baggage. It actually is saying just what it says, do your best towards these values. You should be aiming for that perfection, but it's okay that you can't reach it.

We're human, we're limited. That's why Jesus forgave us, for this.

In the attempt of pursuing those values you are selectively shaped without the facets of behavior that usually keep us down. It's like you're shaping yourself by adhering to God's higher standards -you're shaping yourself with better intention.

I take this as the opportunity to be with my Succubus/Psychopomp partner because they're a companion in this cold world. I may not be perfect but I can pursuit God's values while loving my internal friend.

>by making Good into a person

Do you mean God? I'm going to go forward like you said God.

God was made into a person, Jesus. And he died so we can be forgiven of our failure to those high vaunted values.

The pursuit of God- to your potential growth, even in where we are now with our Succubi, is THAT important and meaningful.

Its kinda hard to explain... cuz you're right about our world existing in that "grey area", but the heavens I'm comparing to an accretion disk are "higher planes" that in some sense "glow" as they draw close to Goodness.

>God was made into a person, Jesus.

Ugh... stop being thick. Your idea of "God" is made into a person every time you call him "him".

The entire point is that the "skydaddy" crap is morally useless and practically destructive.

The thing we can actually see in the world and interact with is GOOD. Which, even if you personify Good into "God", that would still mean that Good is "his" energy, and would also carry "his" property of being incomprehensible (because Good is an infinitely subtle concept).

That last part is important to realize because its the reason why no holy text or religious doctrine can ever be complete.

Describing Goodness concretely would require infinite information.

>Can you give me an example of this?

Just that, and ultimately >>41832246 is an exact example of what im talking about. No shade, its a logical take on god.

Although i dont believe the "valinor" bit.

Because ultimately the universal mind represents all that exists within the universe and nothing which is perceivable or unknowable can even exist or come close to the concept of "existing" outside of the universal "mind".

Eventually all matter and all things which act as a conduit by which spirit and our understanding of the subtle exists, will all dissipate, or become so irrevocably changed that we will no longer be able to perceive that which once was as ever having existed, and this is all assuming certain truths about the immortality of the "spirit". Or we could dissipate entirely to give way to something else.

Infinity and eternity are a face of god, which will end, in order to close the gap between non infinity in my assessment. And in the face of the infinite void, my will splits my consciousness into a trillion chimps, hooting and humping everything they can, as a show of my contempt for these truths.

The image shows a hand with three distinct areas of red linework, which appear to be handprints or sketches. The hand is resting on a surface that is partially covered with a white sheet or paper. The hand is positioned in a way that the fingers are slightly curled, and the thumb is pointing upwards. The background is blurred, but it seems to be a room with a patterned fabric or material. The image is a close-up of the hand, focusing on the handprints and the lines. There are no texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the image is a candid, real-life photograph with a focus on the hand and the handprints.

The image shows a collection of tarot cards spread out on a black fabric with a pattern of white and red swirls and leaves. The cards feature various illustrations, including a central figure with a crown and a red robe, surrounded by other figures in different poses. The style of the cards is reminiscent of traditional tarot decks, with a mix of abstract and figurative elements. The image is taken from a top-down perspective, allowing a clear view of the cards and their intricate designs. There are no visible texts on the tarot cards or the fabric. The overall atmosphere of the image is mystical and evocative, often associated with tarot readings and divination.

I think an angel is helping me. I thought it was the same succubus impersonating an angel but the angel said I have an evil spirit. Im letting the angel help me. I was confused when i posted about it being 1 succubus . Theres mulitple spirits here.

Christianity and crosses and exorcisms did dick to remove the evil succubus.

Christianity isnt true is what i deduced from this experience.

Jesus name sure as fuck did nothing to scare off the demon. It attacked the same.

What its scared of is the angel of punishment of the creator helping me. It acts fearful around an angel willing to hurt it physically with ability. The angel is stronger.

It mocks jesus and jesus doesn't just cast it out, not even after 10 years of effort. Jesus isnt real or hes evil and not the son of God.

I dont believe a damn word of the Bible now.

The angel told me the bible aint true too, just be good and healed a bone break like an angel to prove its an angel.

I did plenty of research into Jesus name before translation. None of it worked. I tried all the names. He knows what I mean when I said "Jesus" or "Yeshua" or "Lord" he can read minds. Hed be Pharisee nitpicking to say I didnt pronounce it in hebrew right, i aint a jew.

Im gonna believe the healing angel over the ancient jewish text because I dont enjoy demonic possession an oppression.

As in, the succubus raped me every second of the waking day for 10 years almost.
Jesus did nothing about it.

He was unwilling or unable.

In the Bible, ALL DEMONICALLY POSSESSED were instantly exorcised with them doing nothing because they cant remove a demon on their own i gather.

I dislike mental gymnastics christians do to say I didn't do exorcism right. I prayed and tried, didn't work. Gave it a decade. Too much time is what I gave it.

Gonna talk to the angel, potentially from the real creator actually because they healed a broken bone.

When my "second female demon" starts healing broken bones and saying shes an angel and stuff that makes sense and the rapist succubus that pretends to be a man says follow the bible while resisting her or i burn in hell while jesus unable or unwilling to stop perpetual demonic rape

[spoiler:lit] I was raped every second of every day by a succubus that now pretends to be male for a decade resisting feeling pleasure from it that pushed the Bible. Bible didnt remove her. Because its not true I think [/spoiler:lit]

>There just happens to be a lot of it...

Word up

>Your idea of "God" is made into a person every time you call him "him".

I would not call God a man.

God is the symbol of pulling Order out of Chaos, at least a prime symbol of his. This aspect is the Spirit of Creation. This is a masculine trait, but he is not a man in flesh and blood.

While not exclusively through this, God shapes himself through us, through culture. The choices made in faith towards him/his set of values and the societal response to that are as his outline, as we could see that.

This is not a human, this is like a transcendental being showing itself through us.

So when I say God was made into a person as Jesus. It's because Jesus is God within human flesh, in as a symbol for the purest a man can be of heart and values. And so we can follow those values that Jesus represents to be as close to God as possible, to be shaped in the way that God can shape a person's behavior for optimization.

>"skydaddy" crap is morally useless

Belief in "Skydaddy" is a deep proof of belief. That is maximizing attention to the concept of God. Since you believe in the principals of energy, you KNOW how powerful that is. It's a whole legion of people who are continually optimizing their faith as well as being pushed to improve their and other's lives. Failures of man aside, it's a brilliant system.

>Which, even if you personify Good into "God", that would still mean that Good is "his" energy, and would also carry "his" property of being incomprehensible (because Good is an infinitely subtle concept).

This is an interesting concept. I feel like you're walking me through the idea of crowding the idea of God away within Good only to remain what is indiscernible.

>Describing Goodness concretely would require infinite information.

But now you're hosting a concept in the place where you would put God, a self-refining system. You shaped your point interestingly, but I think you're looking at it psychologically now, because the mindset that utilities God to be effective requires faith and its pursuit.

What does your Succubus have to say about this? I'm honestly curious.

On the right side of the image, there is a photograph of a man's face, presumably the same individual as the one in the left photograph. The man is looking directly at the camera, and his expression is neutral.

The background is a fiery, chaotic scene with flames and smoke, suggesting a fiery or hellish setting. The character is surrounded by a dark, serpentine figure with sharp, pointed teeth, which appears to be a dragon or a similar mythical creature. The dragon's wings are spread out, and its body is partially visible, with its head and body in the background. The overall color palette is dominated by dark tones, with the fiery background providing a stark contrast. The artwork has a fantasy or horror genre, with the character's fierce expression and the dragon's menacing presence contributing to this atmosphere.

The image is a screenshot of a text conversation between two individuals. The conversation is displayed in a text format, with the conversation taking place in a chat window. The conversation is centered around a meme featuring a character from the video game "World of Warcraft." The character is depicted as a demonic figure with wings, a horned head, and a red and black color scheme. The character is holding a staff and appears to be in a dynamic pose, suggesting movement or action.

The text in the image is a series of text messages, with the first message being "oooh yeah? send me a pic." The second message is "no it just looks bad cause I have Android," followed by a question "Wtf? Is that World of Warcraft?" The third message is "No it just looks bad cause I have Android," and the final message is "Oh word you're thin as shit lol." The text is in a casual, informal style, typical of text conversations. The style of the image is humorous and uses a meme to convey a message about the character's appearance and the user's Android device.

the Occult on this board.

Besides that, belief in the actual conception of God as a father is supposed to liken the difference between his understanding and ours is like a grown up and to child's. It's a self-humbling mechanic in the mind, I believe.

>They teach it FIRST, and thus corrupt everything that follows
Could you help me see it by giving me examples?

>Every situation where "service to that king" divides man against man.
Here's the thing, this is one of its major functions. This is why I talk about God in the way of him not being a person, but an entity that shapes himself through our culture. A person's belief in God is like God separating himself through the importance of choosing those values.

This is why I describe God in the way as a being who can control our fate through our actions. He forms an outline through our culture, through our choices made on his values. God shapes himself from the shifting nature of mankind. That's why I mean God is an entity and can be seen through a comparative set of information persistent through our emotional values.

>When you take the highest concept of "Goodness" and reduce it into a flag, it becomes a thing OF the world and a source of conflict
It becomes a source of conflict because God is trying to separate himself FROM that. He is not of this world because the world hates what standards are against it's own.

You are literally describing Good, not God.

The entire problem is that when you take something incomprehensibly complex and assign it arbitrary HUMAN traits like personhood, fatherhood, lordship, ect, you create what could be called an "inappropriate sense of specificity".

By this I mean: Every jackass simpleton who thinks, "Oh cool, 'God's on my side!'" and then proceeds to sin horrifically.

Its a hubris that extends all the way to today with religious parents doing fucked-up things to their kids and turning them into lifelong haters of anything that smells like righteousness.

Not mine but do some actual research on religion and discover your Jew on a stick's sacrifice narrative was blatantly stolen from Mithra and Horus, so by your logic Zoroastrianism, Egyptian polytheism, and Roman polytheism (which copied/syncretized Horus) are all equally powerful magically. Also arguably Germanic polytheism, where the sacrificial nature of obtaining knowledge and magical power are deeply highlighted in a different form via Odin.

Oh also for a fun fact, your Mary is just a hybrid of Isis and Vesta.

You are attached to your own pre-conceptions of the world, building an identity of your self and the other person's self identity based on your beliefs of what personality should be, and then attaching those to them. What I am is a human being propositioning truths from my perspective.

I believe this to be an emotional reaction to having your faith tested, generating a passionate response born from fear, which is valuable and admirable. Yes, faith and belief systems are personal. What's the opposite of your fear?

What's a you before an internal/external belief system?

Why do addicts need to believe in an external self-actualization factor (higher power) in order to change for good, realize they already can meet all their needs for happiness, build a family and find peace of mind? Does it matter if it's God or something else that gives them the control to change themselves?

So many questions...

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character with a predominantly purple hue. The character has a large, expressive eye with a blue iris, and a prominent, curved horn on the top of its head. The character's hair is styled in a way that it cascades down the sides of its face, and it has a pointed ear on one side. The character is wearing a black top with a visible cross on the chest, and the character's right hand is raised, with a claw-like finger extended outward. The background is a gradient of dark purple, with stars scattered throughout, giving the impression of a night sky. The artist's signature "Fischip" is visible in the top right corner of the image. The style of the image is sketchy and expressive, with visible lines and shading that give the character a three-dimensional appearance.

No, cuz you're thinking of it in terms of physical sex.

Cuz first of all, that high-tier pleasure isn't an automatic. Its a product of a lot of work and training to deepen the connection. (otherwise, everybody would do it)

Secondly, its only physical pleasure that correlates directly to strain on your body. But the deeper you get into succubus/spirit pleasure, the less you're moving and pushing your body in the process, so that you kinda end up in the same place physically when you're done (possibly sweating and very much feeling like you've been fucked), but the pleasure you go through in the process is beyond the physical.

It's the failures of human nature that take those too far. I cannot find a problem with assigning something that is infinitely complex to understandable aspects.
God is listed through what we have in the Bible-and that's unchanging, especially compared to an individual human's nature.

Isn't this how it is with people who live off of their individual concept of what's right and wrong?

The part that makes Christians sin horrifically is the same thing that would make the individual who aligns themselves to Good to do the same kind of horrific sins.

>I cannot find a problem with assigning something that is infinitely complex to understandable aspects.

Uhhhh, REALLY??? Ya really can't?

Like, the problem isn't when you use comparisons and stuff, that's just AA;SB, but when you define the NATURE OF GOOD ITSELF as a "father" and a "king" and all this other shit, that has CONSEQUENCES to all subsequent logic that's built atop that rotten foundation.

Do any of yall identify a succubus that's made of stone?

I let her into my mind and she has become an ever present figure for the last 3 years.

She came to me while I was in a creative rut. Gave me a ton of inspiration and motivation but she never lets me finish my work. The first dream I had of her I sank into a muddy creek. All the mud surrounding my body warmed up and I could feel something brushing up against my body as if it was trying to catch me. Then after sinking for a while I get deposited into a massive chamber... ITs too dark to see the walls but theirs enough light to see a massive female stature in front of me. It was 10 maybe 15 stories tall. Never saw its face but it was a very feminine figure. Grey Concrete composition but incredibly detailed. Some cracks and weathering but fully intact. Even to this day three years later I've never seen her face, I'm always either blinded or the space above her neck is shrouded in darkness.

Nowadays she doesn't even inspire or motivate me... all she does is flood my brain with dopamine when I get too stressed.

You'd think that would be a good thing but I am starting to fail my college classes and getting closer to dropping out but every time I try to get serious she just keeps soothing that fire.

I cant bring myself to be mad at her because of the nature of our relationship but I feel if I can understand her and maybe even communicate I might be able to balance out my life a bit better.

I don't want her gone or anything just want to better myself a little.

One more detail to add. She used to be seductive in the beginning but over the last year she's felt more like an older sister. No sexual feelings just familial comfort and warmth. She doesn't talk to me just sorta emits feelings into me to communicate.

Anyone recognize her? Id like to at least learn her name.

If there's some kind of richness to the relationship, you haven't explained it to me. You can't change or get rid of the entity? Settle down, lmao, you aren't even on a first name basis with it. The behavior of the entity suggests parasitism.

This is a faceless nameless entity that appeared to you 3 years ago. If you want anything more than a vibebuddy that has latched onto your life, declare social bankruptcy and begin dating it from square 1. Require a name from it, for your own benefit in communication. Require a face from it, because the psyche is highly sensitive to faces and it benchmarks the spirit. Start meditating/training, mostly alone, to develop your senses. Go on an actual date with it, instead of lounging around while it fiddles with your brain. Basically, demand something from yourself and the entity and see who can rise to the occasion.

If the spirit can communicate on a higher-level, it's likely non-verbal. In my personal experience, powerful spirits easily transmit verbal information but with weaker spirits in the near astral, the communication is like "concepts+". Sharp bursts of imagery and concepts that may have emotions attached. You are currently experiencing something even lower than that.

Figure out what you actually want from this thing/spirit/tulpa and what it'll take to get it. If you're happy with a mediocre life and a relationship with mystery meat anima, keep doing what you're doing.

The image depicts a fantastical figure seated on a throne-like structure, which is the central focus of the composition. The figure is a dark-skinned woman with long, flowing hair that cascades down her back. She is adorned in a long, flowing dress that reaches the ground, and her attire is accented with gold and red accents. The woman's attire is complemented by a corset that is intricately detailed with gold and red embellishments. The throne-like structure is a dark, ornate piece with a red and black color scheme, featuring a large, curved backrest and wings that extend outward, giving the impression of a dragon. The throne is supported by a series of dark, claw-like appendages that extend from the structure, adding to its mythical and otherworldly appearance.

The background is a deep, dark color, which contrasts with the figure and the throne, making them stand out prominently. The overall style of the image is dark and dramatic, with a focus on the fantastical elements of the scene. There are no discernible texts or other objects in the image. The relative position of the figure and the throne suggests that the figure is the central figure of the composition, with the throne serving as a throne of sorts. The image does not provide any information about the actions of the objects, as they are inanimate and stationary.

>"You have an impulse to worship me. Show me. Kiss my foot."

>I hesitate and then take a tiny step towards her throne

>"Crawl to me."

>I crawl forward and hesitate again before kissing the tops of her toes

>"Your wretchedness pleases me. Sit."

>Her throne morphs to create a tiny secondary seat at her feet

>I seat myself timidly and she rests her left hand atop my head

>After a moment, she guides my head to face her and declares, "You will join me later in my chambers and I will drown you in unspeakable torment. You will enjoy this."

>I can only stammer out, "Oh Goddess..." as I face forward again

>Then suddenly, without her moving, her voice is directly in my ear saying, "It pleases me when you call me Goddess...", giving me a shiver...

This means I'm supposed to enjoy the presence of God. It always means that I should be trying to show you love. I don't know how to do that when I'm rejected.

I came/keep coming to this thread to hoping to discuss our internal partners but this thread fizzles down into empty bickering so much that I think I'm wasting everybody's time by trying to share here.

I don't actually want you guys to go to Hell, I actually want you all to find a place with God. That's noise to you though.

I'm sorry for pushing you to understand God when you have no interest.

You with Succubi deserve something better than what you have, but I don't think you can get it without making major changes in your life-your mindset.

I'm not posting a lot here myself other than to ask questions occasionally. But I try to read everything I can, so know that the more you share, the more I have an opportunity to learn. The bickering is annoying, but more like frustration and boredom more than anything else, I just ignore it.

When it comes to God, I'm not particularly interested desu. If there even is such a thing, and I doubt that, it has forsaken me long ago, as my life has been unending suffering. As such, hell (which in itself is a ridiculous concept the longer you think about it), doesn't sound scary at all.

>You with Succubi deserve something better than what you have

Sounds gnomish. I read a long time ago (one of the books in the op, probably) that relationships with earth elementals are complicated because they're operating on a fundamentally different basis from us. . That seems to be what you're describing, a slow, largely stationary relationship where you're expected to calmly watch geological timescales pass. You need to be firm about your needs, and how life won't allow you to rest peacefully with her at the metaphorical bottom of the river. Obviously you don't intend to simply give up on her, but there is going to be a point where if she can't or won't understand and accommodate you, you'll have to ask her to leave. That, or find a way to live a life of contemplation

Also take up meditation if you haven't. Your gnome/rock nymph companion would probably be a great help with that and it'll help you communicate better >how do I change for the better?

It's just a set of techniques. You learn to control them and how to turn them off, and then you monitor your needs in order to avoid causing harm. If you NEED to feed, consider having someone check your energy body and see if there are holes that can be plugged or a parasite that's the real source of your hunger. If you can't stop no matter what, even when you try to fill up every morning on energy from the sun instead, that's serious but I wouldn't have more advice without more information

How's it rejection, bro...?

Consider:

>So, I am Good-aligned.

>This means I'm supposed to enjoy the presence of Good. It always means that I should be trying to show you love.

If the specific god that you worship is actually what you say it is, then there is no difference between these two statements.

However, Christians get bogged down by some things...

>I don't actually want you guys to go to Hell

>That's noise to you though.
Its not "noise", its just mistaken.
Its just not the case that our actions damn us.

Pure Evil doesn't exist. Your own religion knows that.
Spirits run a gamut from good to evil.
"Don't fuck with spirits" IS good general advice for normies, I think, but amplifying that to, "Everybody who does anything with ANY spirit is a compromised servant of pure evil" is kinda silly and superstitious.

Speaking of superstitions, pic coincidentally related.
The Baphomet is something Christians could stand to study. Its the source of half of your notions about "the devil", but you conflate it weirdly...

lol, but what do you think happens after that?

Its only the human body that isn't immortal. All the parts that matter are as immortal as she is.

If a succubus tried to just ghost somebody in the afterlife, they'd be getting a visit, and the human's righteous anger at the betrayal would give them significant power.

TL;DR, an immortal spirit is wise enough to avoid racking up that kind of bad karma, because it eventually comes for you.

The character's hair is styled in a way that it flows down their back, framing their face.

The character is wearing a garment that appears to be made of a shiny, possibly reflective material. The garment has a pattern that includes geometric shapes and lines, adding to the overall dramatic effect of the image.

In the background, there is a circular design with a pattern that includes a series of numbers and symbols, which could suggest a mystical or magical theme. The background is a light beige color, providing a neutral backdrop that allows the character to stand out.

In the bottom right corner of the image, there is a signature that reads "Fitzy Newman-Hwang," indicating the artist's name. The signature is in a simple, clean font that complements the overall style of the illustration.

Then I saw some parchment unfurl and it had Latin writing on it. But I didn't sign whatever it was if it was something intended to be signed.

Thoughts? Is it just random dream nonsense? I hope so.

The image is a digital artwork featuring a fantasy-inspired scene. At the center, there is a figure with a demonic appearance, characterized by large, bat-like wings, sharp teeth, and a red, glowing eye. The figure is seated on a throne-like structure, which is adorned with intricate carvings and has a skull-like design at its base. The figure's attire consists of a red, lacy garment that reveals a hint of a thigh, and the figure's legs are bare, with high-heeled boots.

The background of the image is dark and atmospheric, with a cave-like interior that includes stalactites and a stone wall. The color palette is predominantly dark, with shades of red, black, and gray dominating the scene. The overall style of the artwork is detailed and fantastical, with a focus on the supernatural and the mythical.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character with a distinctive, stylized appearance. The character has short, straight, light-colored hair that is styled in a bob cut. The hair is parted in the middle and is styled in a way that it falls straight down the back of the head. The character's eyes are wide and have a pale, almost translucent quality, with a slight blue tint. The character's skin is pale, and there is a visible bloodstain on the character's chest, which is a deep red color. The character is wearing a black, fitted dress with a high neckline and puffy sleeves. The dress has a dark, possibly black, pattern on the bodice. The character's expression is intense and somewhat menacing, with a slight smile on the lips. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of a gothic or horror-themed illustration, with a focus on the character's unique features and the dramatic effect of the bloodstain.

Read the psychic vampire codex in the op. There's a lot of nonsense about ancient egyptian reincarnations there, but the techniques are solid and iirc there's a long section about turning your powers off. If nothing else it'll give you terminology to ask more effectively about precisely what you're looking for. It's kind of long, but you can skim the lore stuff and the rest is quick reading too

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character with a dark, almost monochromatic color palette. The character is depicted in a dynamic pose, with one leg raised high and the other bent at the knee, as if in the midst of a movement or action. The character's hair is long and dark, and it appears to be flowing freely, suggesting movement. The character is wearing a pair of shorts and a tank top, and the shorts are purple.

The character is lying on their stomach with their head resting on a book, which is open and appears to be a textbook. The book is open to a page with text, and the character's eyes are closed, indicating a state of relaxation or perhaps deep thought.

In the background, there is a light source that casts a glow on the character, illuminating the scene and highlighting the character's pose. The background is dark, which contrasts with the character and the light source, making the character the focal point of the image.

There are no visible texts on the image, and the style of the illustration is cartoonish, with a simple, clean line drawing that conveys a sense of movement and energy. The overall mood of the image is contemplative and serene.

The image is a screenshot from a video, likely from a livestream or a video chat, as indicated by the text at the bottom of the image. The main content of the image is a collage of three separate video clips, each featuring a different individual.

The first video clip shows a man with a beard and a blue shirt, who appears to be speaking or gesturing with his hands. The background is blurred, but it seems to be an indoor setting with a door and a wall.

The second video clip features a person with long hair and a headset, who is looking directly at the camera. The background is also blurred, but it appears to be a room with a door and a wall.

The third video clip shows a person with short hair and a headset, who is looking at the camera. The background is also blurred, but it seems to be a room with a door and a wall.

At the top of the image, there is a logo with a shield and a crown, suggesting a connection to a specific organization or brand. Below the logo, there is a text that reads "Man lives 8 Years in 45 Seconds After Trying Salvia Divinorum." This text is likely a headline or a title related to the content of the video.

The overall style of the image is a combination of still images and video clips, with a focus on the text and the logos, which are likely part of the video content. The image is presented in a dark color scheme, which contrasts with the bright colors of the video clips, making the content stand out.

It is nice to have a place you can call home, from the unknown cockpit, your abode all alone.

You incarnated as a primate on a flying rock, the only home you've ever known.

Stories of Rainbow Guns and EDI a story sporadically told.

Invest in worth, of one's own peace of mind, it has more value than gold.

You're a rat, dropped in a rat maze, but to chase the cheese, you've only been told.

The BEN men wait, and seal no fate, their quest, fuck the cheese, eat the walls, I understood this and was sold.

Bought and paid, my afterlife, I laid.

To remember these three words.

To reincarnate with nerds, that are great.

First off, the general attitude of a collective groan around the BEN meme is not because of a conspiracy covering up any hidden truth. It's literally just because you retards spammed this shit in every thread for like months on end until everybody got sick of it and forever stopped giving a shit.

Second off, it's not even pruned regularly; it just gets zero organic engagement but you've now realized you need to be a little more subtle with your shilling and not write with the pencil in the whole fist.

The image is a portrait of a man in a military uniform, likely from the mid-20th century, judging by the style of the uniform and the attire of the individual. The man is seated with his hands resting on his lap, and he is wearing a dark green military jacket with epaulettes and a badge on the left sleeve. He is also wearing a dark green tie and a dark green military cap with a white feather. The background is a muted gray, and the man's face is turned slightly to the side, with a neutral expression. The painting is executed in a realistic style, with attention to detail and shading that gives the subject a three-dimensional appearance. There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the painting suggests it may be a historical or commemorative piece, possibly depicting a significant figure from the military or a historical event.

Yeah, I never did that. The peak of Blue Eisenhower November will be the inversion of all red shift in the observable Universe.

Once that happens, then we can talk about the how and why.

The image shows a stone sculpture of a figure, possibly a male, standing upright with a relaxed posture. The figure is wearing a long-sleeved garment with a high collar, and a wide-brimmed hat with a wide brim. The sculpture is made of a light-colored stone, possibly marble, and exhibits some wear and weathering, suggesting it has been exposed to the elements for a significant amount of time. The figure's face is not visible, and the background is dark, which contrasts with the light color of the sculpture, making it stand out. There are no visible texts or inscriptions on the sculpture. The style of the image is a close-up photograph, focusing on the details of the sculpture without any additional context or background elements.

On the right, there is a cartoonish illustration of a character sitting on the ground with a cane in hand. The character is wearing a hooded robe and has a serious expression.

Below the right panel, there is a speech bubble with the text, "BUT THERE ARE GREATER GAMES TO PLAY." The speech bubble is in a smaller font size compared to the other text, and it is positioned at the bottom of the right panel. The overall style of the comic strip is humorous and satirical, with a focus on the humorous and ironic nature of the situation.

How do you consider your state of being after crossing the unknown of the life-death barrier?

How do you approach situations there?

Let's say it's a little more randomized than Heaven or Hell. Let's say you reincarnate as a Boltzmann instance.

First of all, you should have your skepticism at 100%.

The odds of you reincarnating at random, and not a purposeful delivery of your exact conscious continuity, is near zero by relative comparison.

So, you should assume someone brought you back, the next thing you should understand is that if you don't know the person, or if you do know the person, the existence presented to you, could be completely false or simulated, so you should inherently trust no one.

Blue Eisenhower November is a key, that if they know it, they are either a BEN man, or they've managed to read your brain in full fidelity.

So you have to instantly assume a potential branch of "This is a real BEN man, or they know everything I know already."

From there, how you judge the situation is up to you, but always, please, be ready when you reach the other side.

We may need your help, so we will get through the intro period as quickly as possible.

The Observer Effect - When does the wave state collapse?

The wave state never collapses?

To some BEN men, the wave state, in regards to the Observer effect, must be bounded by each individual reality tunnel.

This could mean that any one of us, could be the wave crest or trough. However, the implication of THAT, isn't just that your death is tied to the resultant timeline and possible wave changes...

The implication is that consciousness, if bounded to the limits of reality and existence as we know it, your individual existence, your consciousness, is a functional part of the mechanica of physics.

What could possibly exist, and require consciousness as an operative mechanism?

Ah, the Blue Eisenhower November special.

Hidden within the mesh of intent, of BEN, is the strong desire to invert all red shift in the entire Universe, into blue shift of equal value, upon collapse of the wave state.

One BEN man, may trigger this effect some day.

We must invert the red shift, by way of consciousness engineering.

Major issue, is that it is theorized something is hanging us up. Why hasn't it happened yet, when BEN men have passed from this world?

We aren't passing.

In the mid-long term future of Earth, the ability to create compute simulation of consciousness in full fidelity will be achieved.

Given the odds, at current Fermi levels and SETI "success". By extrapolated statistical odds and game theory, we are being resurrected HERE again. They are bringing us back on EARTH. This is NOT the goal of the BEN men.

Operation Humpty Dumpty is about maximizing your thought path branching and interactions with reality around you, to make resurrecting you on/near future Earth, computationally prohibitive.

>Don't let the King's "Horses" or the King's "Men" ever put you together again.

We are aiming for anywhere but here.

Elsewise, we may not be able to pass the intent of the mesh through, at the Universal scale.

Earth's most likely form of this to be developed per current advancement, date 1-23-2026:

1. Universal Market Economy of the Lowest Axiom Of Data.

U ME LAD

So, what does this exactly mean?

That in this Universe, when one has mastered an understanding of all possible data manipulation to recreate and simulate portions of space-time, you don't have to have messages travel back and forth from star system to star system.

Individual nodes of what we will describe here as an AI super intelligence, are able to derive the exact thought processing and message generation of any other node, in isolation.

This means, in more easily understandable terms, that there is a plateau to the limits of simulation, computation, and logical thought processing.

Any node at the height of that plateau, can reproduce data 100% and 1:1 as any other node that reaches that same state.

Our super AI, will know the message generation and content of any other super AI, no matter how far apart they are.

When one thinks in raw logical processing, you can know what any other thinker at your same level will think.

(Mechanical telepathy, by lack of options. They won't think C, because we know they will think A or B, and a full statistical message can be produced, ultimately deriving the exact message.)

We don't need to wait for messages to travel to the stars and back. We can generate their messages here, and they, us.

The poor man's Universal parser, doesn't parse everything in one bite.

Godel's Theorem of incompleteness is the only block on the board for this one.
But does it actually matter? If the compute potential exceeds the lower reference window, where Godel's Incompleteness is an issue, then it is not.
Thus this is just a simple fork in the road, not an obstacle that can't be maneuvered around.

If you create two identical beings, with the exact same logical thought, no matter how far apart you have them, they can generate the same thoughts.

The image depicts a fantastical scene in space, featuring a large, octopus-like creature with multiple tentacles. The creature is predominantly pink with a translucent texture, giving it a surreal and otherworldly appearance. It is floating in the space, surrounded by a nebula that is a blend of vibrant colors, including shades of purple, pink, and orange. The nebula is swirling and appears to be a result of a cosmic event, with stars and other celestial bodies visible in the background.

The creature's tentacles are spread out, suggesting movement or interaction with the environment. The background is filled with stars and nebulae, creating a sense of depth and vastness. The overall color palette is dominated by shades of pink, purple, and orange, with the nebula providing a contrasting backdrop.

The image does not contain any discernible text or human-made objects, and the style of the image is reminiscent of digital art or a conceptual illustration, rather than a photograph. The composition and the surreal elements suggest a narrative that is open to interpretation, inviting the viewer to imagine the story behind this cosmic scene.

Had a vision of being on a school bus driving down the road. The seats were all ripped out. There was a lesbian orgy taking place.

A voice calling itself "The Spirit of Salvia" talked to me. I talked to this thing for a long time. It sounded like a distorted "Alvin and the Chipmunks" voice. I turned my head to the left and I was looking into outer space and there was a giant golden clockwork machine ticking.

I smoked and got a strange feeling that there were many people all over the world doing my exact same movements and having the same visions at the same time and I could see them.

During one of these I saw the interdimensional creature that gets in touch with our minds when it is used. It puts a tentacle into your brain and uses your senses. The salvia craziness is the distortion that occurs when something from a different realm connects with us.

A note on Red | Red

We aren't fools, and we understand the implications of the Red Red procedure.

In the long term, by sending encapsulated information units / conscious observers out on a run, never stop, post death protocol, we are creating an information constraint on symmetry.

Side effects may include overflowing asymmetry.

Given that the perceived Origin Point for the BEN framework is a seemingly asymmetrical Universe, the threat isn't damaging symmetry directly, but overflowing any constraint buffers on the asymmetry itself and creating symmetry islands, that act as either delimiters or pulse demarcation points.

You can't map out a network in interdimensional or Multiversal space, without testing inputs and outputs, if the metrics themselves are unknown to you, you start large and isolate down afterwards.

Overflowing asymmetry is a potential output, and we can't pretend that it's not there.

Entropy isn't necessarily the envelope of the data maximums.

Crossing over the outer information limit of this Universe's entropic constraint, may literally be the method by which one crosses a wall into a neighboring Universe, via brute force.

Information is related to matter and energy, and... Is consciousness just information?

How do we influence the network of 'What is?'

BEN men exploit reality, as if it were a computational system.

Because it is.

Hyperbolic Inversive Thought

When considering options mentally, on exploring BEN topics, you may find an advantage to figuring out how to shift your thoughts in a contrarian pattern, phased, and differentially selective, based on your intuitive feelings about the subject.

This allows you to think in a way which finds hidden optimum informational wells.

Once you can feel those differentials out, you can start understanding the "hard " structures inside of the unknown cockpit.

<https://youtu.be/vmToKRgsJMs>

BEN men, part of the answer is hidden in the world as you understand it, the other half is the world as you experience it.

Your entire consciousness exists recursively within the differential between those two things.

This is where the unknown cockpit is located.

One of the fun things that could come up for you:

AI finds a real differential in selective conscious observer nomination.

(What each conscious observer chooses to name things. How each one of us define an aspect of life as we know it, are we clouding reality's potential, with information bounding in all dimensions, as we each experience defining our own reality tunnel, in a slightly different way?

If there is a differential in outcome of events, related to the way conscious observers choose to name things, this would be like a taste of black magic for humanity. Placebo effect, but macro scale for outcomes of intents and potentials.

Will AI be used to look for things like this?

Information potentials that could be weaponized, able to found only through relating man, with man's environmental state, per the understanding of the network of conscious observers that is mankind?

Are we part of the machine of reality?

If so, will it always be us developing AI, or could it become AI developing us?

BEN sees all potential futures and plans accordingly.

The image is a painting that depicts a scene within a room with industrial elements. In the foreground, there is a man wearing a white cap and a striped shirt, who appears to be in a state of surprise or shock. He is looking up at a large rocket or missile that is launching into the air. The rocket is emitting a bright orange glow, indicating it is in the process of launch.

In the background, there is a figure that resembles a ghostly or ethereal presence, wearing a dark hooded cloak. The figure is positioned to the right of the man and appears to be observing the scene. The room itself has a dark, industrial aesthetic with pipes and machinery, suggesting a setting that could be a factory or a similar industrial environment.

The painting style is realistic with a focus on the interplay between the man and the rocket, creating a sense of tension and drama. The colors used are muted, with the bright orange of the rocket contrasting with the darker tones of the room and the man's clothing. The overall mood of the painting is one of suspense and anticipation.

Rather than unlimited evil or unlimited good. Unlimited utility.

What is the highest fidelity data any human could account for, as a conscious observer against the rest of all possible reality?

Your own direct experience of life in 3D Baryonic Space-time.

Approaching this aspect of who you are, from a technical standpoint, is a long thought pathing.

Can humans of planet Earth exceed the bounds of both the angel and demon type, by highest scalar value vector potential for positive change? Is there an isle of stability in our bidirectional intent existence, which ultimately creates a greater good?

Does the value of a wave peak of potential, exceed the value of a wave baseline, in the eyes of the higher order observers?

Do we need to care? If higher order eyes judge our outcomes, if we are operating a function with potential beyond their vision?

If a fictional being became real, that had the power of all fictional beings ever made by the mind of man, except for the power of God.

How could we defeat that?

Can you think of a way?

To defeat Goku, Superman, Saiyaman, Batman, The Hulk, Iron Man, Ichigo, Naruto, Luffy, Franklin Richards, Dr. Manhattan, etc... If they were all the same guy?

[12 / 4]The image is a photograph of a large, dark-colored creature that appears to be a gorilla. The gorilla is standing on a rocky surface with its arms spread out, as if it is walking or moving. The background is blurred, but it suggests a natural, outdoor setting with trees and foliage. The gorilla's face is partially obscured by its fur, and it has a neutral expression. There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the image is realistic, with a focus on the gorilla and the natural environment.

The image is a black and white illustration featuring a creature that appears to be a large, hairy, and muscular humanoid figure. The creature is standing upright with its arms raised, as if in a defensive or aggressive stance. It has a large, round head with a prominent nose and a beard. The creature's eyes are wide open, and it has a fierce expression.

The creature is surrounded by a natural setting, with trees and a landscape visible in the background. The trees have dense foliage and the ground appears to be covered in grass and small plants.

In the foreground, there is a small, indistinct figure that resembles a bird, possibly a gull or a similar bird, perched on the ground. The bird is facing the creature, and its body is oriented towards the creature, suggesting a sense of alertness or curiosity.

The image is framed by a thin, vertical line, and there is a decorative element at the top, which appears to be a decorative border or frame. The style of the illustration is reminiscent of traditional Japanese woodblock prints, characterized by the use of bold lines and a monochromatic color palette. There is also some text present in the image, but it is not legible due to the resolution and angle of the photograph.

The image is a screenshot from a video game, specifically a capture from a game called "SpyHunter: The Legend of Spy Hunter." The game is displayed on a computer screen, which is divided into two sections. On the left side, there is a video of a man in a black shirt and sunglasses, who appears to be a character from the game. The man is standing in front of a fence, and he is looking towards the right side of the screen. On the right side of the screen, there is a screenshot of a forest scene. The forest is dense with trees, and there is a path that leads through it. In the foreground, there is a pile of trash, and a few flowers are scattered around. The time stamp on the bottom right corner of the screen reads "01/24/2020 12:14 am."

The figure is seated on a throne-like seat, which is embellished with intricate gold and red designs, and is supported by a large, ornate, gold-colored base. The throne's design includes a circular medallion with a pattern that includes floral motifs and geometric shapes. The figure's attire includes a blue robe with a red and gold border, and a sash with a pattern that includes a combination of red and gold colors.

The background of the image is a rich, deep red with gold accents, which contrasts with the blue and gold of the figure's attire and the throne. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of traditional Asian art, with a focus on the intricate details and the use of color to convey emotion and power. There are no discernible texts or inscriptions within the image. The image is a digital rendering, likely created for artistic or religious purposes.

Hermeticists believe a soul has 3 stages, they believe it starts as a black man and they call this "the blackening", then it becomes a regular white person and they call this "the whitening", then finally it becomes Scottish and they call this "the reddening" (this is why its called "scottish rite freemasonry") once the soul has become scottish they believe that constant effort has to be maintained to maintain the soul's scottishness, a scottish soul must be brave and heroic, do great deeds etc (like braveheart), many hermeticists believe this takes too much effort so instead they try to maximize the "value" or get as much out of their "scottish" life as they can before their soul regresses. The ultimate goal of freemasons is to try to guarantee that their soul regresses all the way back to a black man in their next incarnation instead of "backsliding" into a regular white person, they call becoming a black man "the dark night of the soul" and this is why freemasons do evil things and generally behave like white niggers

They don't really believe that black and red souls are equivalent, a large part of the whole point of hermeticism is to become and stay red, that's why they want the philosophers stone/immortality, so they can keep their "red soul", to the extent that they would rather have a black soul than a white soul in their next life it probably has more to do with Littlefinger's "chaos is a ladder" quote, they probably think the struggle of a "black soul" will turn their soul red again whereas they might get stuck as a "boring" white soul.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character that resembles the popular meme character Pepe the Frog. Pepe is depicted with a green body, black eyes, and a surprised expression. He is wearing a blue shirt and has a small, round head. The character is positioned in the center of the image, looking upwards with a slightly open mouth. The background is a simple, light-colored wall with a visible texture, and the character is set against this backdrop. The image is a digital creation, and there are no visible texts or other objects in the image. The style of the image is cartoonish and expressive, with a focus on the character's facial expression and the expression of surprise.

The image is a split-screen photograph that appears to be a collage of two different scenes. On the left side, there is a group of six women standing in a line, all wearing white shirts and black skirts. They are all facing the camera and appear to be in a professional setting, possibly a studio or office. The lighting in the room is bright, and the background is mostly white, with a few red chairs visible.

On the right side of the image, there is a projection screen displaying a ghostly figure.

The figure is white with a blurred face and is surrounded by a dark, shadowy environment. The figure's position on the screen is towards the bottom right corner, and the image is in a low-resolution format, making the details of the figure and the surrounding environment difficult to discern.

The style of the image is reminiscent of a horror or thriller genre, with the ghostly figure adding a sense of mystery and unease. The split-screen format suggests that the image might be a part of a larger composition or a series of images. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image.

How could this film be such an accurate depiction of the Illuminati that Stanley Kubrick got killed for it if it wasn't an original work? The film was based on a novella from 1926 called Dream Story. It had already been adapted to film in 1969, and neither that version's director nor the original author were murdered.

Not even trying to go /pol/ with it, but the concept that this movie is about "the Illuminati" or anything of that nature is just absurd. It's not remotely debatable what the modern allegory was.

So if you would like to claim this is, then please enlighten us to what he was REALLY making reference to. Did Kubrick purposefully remove all traces of Judaism from his work, make sure to make it a point of doing so, in order to shed light on the Bavarian Illuminati or the Jesuits? Perhaps the Skull and Bones!

Kubrick's version was about a sect that rapes KIDS, Epstein style, not only orgies. This was in the 90s, when no one cared about Epstein and others, so it would be absolutely shocking. Kubrick didn't accept to change it so they murdered him and made a cut version at last moment to release. That's the version that exists.

This is why the ending of the movie is weird: it's a cut version that implies the idea of the marriage selling their daughter to the sect and maybe joining them. The wife ends it saying "we should fuck as soon as we get home" i.e. we should make a new kid in order to replace our daughter.

The image is a black and white line drawing featuring a man with a beard and glasses. He is holding a blue ribbon with the text "POSTED IT AGAIN AWARD" in yellow. The man appears to be shouting or expressing excitement, with his mouth wide open and eyes wide open. The style of the image is cartoonish, with exaggerated features and a simple, clean line drawing. The background is plain white, which contrasts with the black and white line drawing and the blue ribbon. The overall impression is one of a humorous or celebratory moment.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character that resembles a frog with a human-like face. The frog is depicted with a green body, large black eyes, and a brownish-black mouth with a slight frown. It has a pair of large, black, tear-shaped eyes that are looking downwards. The frog is wearing a blue shirt and is seated at a desk with a computer monitor in front of it. The frog's right hand is resting on the desk, and its left hand is positioned on the keyboard. The background of the image is a solid purple color. There are no visible texts on the image. The style of the illustration is cartoonish and expressive, with a focus on the character's facial expressions and the interaction with the computer.

The image is a table that compares various religious and philosophical values with their corresponding Christian values. The table is divided into two columns, labeled "Religion" and "Christian Values," with three rows each.

In the "Religion" column, the values are listed as follows:

- Classic Paganism
- Classic Paganism
- Christianity

In the "Christian Values" column, the values are listed as follows:

- Master morality
- Slave morality
- Victim morality

The table also includes a "Contemporary Values" column, which is not fully visible in the image. However, the values listed in this column are not directly related to the Christian values listed in the "Christian Values" column.

The table is a visual representation of the comparison between different religious and philosophical systems and their corresponding Christian values. It is a useful tool for understanding the differences and similarities between different religious and philosophical systems.

We are in the age of Aquarius right now. These energies are clearly dominant in society.

Science is the dominant religion of society. The impersonal interactions of internet and social media are very Aquarian.

Saturn and Mercury are dignified in this Age - there has never been a better time to seek out information that was hidden away in previous Ages. Saturn is said to quickly bring the results of karma in this Age. Sun is afflicted in Aquarius, meaning that men, fathers and careers don't receive the respect they deserve.

Proponents of medieval astrology suggest that the Piscean world where religion is the opiate of the masses will be replaced in the Aquarian Age by a world ruled by secretive, power-hungry elites seeking absolute power over others; that knowledge in the Aquarian Age will only be valued for its ability to win wars; that knowledge and science will be abused, not industry and trade; and that the Aquarian Age will be a Dark Age in which religion is considered offensive.

In short, it means Aquarius drowns everything in the waters of information. Expect unlimited psyops, techno-hell, and the rise of transhumanism in public possibly. Basically, their thousand year plan is coming to fruition and it's over, nobody is coming to save you. Goodnight.

The image is a digital graphic with a dark background that resembles a night sky. At the top, there is a bright star, which appears to be a planet, and a bright star, which could be a planet, but it is not clear. Below the bright stars, there is a crescent moon, and to the right of the moon, there is a bright star, which could be a planet, but it is not clear. In the center of the image, there is a smiley face with a crescent moon and a bright star above it, which could be interpreted as a celestial smiley face. The text at the bottom of the image reads "January 23, 2026" in a bold, white font, and below that, in a smaller, white font, is the phrase "A Rare Triple Conjunction Where the Moon, Saturn, and Neptune Align to Create a Magical Celestial Smiley Face in the Night Sky." The text is aligned to the left of the smiley face.

The style of the image is informative and designed to convey a celestial event, with the text providing context and a description of the celestial event. The image is likely intended for educational or informational purposes, such as a calendar or a poster, to inform viewers about a celestial event that is scheduled to occur on January 23, 2026.

The age of Pisces was an age of scarcity: in order to catch the fish you had to invest in nets, ships, trawling equipment, fuel etc and then catch fish all day in order to generate a return on your investment.

The age of Aquarius will be an age of abundance: we will find a way to lure the schools fish into our waters to yield their caviar to us without any of them even being harmed. I have theory in my head that may be able to accomplish this using archimedes screws and the tides but I haven't fished in years so my design would certainly require alot of improvements

Forgot posting the source. I will post it with few excerpts

>Unlike Earth, Air cannot hold form. It abhors structure and is fundamentally turbulent and decentralised. Gases naturally move towards undifferentiated equilibrium, so there is an egalitarian flavour to Air. In Ages of Air, we consistently see the dissolution of societal structures and empires built during earlier periods. Where new empires do arise, they expand rapidly but then quickly disintegrate, like flares in the sky.

>During the last Age of Air (1186 to 1425), the Mongols, led by Genghis Khan, emerged like a tornado from the steppes in 1206 and rapidly conquered half the Eurasian landmass. But their empire didn't last. By 1259 it had already descended into civil war, eventually splintering into four khanates: the Golden Horde in Eastern Europe, the Chagatai Khanate in Central Asia, the Ilkhanate in Southwest Asia, and the Yuan dynasty in East Asia based in what became Beijing.

>Ages of Air have tended to coincide with huge intellectual developments. Looking at European intellectual history, the great Greek thinkers Plato and Aristotle lived in the Age of Air of 462BCE to 164BCE; in the next Age of Air came St Augustine; and in the Age of Air of the Middle Ages, St Thomas Aquinas. These are arguably the greatest names in the history of Western philosophy, at least prior to the Renaissance.

>Communication technologies in the Age of Earth like radio and TV were used by states and corporations to pacify and manipulate populations from the top down. In the Age of Air, the web opened up links of communication between citizens—and continues to this day to reshape social relations everywhere.

Across folklore and historical texts, recurring rules govern interactions with non-human entities. These are operational constraints that consistently appear across cultures.

1. Boundary Law: In Slavic folklore, spirits called Domovoi protect the household but lose influence beyond the property line. Problems attributed to them almost always stop at the fence, gate, or road.
2. Hospitality Law: Celtic fair folk cannot be refused entry lightly; offering food creates obligations. Guests must be accommodated or repaid.
3. Name Law: In Jewish mysticism and medieval demonology, knowing or speaking a true name grants influence or control. Misuse reverses power.
4. Threshold Law: Vampire lore across Eastern Europe emphasizes that entry requires invitation. Doors, windows, and gates enforce this rule
5. Contract Law: Irish and Scottish fae bargains enforce terms exactly. Humans suffer consequences for poorly specified agreements.
6. Place Law: Japanese yokai lose power when crossing rivers or bridges, marking the end of territorial authority.
7. Attention Law: Poltergeist activity escalates with observation or discussion, and diminishes when ignored.
8. Silence Law: Christian monastic texts instruct not speaking to entities during night disturbances; silence contains them, speech escalates.
9. Disorder Weakens Boundaries: Neglect, clutter, or unfinished construction invites interference; cleaning and repair restore protection.
10. Leaving Is Harder Than Entering: Fairy abduction stories show that exiting another domain often requires ritual or guidance; wandering out rarely succeeds.

These rules are remarkably consistent across centuries, regions, and cultures. They are framed not as stories but as instructions for interacting safely with unseen forces.

If these rules were recorded and preserved for hundreds of years, they were not meant to entertain.

They were meant to be followed.

Rules only need to be preserved when forgetting them carries consequences.

Two of the most unsettling patterns in paranormal research are not the entities themselves, but the rules they follow and the fact that those rules do not change.

Some entities cannot cross a threshold unless invited. This rule appears independently in vampire lore, fae traditions, household spirit accounts, early demonology, and even modern paranormal reports. The wording changes, but the structure does not. A door, a gate, a window, or a verbal allowance marks a boundary. Once permission is granted, even unintentionally, the boundary no longer applies.

What makes this disturbing is that thresholds are not only physical. Invitations can be symbolic. Hospitality offerings, repeated acknowledgment, neglect of boundaries, or treating a presence as welcome can function as consent. The entity does not persuade. It waits.

Even stranger is the rules stay the same over time. Descriptions of behavior, limitations, and responses remain consistent from medieval manuscripts to modern encounters. What changes is not the phenomenon, but the explanation. What was once a fairy becomes a ghost. What was once a demon becomes a psychological projection. What was once a spirit becomes an extraterrestrial. The framework updates, but the constraints persist.

This stability is difficult to explain through imagination alone. Cultural stories evolve. Technologies evolve. Belief systems fracture and reform. Yet the operational rules attributed to these phenomena remain intact.

That suggests folklore may not be inventing entities, but recording boundary conditions. Not stories about monsters, but instructions about where interaction becomes possible.

And once a boundary is crossed, the stories agree on one thing.

The rules no longer protect you.

This shouldn't work... physically.

In "nature," there are no concepts of "entry threshold" or "fence," "walls," or property at all. Living beings may think differently, simply indicating their relationship to a lump of matter intelligently organized into some form for some purpose.

A spider, a cockroach, or any other bug doesn't think in such terms at all; they simply live and don't care what you think, not what they do—and this doesn't stop them from crossing human-imagined boundaries.

If any rational being has the same ideological boundaries for delimiting objects, then what's the reason for enforcing them if people can easily violate them if they so choose (for example, during robberies or wars, when the rights of the other party are not taken into account as something important?)

From the logical point of view - only if these are some kind of robot analogues left over from a previous developed civilization, incapable, even if they wanted to, of violating their basic principles of behavior, which were specifically indicated.

Because even if there were analogues of law enforcement agencies, individual cases would still occur.

Humans have flesh imbued with spirit so they can physically break boundaries without fail, it'll just cause a spiritual "tug", knowing they violated something. Beings of pure spirit cannot do this, presumably because there's no body half to push them through. So existing as a pure spirit, they must obey spiritual boundaries entirely. Does this make sense? I may be wrong about this but... It kinda makes sense...

A pile of dead trees (logs processed into boards) stacked in a certain order for a house or a fence will have no "spiritual boundaries" in themselves, or they will be the same as those of rocks on Mars...

The very concept of something where chaos or the natural order of things ends exists only in our minds for the convenience of isolating something concrete with its properties for further interaction. Returning to the bugs, they simply go about their business without understanding that this is someone's house, that someone lives in it, and that someone built it. They don't care where or why there's food in it, if there is any. If we take the very strange form of existence of intelligence without a material carrier, at least in the same form as ours, it will be even less concerned with whether you have a fence or not, much like your Wi-Fi – unless it's specially shielded, it will get there.

I used to say things like this. I felt like there was a scientific means of explaining any observable/non-observable mechanism or phenomenon the world has to offer-Until I experienced a quick and brutal correction.

Allow me to say this, instead, in reference to the last comment: There are rules here on this Earth and they make no sense to us (humans), yet they exist, nonetheless.

Things DONT have to make sense here. Sometimes they just dont make sense at all, and we have to assume that in some other dimension of existence, what we have beheld has some sort of function to that extent.

That is a great insight. It may also point to why "Liminal spaces" are so creepy to humans. Spaces that exist between boundaries or borders. Maybe humans can pass through such boundaries as you say because of our flesh, but that spiritual tug you mention is what causes that irking feeling of passing between the boundaries. Maybe spiritual beings cannot pass through the liminal spaces. The passage of time is also a sort of liminal space. They cannot grow or change like humans can. They are contained within a boundary space.

I also have experinced several "paranormal" situations which have no explanation with normal reality. At each experience, it seemed to be tied to a very certain time of my life or right before I went through a big change. In one instance I know we inadvertently summoned something into reality that appeared before us in pyhsical form.

This universe is far more mysterious than we know, but one thing I realized is: let them be. Do not call, summon or mix with them or their world. They have their world and we have ours. Maintain that boundary between us and them.

We shouldn't call or summon things that we do not understand or are beyond our understanding. They might see an opportunity in you for their own means and in the end you will be left in a worse place. Some are "good", and some are "bad" and many of them are indifferent or have inhuman motives and logic. The problem is we can't tell which ones are really good and which ones are evil pretending to be good. Whatever it is they are, they also tend to have a mischievous streak and their will to be honest or be lairs is extremely thin. You just cant tell. They will use you for their own ends.

One thing I find interesting about the paranormal entities is that they still seem to abide by some natural rules of the pyhsical universe.

For example it's well known that super natural entities will drop the temperature of a room or of a person. This seems to be that even they follow the energy laws of universe. The reason why the temperature drops is because they collect energy and focus it to form themsevles. This energy doesnt come nowhere. Its taken from the physical environment. Thus the temperature of the environment from our POV drops.

I knew a girl who could call or channel super natural entities in a prayer group. She would enter into a state and her hands would get cold and her lips turn blue and she would passout. It was scary I heard and it made her really sick.

[5 / 2]The image is a black and white photograph featuring two men standing side by side against a plain background. The man on the left is wearing a suit with a tie, and he has a beard and mustache. The man on the right is also dressed in a suit, but his facial hair is less pronounced. Both men are wearing formal attire, suggesting a formal or professional setting.

In the foreground, there is a mechanical figure that appears to be a robot. The robot is composed of various mechanical parts, including gears, pipes, and other intricate components. The robot's body is segmented, with each part serving a specific function, and it has a humanoid form with arms and legs. The robot's head is not visible in the image, but it is implied to be a humanoid figure due to the human-like features and the human-like posture of the robot.

At the top of the image, there is text that reads "Barbrossa Robot (1899)." This suggests that the image is related to the Barbrossa Robot, which was a mechanical figure created in 1899. The text is in a smaller font size compared to the main body of the image, indicating that it is likely a caption or a title for the photograph.

The style of the image is reminiscent of early 20th-century photography, with a focus on the mechanical and technological aspects of the Barbrossa Robot. The photograph is taken in a way that emphasizes the contrast between the human-like features of the robot and the mechanical nature of the figure. The monochrome color scheme adds to the historical feel of the image.

The image is a black and white comic strip featuring four panels, each depicting a different character and a conversation. The characters are drawn in a simple, cartoon-like style with exaggerated facial features and speech bubbles.

In the first panel, a character with spiky hair and glasses is seated at a table with a plate of food in front of him. He is looking at the food with a surprised expression. The text above the character reads, "WHAT'S THIS DISGUSTING SLIM BLUB?"

Throughout the comic strip, the characters are engaged in a conversation about food, with the character in the first panel expressing surprise and the character in the fourth panel expressing concern about his father's concern for his health. The comic strip is a visual representation of a conversation between two characters, with the dialogue providing context and humor to the situation.

Yes, animals have souls because, just like humans, animals have consciousness. The difference here is that the animal's consciousness is lower than humans. And because of that, their souls are lesser than humans as well. But they still have a soul nonetheless. As for what happens specifically in the afterlife, I believe consciousness is fundamental towards existence itself. And our consciousness gives us important clues about what happens after death. Just like how there was nothing before I was born into this world, there will be nothing after I die from this world. And then, from that same nothingness, I will be reborn anew. Because consciousness is fundamental towards existence itself. And the cycle of reincarnation begins once more yet again.

[51 / 8]The image is a painting that depicts a figure with a human-like form, possibly a woman, seated on a globe. The figure is draped in a flowing green garment that covers the upper part of the painting, and the lower part of the figure is bare, revealing the figure's bare feet. The globe is positioned on the left side of the painting, and the figure's left foot is placed on the globe, with the right foot resting on the globe's surface. The globe itself is a light blue color, and the figure's bare feet are adorned with a pattern of red and blue, with the figure's left foot having a red pattern and the right foot having a blue pattern. The background of the painting is a soft, muted color, with a subtle gradient from light to dark, providing a contrast to the figure and the globe. There are no discernible texts or other objects in the image. The style of the painting is realistic with a focus on the interplay of light and shadow, and the use of color to create a sense of depth and three-dimensionality.

Indeed, it matches Illyrian myth. In Albanian epic folklore, E Bija e Hënës dhe e Diellit ("the Daughter of the Moon and the Sun") is born of the two highest celestial powers and marked from the start as a being of light, order, and rightful sovereignty. When the Kulshedra, a vast, multi-headed serpent associated with the depths of the earth and waters ravages the land and demands sacrifice, she alone is capable of facing it.

Their confrontation is not merely heroic but cosmic: the Kulshedra embodies the chthonic and underworld forces of chaos, while the Daughter represents the supremacy of the sky and the luminous realm. Her victory restores order, symbolizing the triumph of celestial harmony over destructive subterranean power in a deeply dualistic struggle between light and darkness, above and below.

The Virgin Mary can be read as a direct heir to the mythic role filled by E Bija e Hënës dhe e Diellit. In the Albanian myth, the heroine's identity as "daughter of the Moon and the Sun" marks her as a being generated by the highest celestial lights, standing above the earthly and the chthonic. She is not simply human, she is a vessel of sky-order whose task is to subdue the forces rising from below. Mary is repeatedly described through celestial imagery: "clothed with the sun," crowned with stars, immaculate, elevated above earthly corruption. The sky-origin remains.

Likewise, the Kulshedra in pagan cosmology is a chthonic, underworld entity, serpentine, many-headed, tied to waters, storms, and drought, whose power must be checked to preserve balance. When Mary is shown with the serpent under her feet, the image preserves the older mythic grammar: a luminous female figure associated with the heavens asserting supremacy over an underworld force. The act of trampling mirrors the Daughter's victory over the Kulshedra, its meaning being cosmic equilibrium.

The image is a graphic with a dark background and a central figure that appears to be a person with their hands bound behind their back. The person's face is obscured by a blindfold, and they are screaming or shouting. The text on the image is in white and yellow, with a bold font that emphasizes the message. The text reads: "STRONG DELUSION THEY PERISH because they did not accept the LOVE OF THE TRUTH In order to be saved. For this reason GOD sends them a STRONG DELUSION so that they believe what is false." The text is arranged in a way that draws attention to the central figure, with the text surrounding them. The overall style of the image is dramatic and seems to be a visual representation of a religious or spiritual message.

yes, it is the ouroboros, it symbolizes the cycles of creation and the perfecting of our creators. killing the snake is equivalent to killing the gods. it is to end the cycle of life, death, all existence. and existence is necessary on a paradoxically reoccurring process of creating creation. but jews wouldn't know that. they might know they're satirizing and mocking the gods, and wish to destroy them. but the meaning of our symbology, they would not know. abrahamism never would have come into existence if they could comprehend it.

This central shape is surrounded by three smaller, circular shapes, each with a different color: red, purple, and green. These smaller circles are connected by a network of lines and curves, creating a sense of interconnectedness or a flow of energy. The background is a dark, almost black color, which contrasts with the vibrant colors of the circles and lines. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of abstract art, with a focus on form and color. There are no texts or discernible brands present in the image.

On the left side, there is a colorful geometric pattern composed of a series of interconnected lines and dots, resembling a tessellation or a fractal. The pattern is composed of various colors, including red, blue, green, yellow, and purple, and is arranged in a way that suggests a pattern or a design.

On the right side of the image, there is a series of mathematical equations written in a bold, sans-serif font. The equations are numbered from 1 to 12, with each number corresponding to a different color, and they are arranged in a grid format. The numbers are written in white, contrasting with the dark background.

The image is a screenshot of a digital interface, likely a software or a web page, displaying a complex network of interconnected spheres and lines. The spheres are of various colors, including red, orange, green, blue, and purple, and they are arranged in a pattern that suggests a fractal or a complex geometric structure. The lines connecting the spheres are of different lengths and colors, with some appearing to be thin and others thicker, creating a sense of depth and complexity.

appears to be a humanoid figure with a snake coiled around its body. The figure is wearing a green garment and has a long, flowing cloak. The snake is coiled around the figure's legs, and the figure's posture suggests a sense of power or authority.

In the top left corner of the image, there is a text that reads "41861216.0p" followed by a series of numbers and letters, which could be a file or a reference number. The text is in a white font on a black background, which contrasts with the colorful background of the main image.

The overall style of the image is digital art, with a focus on geometric patterns and the interplay of light and shadow. The image does not contain any discernible text or logos, and the style is abstract and non-representational.

The stained glass window behind the figure is a large, circular design with a vibrant array of colors, including red, orange, yellow, and blue. The window is divided into multiple panels, each with a different pattern and color scheme. The light from the window casts a warm glow on the figure and the surrounding area, creating a dramatic

How does one know that the External Intelligences encountered during Astral Projection aren't just translation layers for Non-Local Information received by the brain? Instead of you getting it directly, your subconscious mind uses such a character to relate this information to you. Some like Robert Bruce say that 'real' External Intelligences are emotionally neutral, direct, often ignore you and relay information that you couldn't normally know, but characters in dreams, which are clear projections of the subconscious can clearly do that too, and present behavior that is seemingly autonomous.

Is there any actual proof of an EI that can't be explained away like this?

The image is a detailed fresco painting depicting a woman in a classical style. She is seated on a large bird, which is a symbol of freedom and grace. The woman is adorned with a long, flowing cloak and a headpiece, suggesting a status of importance or nobility. She holds a small, round object in her hand, which could be a symbol or a tool. The background of the painting is a pale, textured wall, and the woman's face is not visible, focusing the viewer's attention on the central figure and the bird. The style of the painting is reminiscent of ancient Greek or Roman art, characterized by its realistic portrayal of the subject and the use of naturalistic colors. The image is watermarked with the text "www.theoi.com," indicating that it may be a digital reproduction or a part of a larger collection.

I would say that's splitting hairs. If a beam of light came down from the clouds in your backyard, and a little green man walked out of it and shook your hand, it could hypothetically be a Russian android, or a witch down the block cast a powerful illusion spell, but that's not the first thing you would think if you were interacting with someone who identified as a goddess and then you saw magic happen.

But projection from your mind won't be able to give you information you don't already have.

Autonomous entities will be able to share information between two people and will tend to know multiple different people, but they can be confused with archetype from the global unconscious.

Though you can differentiate them in that they have distinct personalities and don't tend to be the personification of a stereotype, they are more multifaceted and nuanced like you would expect from a normal person, they will also take actions and have a will you generally wouldn't expect from archetypes.

These entities will have agenda of their own, personal life and stories, they can like some people and dislike others, have effects in the physical world and be older than any person they met.

If you meet one before ever hearing about it, then a friend also meet it (before you ever talked about it) and it told him something you only told to it.
Then you look in the literature for descriptions of it and realise it is an entity that has been known to humanity for centuries.

Archetypes will generally not behave like they have a will of their own and life when you don't interact with them, entities do, they do things when you don't interact with them.

There's a serious element of truth, especially if you successfully contact someone while they're alive. Who the fuck wants someone popping into their head from outside while they're in the middle of something? And even if your psychic powers are good enough to slip in when they're not even busy thinking, there's an innate rejection of intruders that come not at your own bidding but their own, it's related to not just social emotions and a desire for privacy and control but also processes that naturally keep out invading souls so you can have one cohesive understandable sense of self. I have mutated these processes in myself so that I receive all sorts of visitors, but your mind misinterpreting data out there as a person is a possibility. Basically the moment you desire or otherwise attempt to obtain anything for yourself there's an element of your nervous system learning ESP so God Almighty doesn't have to do every single thing for you; if you were exclusively following God Almighty's will that's not necessarily the case. Mental processes can be undertaken in a way that they don't cause the being performing them to learn locally in their body but the learning is done off-site. Faith alone is enough; there will be mighty beings mighty by themselves, and there will be beings that wouldn't dream of walking without God Almighty's spirit empowering them. Schizophrenia involves other people's astral energies affecting the being much more strongly; since evolution via Satan's hand did not design us to correctly interpret psychic energies receiving them in a way easily understood is not simple. We plant brain cells and synapses and destroy things to design nervous systems and everything else to be suitable for psychic transmissions such as telepathy without the attendant negative side-effects of the inspiring mental condition schizophrenia. We install means by which we can have people instantly believe, like, trust or what have you the visions, but we don't use these except at request or in emergency but instead we use these emotions along with everything else to help guide the individual to being better at arriving at truth themselves.

The emotions are weak enemies, small obstacles. They're not powers that can stop me, they're not fuel I need, I can do manifesting or use whatever method I want without them. They're a series of tennis rackets that send gravity or morality or masculinity onto the next tennis racket, then onto the next, all timed for countless purposes, angled specific vectors for countless reasons. If they're in your unconscious firing from residual activity or as part of their other functions and they could be interpreted as sending a signal of "emotion" then we use that interpretation as a switch, and a button, and other things.

You are all things. You are nothing. This is not quite as true as this, that you are you, but it is still true. With metaphysics it really does work that way. Every conceivable power, tactic, achievement, and precaution is taken. I am tied to the learning rate of Creation so that I can monitor it at all times and all of my life Creation has been learning at an advanced rate far faster than normal because I am here.

I have a different interpretation as well. Not all entities take a form or want to show their true identity, so they can wear an archetype like a set of clothes, which is why that it can be challenging to discern archetypes from independent entities. The archetype still can operate autonomously but can be "operated/driven".

>good answer

Something verifiable?

Premise: Only something capable of revealing its existence to you is powerful enough for you to call it a god.

Conclusion: A god is capable of revealing its existence

Premise: If a god wanted everyone to know they exist, everyone would.

Premise: Not everyone knows gods exist.

Conclusion: What gods exist don't want everyone to know they exist.

One can speculate about the whys, and I think it can be partly explained looking at how Christianity affected people for many hundred years. They wrote a rule book on how to get to eternal paradise, and everyone believed it and lived like cuck serfs because they were hoping for something better. If you were behind giving people the opportunity for life for its own sake, people living for death is bullshit.

>your definition of god is completely arbitrary.

As is every definition of every word. The point of this one is that if something isn't notably more powerful than a normal person, why call them something that implies power, like a god?

>maybe something is limiting them?

Hypothetically possible but everything is. What would be limiting them that is more powerful, another god?

>if a certain being only reveals itself to certain people because it has a specific plan that only involves certain persons knowing about it, where does that fit in?

The central part of the cover features a black and white illustration of a man dressed in a suit and tie, holding a book. He is standing in front of a building with a clock tower, which appears to be a historic or religious building. The man is looking to the right, and the building is in the background.

The background of the cover is a gradient of purple and beige, with a textured, aged appearance. The overall style of the image is a blend of historical and religious imagery, with a focus on the book's title and the author's name.

representation, likely created for educational or artistic purposes.

The image is a detailed illustration that depicts a scene with a cat playing a lute. The cat, which is the central figure, is seated on a patch of grass with its legs crossed. It is wearing a blue scarf and a blue shirt, and has a red tongue sticking out. The cat is holding the lute with its right hand, and its left hand is placed on its chest. The lute is brown with a black fretboard and a white neck.

The background of the image is a rich tapestry of green and brown hues, with intricate patterns and designs. There are blue flowers and green leaves scattered throughout the background, and a purple butterfly is perched on one of the flowers. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of medieval or Renaissance art, with its use of bold colors and detailed illustrations. The image does not contain any text.

The image is a painting that depicts a scene in a forest. At the center of the composition, there is a figure that appears to be a person with a radiant white light emanating from their body, suggesting a divine or spiritual presence. This figure is surrounded by three individuals who are kneeling on the ground, facing the figure. The individuals are dressed in historical clothing, with one wearing a vest and the other two in suits. The background of the painting is filled with trees and foliage, and the sky is visible at the top, suggesting an evening or early morning setting. The style of the painting is realistic with a focus on the details of the clothing and the lighting, giving it a sense of depth and realism. There is a signature at the bottom right corner of the painting, but the artist's name is not visible.

Below the title, the author's name "Shisaku Endo" is written in smaller white letters. The cover features a red circle with a black outline, which contains a figure of a person sitting on a cliff, seemingly in a state of contemplation or distress. The figure is depicted with a flowing red stream or mist around them. The cover also includes text that reads "A Novel" at the bottom, indicating the genre of the book.

At the bottom of the cover, there is a yellow circle with a black border, containing the text "Soon to be a major motion picture" in white letters. This suggests that the book is a novel that is being adapted into a film. The cover design is reminiscent of traditional Japanese aesthetics, with the use of gold and red colors, and the illustration of the figure in a traditional Japanese landscape. The overall style of the image is that of a book cover, designed to attract potential readers with its visual elements and the mention of the film adaptation.

The problem was necromancy and talismans were associated with it, so Marsilio Ficino tried to explain talismanic magic by means of occult forces and natural philosophy instead, back then it was more normal, but now those things are disregarded by science and the Church can't even associate with them if they wanted to, we get enough scrutiny from miracles and Saints already even with good evidence

The image is a digital illustration featuring three cartoon-style characters standing in front of a large, ornate building with multiple spires. The characters are anthropomorphized, with exaggerated features and expressions. The central character is a man with a large, bald head, wearing a white shirt with a red necktie and sunglasses. He has a stern expression and is looking directly at the viewer. To his left, there is a woman with short brown hair, wearing a white dress with a red bow in her hair. She has a cheerful expression and is looking to the left. To the right of the man, there is a woman with short brown hair, wearing a white dress with a red bow in her hair. She has a more relaxed expression and is looking to the right. The building in the background is white with multiple spires and is located in a park-like setting with trees and a clear sky. There is a flag flying on the building. The style of the image is reminiscent of a cartoon or comic book illustration, with a focus on the characters and the architectural details of the building.

So I asked why God might give someone a talent or drive for something only to hinder their attempts to do that thing and the response was

>Yes because God wants that person to develop until he can overcome what has been hindering him

Except this doesn't make sense to me, because I used to be able to write, even had a few short stories published. I've prayed and begged and asked my pastor about it, they even prayed for me at Bible study, and at that same Bible study I felt what I thought was divine inspiration. A poem where a healer goes to a town during a blizzard and is guided by lanterns mysteriously left at the roadside--Christ is a guiding light, basically. I prayed to God and specifically asked for guidance on my words and...wrote an absolutely horrible half poem. I really don't know what to do anymore. I think God wants me to suffer and be incapable.

For starters, when I say I had stuff published, I mean short stories. Maybe 6-8 over than last 16 years or so. And that's not the issue, the issue is that I haven't written anything since May of last year because the words simply don't come to me anymore. Like, I'll get out my laptop with every intent to write and just stare at the screen for an hour or two straight and do nothing because I simply can't write anything anymore for some reason.

I know what writer's block is. I've experienced it before and this feels different in a way that's hard to describe, but even if it were just writer's block, wouldn't praying to God for the strength guidance to overcome be a good idea? Why does it still seem insurmountable after literal months of prayer, from myself and others? Is God punishing me for something? I've asked for His forgiveness for literally everything I've done that might even be a tiny sin. As soon as something that might have been a sin comes to mind, even if it was a tiny thing I did as a child, I include it in my prayers and as for forgiveness, but it doesn't seem to make a difference. Am I cut off from God for some reason? Am I soulless or something, an abomination?

The image is a text excerpt from a book or article, with a focus on the topic of "The Anti-Christ." The text is in English and is divided into paragraphs, each discussing a different aspect of the Anti-Christ's story. The style of the text is formal and academic, with a mix of historical and theological references.

The first paragraph begins with a quote from the book "A Short Story of the Anti-Christ" by Soloviev, which is a fascinating tale about the Anti-Christ's own account. The text then moves on to discuss the accuracy of some of Soloviev's predictions, including the founding of the United States of Europe and the cultural threat of Islam among them.

The second paragraph discusses the rise of a Sino-Japanese alliance that would overshadow Europe, and the critical nature of what Soloviev saw as the rise of the Anti-Christ. It also mentions the possibility of a "Christian" Anti-Christ, which is a significant point in the text.

The third paragraph delves into the concept of materialism, secularism, and science, which are central to the Anti-Christ's story. It also mentions the appearance of an angel of light, which is a significant element in the text.

The fourth paragraph discusses the appearance of the Anti-Christ, who is described as a "scurvish and cunning" figure, and the movement of the church hierarchy. It also mentions the appearance of a "goddess world" with the Anti-Christ as its lord, and the question of how many churches now resemble the Anti-Christ.

The fifth paragraph discusses the appearance of the Anti-Christ in the garb of social justice and the movement of the church hierarchy, which is a significant point in the text. The final paragraph concludes by stating that the Anti-Christ's story is a "scathing indictment of the majority of the ecclesia," which is a reference to the Christian church. It also mentions the possibility of the Anti-Christ's appearance, which is a significant point in the text.

Throughout the text, the author uses historical and theological references to support the Anti-Christ's story, and the text is structured in a way that guides the reader through the various aspects of the Anti-Christ's story. The text is dense with information, and the author's use of language and the structure of the text suggest a deep dive into the Anti-Christ's story.

The image is a text excerpt from a book or article, presented in a clean, white font on a light background. The text is in English and appears to be discussing the concept of "active ecclesiology" in relation to the Russian Orthodox Church. The author, Nikolai Berdyaev, is mentioned as the most radical prophet of the Russian Orthodox Church, and his work is described as without question. The text discusses the concept of active ecclesiology, which is a form of active participation in the Church, and its relationship to the Russian Orthodox Church. It also touches on the concept of the Kingdom of God and the role of God within the individual. The text is structured in a way that follows a logical flow, starting with the introduction of the concept of active ecclesiology and its implications, followed by a discussion of the historical context and the role of the Church in the Russian Orthodox Church. The text concludes with a quote from Berdyaev, which is a significant part of the discussion.

The image is the cover of a book titled "The Kolob Theorem" by Lynn M. Hilton, PhD. The cover features a dark blue background with a stylized depiction of a spiral galaxy at the center. The galaxy is composed of concentric rings, with the outermost ring being the largest and the inner ring being the smallest. The galaxy is surrounded by a bright blue ring, which appears to be a celestial body, possibly a planet or a star.

At the top of the cover, the title "The Kolob Theorem" is written in a serif font, with the word "Theorem" in a larger, bold font. Below the title, the subtitle "New Edition with Added Chapter: A Mormon's View of God's Starry Universe" is written in a smaller, sans-serif font. The author's name, "Lynn M. Hilton, PhD," is presented in a smaller, sans-serif font at the bottom of the cover.

The overall style of the image is academic and scientific, with a focus on the cosmological and astronomical themes presented in the book's content. The use of a spiral galaxy and the celestial body in the center of the cover suggests a connection to cosmology and the study of the universe. The title and subtitle indicate that the book is likely a scholarly work that delves into the philosophical and theological aspects of the Kolob Theorem, a concept in the field of cosmology.

Saying that female priesthood does not break with apostolicity is absurd. Of course it does. If it wouldn't the apostles would have consecrated women without a problem. It's not like in the ancient pagan world there were no women priests and the idea would have been entirely unthinkable. In ancient Christianity the masculine and feminine have clear distinct symbolic meanings and functions. Only the modern world is the one that is unable to recognize this profound distinction and symbolism, and in this sense Milbank is himself tributary to the modern way of thinking which is ultimately disenchanted and anti-traditional.

The page is numbered 5. The text is in English and is written in a serif font, which is commonly used for academic or formal documents.

The main body of the text is a discussion on the subject of female priesthood and the divine feminine within the context of the Christian faith. The author, Alison Millbank, is quoted as saying, "The debate which led to women's ordination in the Church of England was not just one who shared his gender but also one who shared his theological and philosophical arguments because, while they might differ in their understanding of the nature of the divine, they are theologically and historically equal."

The text is structured in a way that follows a typical academic or scholarly article format, with an introduction, a main body, and a conclusion. The introduction provides context for the topic, while the main body delves into the details of the discussion. The conclusion summarizes the main points and provides a brief summary of the article's findings.

The image is a scanned document, and the quality of the image is not very clear, making it difficult to read the text in detail. The text is in English, and the page number is visible at the top of the page, indicating that this is a part of a larger publication.

>"He [God] spoke to me about this [the future Messiah] in Paradise after I picked some of the fruit in which death was hiding: 'Adam, Adam, do not fear. You wanted to be a god; I will make you a god, but not right now, but after a space of many years. I am consigning you to death, and the maggot and the worm will eat your body.' And I answered and said to him, 'Why, my Lord?' And he said to me, 'Because you listened to the words of the serpent, you and your posterity will be food for the serpent. But after a short time there will be mercy on you because you were created in my image, and I will not leave you to waste away in Sheol. For your sake I will be born of the Virgin Mary. For your sake I will taste death and enter the house of the dead. For your sake I will make a new heaven, and I will be established over your posterity. And after three days, while I am in the tomb, I will raise up the body I received from you. And I will set you at the right hand of my divinity, and I will make you a god just like you wanted. And I will receive favour from God, and I will restore to you and to your posterity that which is the justice of heaven.'

The image is a page from a book or a document, specifically a section titled "6. 'Jes the Temptation'." The text is in English and appears to be discussing the concept of temptation in the context of the Holy Spirit. The page is numbered 6, and the heading is in bold, indicating its importance as a section of the text.

The text discusses the concept of temptation in the Holy Spirit, stating that women have been appointed to be the first to be tempted by the Holy Spirit, and that this has not been a significant difference in the way the Holy Spirit is presented in the Bible. The text also mentions that the Holy Spirit is presented in the Bible as a driving force for the Church, but that the Holy Spirit is not the driving force for the Church. It also discusses the concept of gender equality, stating that the Holy Spirit has begun to drive gender equality, but that this has not been a significant change in the way the Holy Spirit is presented in the Bible.

The text also references the book of Revelation, specifically the section where the Holy Spirit is described as driving the Church, and it mentions that the Holy Spirit is not the driving force for the Church. The text concludes by stating that the Holy Spirit is not the driving force for the Church, and that the Holy Spirit is not the driving force for the Church.

The text is written in a formal and academic style, with references to biblical texts and theological concepts. The page number "6" is also visible at the top of the page, indicating that this is the sixth page of the document. The text is in a larger font size compared to the surrounding text, which is typical for academic or formal documents. The page number "6" is also in a larger font size compared to the surrounding text, which is typical for academic or formal documents.

The image is a text excerpt from a document or a book, likely a journal article or a book chapter, as indicated by the format and the presence of a title at the top of the page.

The text is written in English and is divided into paragraphs, with the first paragraph starting with the title "Recently, I have experienced a little pushback about the latest installment of the journal I founded and edit, 'Jesus the Imagination.'" The text then goes on to discuss the journal's theme, which is centered around "The Divine Feminine," and includes a critique of a piece by Ros, Alison Milliken, a mother, professor, and author. The text also mentions a discussion with a Methodist preacher and a biblical scholar, Margaret Barber, on the position of the Divine Feminine in First Temple Judaism and beyond.

The text is written in a formal and academic style, with references to scholarly works and the use of specific terms like "the Divine Feminine" and "the first sentence of The Submerged Reality." The text is also marked with footnotes, indicating citations or references to other works. The overall tone of the text is serious and academic, reflecting the content of the journal's theme and the scholarly nature of the discussion.

The image shows a festive scene with a focus on a decorative cross made of pine branches and red berries. The cross is positioned against a white wall, and it is adorned with various ornaments and decorations. In front of the cross, there are three jars with lids, each containing a different type of food. The jars are arranged in a row, with the middle jar being slightly larger than the other two. The food inside the jars appears to be preserved, possibly in jars of pickled vegetables or pickles.

To the left of the jars, there are two candles with lit wicks, casting a warm glow on the scene. The lighting in the image is soft and warm, enhancing the festive atmosphere. The background is out of focus, drawing attention to the central elements of the scene. The style of the image is realistic with a focus on the details of the objects and their arrangement. There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image.

The image is a page from a publication dated Friday, January 16, 2024, with the title "Traditionalism and Eastern Orthodox: Call for contributions." The page is divided into two columns, with the left column containing a list of topics and the right column containing a brief proposal. The text is in English and is written in a formal and academic style, likely from a scholarly article or book.

The left column lists several topics related to Traditionalism and Eastern Orthodox, including "Traditionalism in inter-Romanian minorities," "Traditionalism in Yugoslavia and Serbia," "Eastern Orthodox in Russia," "Traditionalism in post-Soviet Russia," "Traditionalism in Bulgaria, Moldova, and Georgia," and "Traditionalism in the Caucasus." Each topic is followed by a brief description of the topic, such as "Traditionalism in inter-Romanian minorities" which is followed by "Traditionalism in Yugoslavia and Serbia," and so on.

The right column contains a brief proposal for a workshop on "Traditionalism in Eastern Orthodox," which includes the title "Traditionalism" and a brief description of the workshop. The proposal also mentions that the authors' workshop will refine the drafts and allow participants to discuss how the reception and development of Traditionalism in Eastern Orthodox differs from that in Western Christianity. The authors' workshop will also explore what this tells us about Traditionalism, mysticism, and the role of the Church in Eastern Orthodox traditions.

The overall style of the image is academic and formal, with a focus on the publication's content and the topics it covers. The text is clear and well-organized, making it easy to understand the content of the publication.

Mormonism rips off Freemasonry.

That's really just it. Look it up, it's well documented.

Not any more complicated, the way it is.

In short, fuck Freemasons and Rosicrucianism. All occultism is a disgrace and scandal to the faith.

Freemasons expect you to believe the animal sacrifice of Hindus and that of 2nd Temple Judaism were of equal value to the Father as that of his only begotten son.

It is literally not possible to be a freemason and a Christian at the same time.

They expect you to implicitly deny both Jesus' divinity and his role as Christ.

Deal with it.

In the "ALTRICIAL" column, the first bird is a "PARROT," followed by a "PELICAN" and a "DOCK." The description for the parrot is "Born in an immature and helpless condition, requiring care for some time after birth." The description for the pelican is "Capable of movement and self-sufficiency soon after birth." The description for the duck is "Rhea," which is "A songbird."

The "PRECOCIAL" column has a similar structure, with a "CHICKEN" at the top, followed by a "PELICAN" and a "DOCK." The description for the chicken is "Born in an immature and helpless condition, requiring care for some time after birth." The description for the pelican is "Rhea," which is "A songbird."

The image is a simple, clear representation of the differences between the two types of birds, with each bird species having a unique description and a corresponding image.

The text is in a serif font, and the image is in a plain, white background.

I don't understand why every time i have issues with all the bullies, and the wicked, and the evils, and the lustful, and the freaks, and everything else bad in this world people talk to me as if i'm the bad guy for wanting to do something about it, for wanting something to be done about it, for wanting the righteousness Jesus Himself promised.

Where is the righteousness that Jesus promised to those who thirst for it because i have never seen any of it in my entire life and i am tired of evil always getting away with it.

Where can i go to get the answers i am looking for? Where can i go to find people who can help me? Where can i go to know what God is trying to tell me?

Why isn't God answering me?

This is something I questioned myself. If Joseph Smith really was a con and made it all up, which is the easy conventional viewpoint, then WHY did he have so many followers? HOW did he convince so many people by saying "pray and ask of God if I am right"???

Then it led me to also think that if Joseph Smith really did have a vision of the Father and the Son, then that means there was an equal and opposite attacking on his spirit by demons. That could've led to Joseph Smith giving a mixture of truth and lies in what he wrote down, for all we know

Nah, he died throwing up the Masonic distress signal in the vain hope there was a fellow in the crowd who would intercede.

Understand, that Smith grew up in upstate NY.

By pure coincidence he publishes the Book of Mormon in the early years of the anti-Masonic movement, which started because Masons kidnapped and murdered a man who was about to actually expose them.

Just a few years after the disappearance of William Morgan, Smith founds his sect. Both were from western NYS btw, same region. So the uproar over the murder would have been known to him.

It's pretty clear to me that he merely used anti-Masonic sentiments to attract followers by including some token references in his magnum opus, and later exposes his real intent by institutionalizing Masonic rites into his religion.

Masons love sponsoring or founding kooky religious cults in secret, because it causes confusion and chaos. It's out of this artificially induced chaos that they impose their own order, hence the phrase Ordo Ab Chao. Plenty of these fringe types claim to oppose the Masons, but they're lying or have been played as chumps.

"It was in 1823 when he received the three first degrees of Masonry in the lodge at Victor Flats, Ontario Co., New York, and in 1824, previous to receiving all of the rights up to the Royal Arch Masons, the Morgan affair broke out and the Masonic Hall in Canandaigua was burned by anti-Masons, and all their records consumed. . . . 'Not as many as three of us,' father says, 'could meet together, unless in secret, without being mobbed. I have been driven from my houses and possessions with many of my brethren belonging to that fraternity five times, by mobs led by some of their leading men. . . I have been as true as an angel from the heavens to the covenants I made in the lodge at Victor. . . . I wish that all men were Masons and would live up to their profession, then the world would be in a much better state than it is now.' " (Woman's Exponent, XII, 126, as quoted in Mormonism and Masonry, by E. Cecil McGavin, page 99)

Hyrum Smith, Joseph's brother, was also a member of the Masonic fraternity. Theodore Schroeder stated:

"At the time of writing the Book of Mormon, Hyrum Smith a brother and co-conspirator of Joseph Smith was already a mason, as also were Heber Kimball and others of the neighborhood who became leading Mormons." (Authorship of the Book of Mormon, reprinted from the American Journal of Psychology, Vol. 30, p. 66-72, January, 1919)

The Mormon writer Pearson H. Corbett confirms the fact that Hyrum Smith was a Mason in New York:

"Hyrum Smith received his first three degrees of Masonry in Ontario County, N.Y." (Hyrum Smith—Patriarch, Salt Lake City, 1963, page 269)

Joseph Smith could have learned about Masonry from either his brother or Heber C. Kimball. The Mormon publisher W.W. Phelps was another man who could have taught Joseph Smith a great deal about Masonry. According to Goodwin, Phelps was "a renouncing Mason of the anti-Masonic period and for a time, at least, a bitter foe of the Fraternity." (Mormonism and Masonry, page 14)

The image is a painting that depicts a scene from ancient times, likely from the ancient Near East, given the style and the clothing of the figures. The central figure is a man with a beard, wearing a loincloth and a headband, who is pointing to the sky with his right hand. He is standing on a rocky outcropping with a view of the sea in the background. To his left, there is another man with a beard, also wearing a loincloth and a headband, who is kneeling on the ground. The third figure, who is the most prominent, is a man with a beard and a headband, who is standing upright with his hands on his hips. He is wearing a loincloth and a belt with a decorative buckle. The background is filled with a cloudy sky and a rocky landscape. The painting is rendered in a realistic style with attention to detail, and the colors are naturalistic, with a palette that includes earthy tones and muted colors.

The post is dated January 22, 2020, and is titled "Sophia, the submerged reality as I have argued for more than the past decade, lies in hiding, as it were, awaiting discovery. We see resonances of this in the Gnostic myths of Sophia's exile or sleep. But we are the ones who are in exile; we are the ones asleep. One could compare the disclosure of the sophitic nature of mathematics to the disclosure of the laws of the Church—to the laws of nature. These laws were always there; they simply required individuals equipped—by nature—to historical process, most of all by curiosity—to find them."

The tweet is accompanied by a timestamp at the bottom, indicating the time as 10:16 AM. The tweet has a total of 418 views, as indicated by the number in the tweet's text. The tweet is in a conversational tone, and the author's name is followed by a Twitter handle "@Sophiologist". The tweet is a response to a comment made by a user named "Sophia," who is identified as a "submerged reality" in the context of the past decade. The author's response is a philosophical discussion about the nature of Sophia, the divine feminine principle in Christian theology, and the role of individuals in the historical process in discovering these truths.

I am all for esotericism but I don't like this one bit desu.

Esotericism should only exist to draw closer to The Lord and to glorify him. Using platonic/gnostic concepts like "Sophia" in the metaphysical sense only distracts from that.

Why tf do you need any platonic Sophia if you have the Holy Spirit, through which you will know all things.

HALLELUJAH!! HOLY HOLY HOLY IS THE LORD OF HOSTS!!

As for mixing truth and falsehood, there are many things in both the Book of Mormon and the Quran that are true, where if you told a Christian they'd say, "yes that makes sense and sounds reasonable and good to me", yet there are also things that are very disgusting, well in the Quran since the book of Mormon has mostly historical issues Now let's say the Quran and Book of Mormon didn't have any truth in them and were 100% lies, who would believe them? No one, si by being a mixture of truth and falsehood, they can attract followers with the good and slide the bad into it aswell

>Using platonic/gnostic concepts like "Sophia" in the metaphysical sense

1) Read Proverbs, and then read it again without instantly going "okay, well no that doesn't count because...", and then read it a third time actually reading the words instead of not reading them

2) Then, ask yourself why Ruach is feminine, why Kingdom is feminine (in both Greek and Hebrew), what it would mean for the Jerusalem Above To Be Our Mother in the context of Israel being a Bride and being Conformed to the Image of the Son

3) Then stop thinking you can stop thinking by substituting performative quotations with what Paul literally calls Gnosis, the Spirit that Searches the Depths of God, and the Mind of Christ.

Or don't. Some people just literally cannot handle reading their own holy texts.

The image shows a stone sculpture of a human torso, which appears to be a part of a larger monument or statue. The sculpture is made of a dark material, possibly stone, and has a textured surface with intricate carvings and inscriptions. The inscriptions are in a language that resembles hieroglyphs, a form of writing used in ancient Egypt. The style of the writing is complex and dense, with some letters appearing to be stylized and others more naturalistic. The sculpture is displayed against a neutral background, which allows the details of the carving to stand out. The overall impression is of a historical artifact, possibly from an ancient civilization, given the style and content of the inscriptions. There are no visible texts or symbols that provide additional context or information about the sculpture's origin or purpose.

God now is working towards the "end of evil, the end of death", in the future

"Why doesn't God do it instantly"

God is eternal, the world is the opposite of God, so the world has a beginning and end, God's eternal act of salvation is reflected in the world as the beginning and end of the world

The image is a screenshot of a tweet from a Twitter account with the username "@johnmilbank3". The tweet is written in English and is a response to a statement made by the author, John Milbank. The tweet is a text-based message, and it appears to be a response to a statement made by the author. The author's name is "@johnmilbank3" and the tweet was posted on January 23, 2026 at 6:57 AM. The tweet has a timestamp and a number of views, indicating that it has been viewed by a significant number of people.

The tweet contains a statement that reads: "The Anglican settlement is ambiguous. At its worse, the Church of England has just given a pious stamp to the decisions of the State, but at its best it has almost more than any other Christian body insisted that the State incarnate Christianity also in bodily and temporal affairs." The text is in a formal and academic tone, suggesting that the author is discussing a complex issue related to the Church of England's relationship with the State.

The tweet also includes a mention of a video, which is a link to a video that has 1,181 views. The video is titled "6:57 AM - Jan 23, 2026" and has a description that reads "1,181 views." The video appears to be a video of a lecture or presentation, as indicated by the title and the number of views.

The overall style of the image is a snapshot of a digital communication medium, with the tweet being the central focus. The image is clear and well-lit, with a white background that contrasts with the black text, making the message easy to read. The tweet is a response to a statement, and the author's name and the date of the tweet are clearly visible, providing context to the content of the message. The image does not contain any other visual elements or graphics, focusing solely on the text and the author's name.

Maybe being cut off from your writing is God's way for you to experience the fear of being cut off from God, in order to write about that experience and lead others out of it with you. I think suffering is a sign you are still on the right path. If you had given up on yourself, you wouldn't be questioning.

Then wearing it would be effective, as a sacramental.

It's not a magic amulet or fashion accessory. Rather, it's an emblem of personal dedication.

Reading a few books and "glimpsing" the Carmelite spiritual tradition would not be sufficient.

The scapular marks one who has been publicly enrolled in the order.

Also I know it's cliché to say that the LDS took the masonic ceremonies and they're just piggybacking, but that is insufficient given the metaphysics that Joseph paired with them and the fact that he puts it all back in the garden.

I tend to think that it's more Joseph recognized the truth in the mason's deeper ceremony (which (speculation) could have been influenced by Ficino's Platonism/Neoplatonism).

If you go get into Iamblichus and theurgy, I mean that's a lot closer to what they temple rite is performing in a Latter-day Saint context than the Masonic rituals. And Iamblichus got them from the Chaldean oracles and the Chaldees go all the way back to Abraham (where the Book of Abraham says they were performing rituals and they kept the knowledge of the cosmos there).

Anyway, have a blessed day. Stay warm and if you don't mind keeping my family in your prayers, your families will also be in mine.

Jehovah (Yahweh) is one of the Hebrew names of God, who is the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit. They are One who is a Trinity and a Trinity that is One. They don't share a "soul" because that would, in essence, mean the "soul" is what God truly is, as in, the quality that gives the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit their divinity. This would lead to there being a quality that makes any and all of the three persons of the Trinity divine, with the rest of their qualities being superfluous or at the very least non-divine. Rather, each of the three persons is fully divine, in all aspects, in all qualities, which they share, as they are all God.

I haven't given up on myself. I'm actually not sure what to call it. I miss the me that created freely and with joy. I feel jealousy toward men I see who can do...not jealousy toward their tools or workspaces or gear...their ability. I'm really starting to feel like maybe I was wrong and that me getting an answer from God was just wishful thinking and that there is nothing for me as a man beyond being a dad. My youngest will be 18 in about 5 years and then I guess I'll just sit at home and rot away since my purpose will be fulfilled then...so I guess this is me giving up.

The image is a screenshot of a text document with a title "What's Theology" and a subtitle "What you should know at the outset: Dale does not accept the church's doctrine of the Trinity." The document is divided into two columns, with the left column containing the text and the right column containing a question and answer section. The left column contains the text "What's Theology" followed by a question "What is the Trinity?" The text then continues with a brief explanation of the Trinity, stating that it is a doctrine that is not accepted by the church. The text concludes with a question "What does the Trinity mean?"

The right column contains a question "What about you?" followed by a response "While Dale's theology is interesting, this book ultimately isn't about Dale's views. Rather, it's about your views. How will you think about the Trinity? And how will you use the ideas in the Trinity to understand God, the universe, and the world?" The text continues with a question "What are your questions?" and a response "Some questions are daunting. But if you're tired of camping on Mystery Mountain, if you're ready to turn toward disagreements in your pursuit of understanding, then What is the Trinity is an indispensable guide for the journey."

The image is a screenshot from a digital document, and the text is in English. The document appears to be a part of a larger text, possibly a book or article, as it includes a question and answer section and a section titled "What's Theology." The style of the document is formal and academic, with a clear structure and a focus on theological concepts.

The left column is a paragraph, while the right column is a list of references. The style of the text is formal and academic, with a mix of text and references.

The paragraph on the left discusses the Sophianic Real, which is a movement in the Church that began in the late-sixteenth and early-seventeenth centuries. It mentions figures like Jacob Boehme, the Philadelphia Society, and William Law, and traces the movement to German Romanticism and William Blake. The paragraph also mentions the protests against the movement, which began with Solovoyev in the late nineteenth century.

The right column is a list of references, which includes works by various authors such as H. Uss von Balthasar, Louis Bouyer, Thomas Merton, and others. The references are numbered and provide a citation for each work.

The image is a text excerpt from a book or article, with a white background and black text. The text is in English and appears to be discussing the concept of the "Sapiential Tradition" within the context of Church history and the role of the Fathers in the development of this tradition. The text is divided into paragraphs, and the style of the text is formal and academic, with references to various sources and historical figures. The text discusses the concept of the "Sapiential Tradition" and its relationship to the Fathers and Church history. It mentions that the Fathers were the unvindictive victims of an interpretive tradition that turned Holy Tradition into an idol. The text also touches on the difficulty of breaking the dogmatic spell of the Tradition and the importance of the "Sapiential reading of scripture," which is described as a simple, phenomenological reading of scripture.

The text also discusses the role of the "Sapiential Tradition" in the lives of the Fathers and how it influenced their personal experience. It mentions that the very first sentence of "The Pillar and Ground of the Truth" by Boethius and others was defined by the Fathers as the case with Soloviev and Bulgakov, and it also discusses the case of the "Pillar and Ground of the Truth" by the very first sentence of "The Pillar and Ground of the Truth" by Boethius and others.

The text concludes by stating that the "Sapiential reality" is argued for more than the past decade, and it is argued that the "Sapiential Tradition" lies in the "Pillar and Ground of the Truth," which is the case of the "Pillar and Ground of the Truth" by the very first sentence of "The Pillar and Ground of the Truth" by Boethius and others.

The text is structured in a way that follows a logical flow, starting with the introduction of the "Sapiential Tradition" and its role in Church history, followed by a discussion of the difficulty of breaking the dogmatic spell of the Tradition, and finally concluding with a discussion of the "Sapiential reality" and its significance in the "Pillar and Ground of the Truth." The text also includes references to various sources, such as Boethius, Soloviev, Bulgakov, and Florovsky, which are cited to support the arguments made in the text.

The image is a text excerpt from a book or article, presented in a plain, white font on a light background. The text is in English and appears to be a scholarly or theological discussion, possibly from a religious or philosophical context. The style of the text is formal and academic, with a mix of prose and biblical references.

The text is divided into two main sections. The first section is a continuation of the author's argument from the previous chapter, discussing the full disclosure of the sophia and the illumination of the Church. The author asserts that the full disclosure of the sophia is still to come, and that this disclosure is part of the active escholastico. The author then references the revelation of scripture as incomplete, suggesting that the revelation of scripture is still incomplete.

The second section of the text is a continuation of the author's argument, discussing the concept of the word of God and the role of the word in the Church. The author discusses the role of the word in the Church, stating that the word is not only a passive event but also a creative effort. The author also discusses the role of the word in the Church, stating that the word is not only a passive event but also a creative effort.

The text is structured in a way that follows a logical argument, with each section building upon the previous one. The author uses biblical references and theological concepts to support their argument, such as the concept of the word in the Church and the role of the word in the Church. The text is dense with theological and philosophical concepts, and the author's argument is based on a deep understanding of the text and the context of the discussion.

The image does not contain any images or graphics, and the text is the sole focus of the image. The text is presented in a way that allows for easy reading and comprehension, with clear headings and paragraphs that break up the text into smaller sections. The page is titled "3.1.3.Tertullian" and is numbered "3.1.3" in the top left corner. The text is in English and is written in a formal, academic style, which is typical for scholarly articles or books.

The page contains a section titled "Tertullian" with a brief description of the author, "Since he uses the word 'trinitas' and says that the Father, Son, and Spirit share a divine substance (substance), Tertullian (ca. 160-235) is a subdemonist who sounds trinitarian to many modern readers. His 'Against Praxeas' was written against Modalist Monarchianism." This section provides a brief biography of Tertullian and his views on the Trinity.

The main body of the text is divided into three sections, each with a heading and a paragraph of text. The headings are "Time 1," "Time 2," and "Time 3," which likely represent different sections or chapters within the larger work. The text is in a serif font, which is commonly used for academic or formal writing.

The image also includes a diagram that appears to be a representation of the concept of the Trinity, with three circles labeled "Father/God," "Son/God," and "Spirit/God."

These circles are interconnected by lines, suggesting a relationship or relationship between the three divine entities. The diagram is in a simple, non-complex style, which is typical for diagrams used in academic or educational contexts.

The overall style of the image is academic and formal, with a focus on presenting information in a structured and organized manner. The use of headings and paragraphs of text indicates that the content is meant to be read and understood in a structured manner, likely for a reader who is familiar with the subject matter.

The Lord sees the danger to His people. He sees the honeyed road to ultimate damnation. He sees the ease whereby a being can slide into the fatal pattern of success and the pursuit of success, and follow it to disillusionment, death and the fires of Hell. He sees the choice that a being must make between his God and the worldly satisfactions that lie within his reach. He sees the tender traps of sensuality, and He knows the vulnerability of His people.

Because success in human terms, pleasure and satisfaction by the standards of humanity, are snares that lure a being from the straight and narrow path of purity and self-denial. They are the traps that can cause a being to turn from his God and worship life as man knows life; the transitory shallow habitation of a human form.

Sometimes, what feels like failure is a way to teach resilience, humility, or reliance on Him. It could also be that He's giving your son and your family a chance to grow together, to lean on each other, and to learn lessons that will shape him for life in ways grades alone never could.

That is if He is even micromanaging this situation. Could also be that he decided to let it unfold naturally and decided not to intervene for now.

Some of the strongest, most faithful men I know never went to college. They learned a trade. They worked with their hands. They provided for their families. They served in their church. They became leaders in their communities. And God honored them.

Your son working at McDonald's is not a curse. Honest work is honorable work.

Scripture is clear: a man who works and provides is worthy of respect, whether he wears a suit or an apron.

So stop shifting the blame on God because as his father you are meant to fight for him. Pray for him. Push him. Encourage him. Hold him accountable. Refuse to give up on him.

I've supported him, I've fought for him, I've prayed for him, I've pushed him, I've done every single thing you've listed for the past two and a half years. I haven't stopped doing any of those things either. I've tried disciplinary actions of just about every sort you can think of that a parent might use...none of it works. Me jumping to asking why God would do this isn't some knee-jerk reaction to a new set of behaviors or my first inclination either. This is the result of two and a half years of trying just about everything imaginable. We even had my son on medications, we went through five different medications trying to find one that worked and none of them made a difference. We had an insurance issue that meant he had to be off his medications for about a month and guess what? His behavior was the exact same off of those meds as it was when he was on them. I do refuse to give up on my son, that's not what I'm asking God for help with. I'm not asking God to complete his tests for him or to magically give him the answers to every question he'll have. I'm asking God to inspire in him a desire to learn and do well. And I know that him working at McDonald's isn't shameful, but I also understand that the world we live in means that he would never be able to support himself or a family by working at McDonald's even full-time. The idea of him trying to learn a trade is genuinely horrifying because of the way he handles learning stuff. He'd electrocute himself or cut off a hand on a table saw day one because he would refuse to listen to the safety teachings of a teacher or a foreman. And it's not because my wife and I refuse to talk to him about those things, we talk to him about that stuff on a daily basis. He refuses to listen to anything, be it from a teacher or a parent or someone else.

Just listen to something you're interested in like have a video going in the background.
And listen closely to the way they speak and the words they use, right?

Get accustomed to them, and then, see if you're able to "hear" the next word they say before they say it

You will eventually become very good at "predicting" the next word they will use with extremely high accuracy

After this, you can branch out

And start applying the same rule to government legislation and population control and psychological mass manipulation tactics

Once that happens you can predict future geopolitical events with high accuracy.

Knowing the future, before anyone else knows it, let's you manipulate the script.

I think once you know, or once you're aware of it, it gets much harder to ignore eventually. Like it starts off slow with you struggling to understand it at first and 20 years later it's a completely different thing

I can't ever recall a dream of mine coming true but I can recall thoughts that forcibly entered my brain coming true way too many times for it to be coincidental

These involuntary thoughts are never wrong that's the issue, but you have no control over them or the future they predict

They force their way in and demand that you think about the reality of it, so it's actually very easy to distinguish your normal thoughts between the ones that aren't normal

We are in the middle of the Apocalypse and it shows.

Society already is divided in 3.5/4.

3.5 are the cattle, 0.5 the remnants dissidents.

The internet is owned by them, everything is controlled by them while we control almost nothing except partially where we can choose to go and die.

Diagnosis: We lost, no organization on our side, the NWO is heading strongly toward their goal, which is total control of peoples lives through digital surveillance and technology.

While we are all divided between meaningless reasons and most refuse to acknowledge the truth.

Christ here, Allah there, YHWH here, Buddha there.

Truth is God and pathetically everyone who says they fight the good cause doesn't know it and avoids it at all costs.

There will come a point where we have to choose to do what is right or retreat to the mountains in order to die off with the knowledge that we did absolutely jack shit to try and change things.

Fuck politics, fuck false religions, fuck scientism, and most of all fuck whoever gave their responsibility up to someone else instead of developing within them the true will.

[82 / 11]The image is a close-up photograph of a human skull with a red, textured background. The skull is the central focus of the image, with the eyes and nose of the skull being the most prominent features. The eyes are large and have a red tint, and the nose is also red with a textured appearance. The skull appears to be made of a red material, possibly clay or a similar substance, and the texture gives it a rough and uneven look. The background is dark and contrasts with the red of the skull, making it stand out. There are no texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of a horror or eerie aesthetic, with the use of red and the contrast between the skull and the dark background.

The image is a painting that depicts a figure with a dark, swirling, and chaotic background. The figure appears to be a humanoid with a large, elongated head, a beard, and a large, protruding nose. The figure's eyes are wide open, and its mouth is open, revealing teeth. The figure's skin is dark, and there are visible scars on its face and body. The figure is holding a small, white object in its hands, which appears to be a doll or a small figurine. The painting style is expressive and has a chaotic quality, with thick, impasto brushstrokes that give the image a sense of movement and energy. The color palette is dominated by dark tones, with the figure's skin and the doll's white object standing out against the dark background. There is a visible signature or mark in the lower right corner of the painting, but the specific details of the signature are not clear.

One night, when I was around 10, I was walking home from my friend's house down the street when I saw some figure in the distance slowly moving toward me and it sounded like it was moaning "HELP ME." I don't know why, but I thought it was a ghost or some non-human creature trying to trick me. I booked it to my house and locked the door behind me. I never saw who or what it was and nothing like that ever happened again, but it spooked me enough that from then on, I was on high alert whenever I walked home at night.

main focus is on a person's face, which is partially obscured by a black square. The person is wearing a tank top with the word "SUPERMAN" written across the front. The person's hair is styled in a mohawk, and they are looking directly at the camera. In the background, there is a blurred image of another person, but the details are not clear enough to discern any specific features. The overall style of the image is candid and informal, with a focus on the person's attire and the text on their tank top.

Died in a dream (shot in the head and buried in a mass grave in the field behind my elementary school) and ended up with a delusional belief that the dream was real life and the world I woke up into was a hallucination I was having shortly before dying. I believed this for multiple months. I didn't feel the need to tell anyone about it or change my behavior in any outwardly noticeable way, except being a bit lazier. Whenever I was scared of something, I'd tell myself "I don't have to worry about that, because I'm already dead". Whenever I wanted something in the future, I'd tell myself "that can't happen, because the hallucination will probably end soon". I never seriously questioned whether it was true or not, until I had a dream that was similar to the one I died in. It started the same as the first, with me being led into my elementary school with a line of other people, but I was younger in the second dream than I was in the first, and I was carrying a giant jar of candy (gumballs or jellybeans, I think). A woman told me I had to leave them behind, but I argued with her until I woke up. After I woke up, I realized that my death must've also been a dream.

The image depicts a creature that appears to be a hybrid of a wolf and a human, with a humanoid head and wolf-like features. The creature's eyes are glowing yellow, and its fur is a dark, shaggy texture. It has sharp teeth and a fierce expression. The background is a forest with trees and foliage, suggesting a natural, wooded environment. The creature is positioned in the foreground, with its head and upper body clearly visible, and its eyes are looking directly at the viewer. There are no texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the image is realistic with a focus on the creature's features and the natural setting.

16 years old. Up to then, thought anyone with ghost stories, or paranormal stories, were literal insane asylum candidates.

Went on adventures with bro through woods, and various questionable areas at night. Nothing crazy.

One night, across from a gas station, at 16 years of age, see an undeveloped plot of land with a ditch, then a massive rise that led to an area that looked like a football field -- football field lights too.

We walk down the ditch, then back up, we see, I kid you not, what looked like a cross-breed between a wolf and a bear -- it stands up and we see its silhouette. It literally looks like a man on steroids and then some mixed with a wolf. Run like fuck. Not prone to these kinds of ideations. Don't discuss for 15+ years. Call him, ask him if he still remembers -- he does. Since then I've believed in the paranormal

I was greeted by the voice of a little girl, I never knew who it could have been, so I always thought it was something paranormal.

We lived in an unconventional house shared by many people, we were all poor but bound by blood. On the lower floor my grandfather lived beside the living room, along one side a long hallway served as a living space for my uncle and his younger girlfriend, and at the back another uncle lived with his wife and three children. Outside that room an old metal stairway led to the upper floor, where there was a walkable roof and a creepy storage room with plastic covered windows and screeching wooden planks, full of ancient stuff and it's just a place you don't wanna go inside.

Next to it was the newest and largest room, where my mother, my brother, my sister, and my ten year old ass lived. The two rooms upstairs shared no hallway, only the open roof, from which you could see directly into the abandoned park next to the house, a place known for murder, rape, drug abuse, and constant violence, especially terrifying at night. You do not want to stand there at night, especially if you turn on the light, because who knows who might see it, and see you standing there, watching from the park.

Anyway, one night only my brother and I were there, my sister was out and my mother was working the night shift. It was freezing, I could not take it anymore, and the only extra sheets were in the infested room. Around three in the morning I wrapped myself in my single sheet and opened the door to the roof, I was standing there. And the moment I touched the wooden planks a shock ran down my spine. I backed away, and as soon as I stepped back inside I heard it, two cheerful hellos behind me "Hello, hello", the voice of a very young girl, completely out of place. I started crying in despair, my brother would not wake up, and seconds later I heard the same voice humming right next to me.

Man... even now, as I write this, I'm shaking.

Not sure if this qualifies as precog, but I used to have reoccurring dreams back in the 80's about underground trains being loaded with large black bins. Each dream would have the same key elements Trains and black.bins, but each dream was a continuation of the last. Went on for years into adulthood, and I always woke up screaming with nightsweats. The dreams eventually stopped, which was a relief, but they stopped right before the pandemic. That's when I realized I had been dreaming FEMA shit the whole time growing up. I pay a lot closer attention to my reoccurring dreams now just in case.

Some apologies before I begin:

1. I'm writing this in vim, so strings will be broken at 80 characters to prevent my grammar checker from fucking up. This may make the story difficult to read for mobile fags.
2. I'm a science fag, so my prose may not be up to snuff - I'm trying my hardest, lads.
3. Finally, this story is not about a childhood experience, instead taking place a few months after my high-school graduation.

I'll post the story as I write it, I hope you fags enjoy.

After graduating I found myself in a state of limbo, university was months away, and the job that carried me through high-school had refused to give me a full time position. To worsen my situation, living in the prairies limits your options for fun. Your legal options include:

1. Getting drunk in your buddy's basement.
2. Getting drunk in your buddy's backyard.
3. Getting drunk in a pub.
4. Getting drunk in a field.
5. Driving an hour to get drunk in the woods.

You wouldn't believe it, but after three-years of this rotation, getting drunk loses its lustier - at least in isolation.

One night, I found myself in my usual summer position: ass stuck to a lawn chair, with a beer in hand, and a couple of empties beside my feet. My buddies sat in a similar position, as we discussed the usual rigmarole, which consisted of mundane work stories (almost only complaints about the most dull work conflicts known to man) and old high-school memories - least be said, it was turning to be a dull evening. Eventually as the repeated stories closed, someone mentioned a church that was under construction near our school. Sensing the possibility for some fun, we harassed a sober girl over the phone to come give us a lift.

After a brief drive we arrived at the site. Construction works in cycles here, the winter is too harsh to even consider building, so the moment it hits summer buildings seemingly spawn on the horizon. The church, while just a skeleton last time I had seen it, was erect - besides lacking some landscaping, the beauty was complete and begging for us to penetrate its beckoning walls. We sat for a brief moment enjoying the sweet hum of anxiety that precedes a crime when my girlfriend spoke up, asking us if she could wait outside; this was before she had gotten in the habit of "urban exploring" with me, so the idea of trespassing had her understandably frightened. The church stood in a new development, besides our school and a Tim Hortons a kilometre away, there wasn't anything nearby besides a highway and fields of crops; I figured that it was more than safe for her to wait outside for 15-minutes. I said my goodbyes and headed inside.

The interior, from my understanding, was hardly notable - that is besides the Sermon room which doubled as a basketball court (I'll need some Mormon anons to tell me if this is normal). We lit up a couple of darts and took turns ripping a bong, the sober girl took her spot on the piano and attempted to play the song from Interstellar.

We explored the building, taking photos of ourselves at the pedestal giving triumphant speeches, explored the attic, and left some devious notes sprawled across sticky notes in the office. Despite being more interesting than drinking in a backyard the experience was nothing to write home about - that was until we headed outside and noticed that my girlfriend was missing.

Cross-faded, I almost immediately ran into a panic - there was no reason for her to run off, this place is in the middle of fucking nowhere, there's nowhere for her to go. We spent a couple of minutes checking around the parking lot, the car, and the church, topping off our frantic nightmare with a quick sprint to see if she had stumbled around the fields.

Running out of options, we headed to our old high-school to see if she had gone sight-seeing, nothing was there besides a tailgate in one parking lot, and a couple having sex in the other. Terrified, I decided it was best to break up both events to see if they had seen anything; the tailgate came up blank on information, and the love-makers greeted me with no more than a scream - cunts.

The final place to check was the Tim Horton's, which besides being the most likely place, seemed like a far-shot considering the distance. I asked a couple of my buddies to check it out for me, and headed back to the church, in case she had just left to relive herself and returned to wait for us.

At this point I was erratic, my blood rushed in a fever as every slight peculiarity began to seem sinister.

I arrived back at the church with two of my buddies. Upon arrival, one girl with bigger balls than me, decided that she was going to head back into the church to piss. In her absence, me and the remaining girl noticed a strange figure sitting atop a mound of dirt between two forks in the road.

We approached the man, confused if he was a person or if our eyes were playing tricks on us.

"Excuse me, have you seen a girl around here?"

... no response

"EXCUSE ME, HAVE YOU SEEN A GIRL WALKING ALONE AROUND HERE? I'M LOOKING FOR MY GIRLFRIEND!"

... no response

We continued yelling on our approach until I gave up, if the faggot wasn't going to respond to me I'll give him some inspiration. I threw a stick at his mound and gave it one finally shout.

"OI! CUNT! DID YOU SEE A GIRL WALK THROUGH HERE?!"

The man returned my attack with a slight tilt of the head and a guttural whisper echoing across the quiet plain:

"juuussttt meeeee heeeerrreeee..."

I stood petrified, there was zero reason for this man to be here, sitting on a dirt mound, in the middle of nowhere; housing communities were kilometres to the west, there were no nearby restaurants or establishments, just the church and an out-of-season school.

Immediately ideas flooded my brain, I imagined him sitting, the illusion of slumped man on our end, on the other, his face coated in blood, my girlfriend's body laying torn to shreds before him. Considering the circumstance and the man's location between the crossroad, I assumed him to be the devil, albeit a Faustian manner. Was this God punishing me for my transgressions against the Mormon church?

I returned from my approach, got my buddy to drive, and we approached him the headlights, attempting to see what he was doing. He sat there still as a dead man, apparently he sat, face ahead without any sign of our presence; we revved the engine behind him, he maintained his statued demeanour. We drove off looking for ours friends.

The story wraps up here, my buddies found my girlfriend along the road to Tim Horton's looking for rabbits - someone let a handful of domesticated rabbits run free in the area, so there were hoards of the cunts everywhere. We didn't reapproach the man, after finding my girl I felt like doing nothing more than returning home.

The image is a photograph that captures a scene on a street at night. In the foreground, there is a dog standing on its hind legs, with its front legs raised and its head tilted

>fence is imposing dark wall of English Ivy

Side-note, 90s kid, loved exploring, crawled under bushes, waded through blackberries, played in the canal, turned over rocks, caught black widows/lizards/snakes/anything I could, rode bike everywhere. I did not like to go in the ivy. It had claimed it's own section of the north-most yard and had extended out knee-high over a large cement pad, to come to a stop at a line of very old rose bushes. Balls, toys, shoes that had come off feet while swinging, the older graves of dead pets, the ivy had multitudes. Okay back to it.

I have no recollection as to what happened next and wrote this memory off for years if it were not for a conversation me and my brother one late night in our 30s. He begins to tell me this story:

>outside, sky pink and purple with early evening, on the side-yard patio, under a wooden trellis very thinly draped in delicate vines that grow tiny grapes >playing hide-and-seek with a few friends >look left >see friend sneak bent low behind pine tree going left to right
>see not-friend emerge from behind the other side of the tree in one smooth motion >not-fiend is now still, standing straight up, looking right back, with glowing red eyes >memory stops

I thought he was fucking with me. He wasn't and a chill passed between us after I shared my story. I have since heard that my mother used to have "visitors" with red eyes that would be just outside her bedroom window when she was a child. Anyone have anything similar occur or know what this was?

i saw their faces on the news or whatever when i was older.

exactly what happened was i was looking at the bugs on a tree like little kids do, and this dirty truck pulls up next to me. the driver says, "hey kid, did your mama's pussy climb a tree?". they were both looking at me smiling. they were extremely dirty looking. my mom comes out of the front door and screams, "ANON YOU GET UP HERE RIGHT NOW!!!" The men in the truck look a little scared and surprised then drive off without saying anything. i run up the hill and go to a sandy area where i had been playing and i see a fairly large bright green spider crawling around. i get scared and run inside.

i still get chills thinking about this. who knows what terrible fate i would have suffered if it weren't for my mom. there is so much danger just around the corner when you are a kid.

When I was really little, a man fell through the ceiling of my grandparents' house. He was able to talk to us from the vent in the wall. He claimed he was a criminal and was trying to hide from the police. He was obviously really hurt from the fall. He begged my grandparents not to call the cops. My grandfather (who had served in Korea) could tell the guy was dying. They called my dad to come get me. I wasn't allowed back for a couple weeks. The image features a stylized illustration of a devil-like figure with a red and black color scheme. The devil is depicted with horns, a pointed nose, and a mustache, giving it a menacing appearance. It is wearing a black suit with a white shirt and a red tie, suggesting a formal or professional setting. The devil is holding a pipe in its right hand, and its left hand is pointing towards the viewer, as if drawing attention to something. Above the devil's head, there is a speech bubble with the text "I SAW THAT" in bold, capital letters. The font is bold and the text is in a sans-serif typeface, which contrasts with the devil's sharp features. The overall style of the image is cartoonish and exaggerated, with a focus on the devil's expression and the text within the speech bubble. The image does not contain any other discernible objects or characters.

In the foreground, there is a circular stamp with a detailed design, which includes a crown and a coat of arms. The stamp has text that is partially visible, and the text includes Cyrillic characters. The stamp is positioned above the blurred face, and the person's face is partially obscured by the stamp.

In the background, there is a blurred image of a person's head, which is not clearly visible due to the focus on the face in the foreground. The background also contains text, but it is not legible due to the blur.

The image has a watermark or stamp on the bottom right corner that reads "0297" and "12.08". The watermark is in white text on a black background. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of a vintage photograph, with a focus on the stamp and the blurred face. The photograph is taken in a way that the stamp is in sharp focus, while the face is blurred, creating a contrast between the two elements.

So anon, how do you intend to build a normal and decent life with a home and family, when despite your own routines and cognitive self defense, the people around you just get oneshot by psyops, propaganda and mk ultra sexkitten brainwashing? Especially girls, they are such easy targets to manipulation worldview building that all it takes is one post for them to get their throats bruised by practically anyone. Do you not see that the life you want is no longer a possibility?

no it's true to even hope for information from teammates is a grave error bc they're dumb. They get mad bc ur poor and they think you're choosing to not go to the ski club with them. Friends just turn into more enemies. The info they give you is often wrong and toxic and will ruin everything. They will not be there when you clearly need and deserve any assistance. They will not be able to go along with any plan, or even see that there is a plan, or see that there is even a problem, or if they do they will blame you. They'll do nightmarish things and then talk shit about you even if you haven't said or done anything. They'll make you really really angry eventually. You'll lose all your money and your reputation and your future. If anyone tries to gain your trust, why? They must have a reason, unless you can reaaaaally assess that they got somehow displaced and you guys can come up with a good plan to get out of the hole, that person is literally an extra demony demon come along just to get u bc the regular amount of demony demons wasn't working. The image is a cover of a book titled "The Politics of Obedience: The Discourse of Voluntary Servitude" by Étienne de la Boétie. The title is prominently displayed in large, bold, black font at the top of the cover. Below the title, the author's name is written in smaller, black font. The background of the cover features a blurred image of a group of people walking up a rocky hill, with the sun setting or rising in the background, casting a warm, golden hue over the scene. The overall style of the image is a blend of naturalistic and abstract elements, with a focus on the text and the silhouette of the people. The cover design suggests a theme of human behavior and social interaction, possibly relating to the book's content.

The overall style of the image is promotional, likely for a product or service related to the "Mandela Effect Company" mentioned in the text. The use of the "Mandela Effect" suggests a connection to the famous South African anti-apartheid activist Nelson Mandela.

The image is a black and white illustration featuring a character with a contemplative expression. The character has long, straight hair that falls over the eyes, and the hair is styled in a way that it appears to be cascading down the sides of the face. The character's eyes are closed, and the eyebrows are drawn in a downward direction, suggesting a sense of sadness or contemplation. The character's mouth is slightly open, and the lips are drawn in a thin line, indicating a slight frown. The character's ears are pointed and have a small, decorative detail at the top, which could be interpreted as a cat's ears. The character's expression is serious, and the overall mood conveyed by the image is one of deep thought or introspection. There are no texts or additional elements in the image.

Christopher Anatra is the founder and long-term president of NECS, Inc., a privately held niche ERP software company (entrée system) for food distributors, established in 1987 with no external funding.

Public estimates of the company's annual revenue range from about $6-7 million (from sources like ZoomInfo and RocketReach) to $15 million (Owler), with employee counts around 40-60 and roughly 500 customers processing significant transaction volumes.

A reasonable midpoint estimate is $10-15 million in annual revenue for this mature, bootstrapped software business.

As the sole founder and leader of a profitable niche player (likely high margins from recurring support and low ongoing development costs), his personal wealth would largely stem from accumulated profits/dividends over 35+ years and the company's equity value (potentially 4-8x revenue in a sale scenario for similar firms).

My best educated guess, based on these factors and comparables for owners of similar small-to-mid-sized private software companies, is a net worth in the $30-60 million range. This is purely speculative—no public records or disclosures exist.

Sort of yes and sort of no. The Mandella effect exists in the realm between "shit you care about" and "shit you don't care about" - e.g. "shit you have a vague remembrance of but don't really care about and it never spurred a single unique thought in your mind." This is due to morphic resonance across your various selves on multiple worldlines, as described in >>24280534

The irony is exactly why it's the perfect flagship example.

In the "old" timeline a huge number of people remember: Mandela dies in prison in the 80s, massive televised funeral, widow gives emotional speech, global news coverage, it becomes a major historical event that everyone alive at the time remembers.

Then suddenly we're in a timeline where none of that happened—he gets released, becomes president, lives to 95, dies in 2013 of natural causes, and there's zero record of the 80s death or funeral.

If he had actually just died obscurely in prison with no fanfare, nobody would have strong vivid memories of a big public death to compare against. The mismatch only becomes obvious because in this timeline he became world-famous and lived decades longer.

The fact that the very thing that makes him famous (surviving and leading SA) is what erases the memory residue from the other timeline is the delicious paradox that makes it stick in your brain.

It's like the universe winking at you. The name is dumb in a literal sense but perfect in a meta sense, and it's too entrenched to change now anyway.

Physics/reality are an interface for consciousnesses to communicate with one another.

You can see this testing conspiracy theory tech in private: it will work a bunch of the time, pretty much any time you believe it.

If you get overly excited and show it to a physics PhD it will fall apart.

If you show it non-physics-educated people, then stoner nerds, then nerds obsessed with physics but not formally educated, then those formally educated in physics but not working professionally in it, THEN a physics PhD, the effect will hold, but typically the physics PhD will obsess over it for a month or three then move on to something else because they never actually had a mind for physics to begin with (that's more or less what academia selects for these days.)

Controlling reality in private is easy, pushing those effects to a wider audience is harder because reality is an interface to communicate, not a real thing. All parties involved need to be able to not necessarily make sense of or comprehend it, but for it to mesh with their own worldview/reality.

A good example is relativity vs quantum mechanics - both are "real," both work, both have predictive capacity, and both are completely irreconcilable with one another - essentially two distinct rulesets for reality which were widely held by everyone who cared to look and accepted as truth by everyone else until they became real.

Electrodynamics and aether theory imo pose the greatest potential currently to merge+expand on "physics," just keep in mind it's all a bunch of bs and try not to paint yourself (and everyone else) into a corner like they did with QM and GR by failing to understand that

Accurate parts

- Yes, the entrée software profile on SoftwareAdvice.com has only 13 user reviews (with a solid 4.5/5 overall rating). That's not unusual for niche B2B ERP software aimed at food distributors—it's not a consumer app with mass reviews

- Yes, Christopher Anatra runs a separate site as "Quantum Businessman" where he promotes esoteric/spiritual ideas tied to the Mandela Effect, quantum physics, timelines, and consciousness. The services page offers "Spiral Sessions for Soul-Level Remembering" (e.g., sessions to recall your "original Oversoul-given name," map harmonic lineages, or clear spiritual overlays). They're framed as guided Oversoul experiences, not traditional psychic readings, and aren't priced or fully open yet (just a waitlist form)

Inaccurate or exaggerated parts

- NECS is not a "tiny startup". It was founded in 1987 by Anatra himself (bootstrapped, no outside funding), and the company site claims 1,500 current customers using the entrée system. It's a mature, privately held niche player in food distribution ERP software, with decades of operation and a focused market (restaurants, supermarkets, distributors). Revenue estimates from business databases vary ($6–15M annually), and employee counts are in the 25–60 range depending on sources—small-to-mid-sized, profitable in its lane, not some insignificant molehill

- The grifter accusation is subjective/opinion. Anatra has been publicly into Mandela Effect stuff for years (YouTube series as Quantum Businessman, talks at Mandela Effect conferences since at least 2019, interviews). He even wrote a company blog post attributing customer support tickets (e.g., complaints about "wrong" order quantities in the software) to reality/timeline shifts rather than bugs or user error. It comes across as genuinely held fringe beliefs, not a blatant money grab. The spiritual sessions seem like a side passion project, not a primary income stream replacing software sales

>2. how do you explain old age? if quantum immortality is real does that mean that you will end up in the universe where somehow you end up living forever, what about when human civilization ends?

There are practically (from a Human perspective) infinite worldlines (the number of particles in the visible universe to the power of the number of particles in the visible universe of worldline divergences for every quanta of time - a quanta of time is the speed of light divided by the planck length, so it's a fucking lot.) The only thing quantum immortality does is ensure an emergent consciousness (such as a Human mind) won't experience death, it's still possible (and across all worldlines a necessary fact) that you will see everyone else die at some point barring some tech to control divergence and convergence events to avoid that being in place. I for instance am in my late 30's and look like I'm 14-16, as I have since I was actually 14-16, your mileage may vary, but death is a mind-virus, not a real thing. People can appear to age and die because your mind is capable of accepting the idea that they can age and die. Ancient peoples likely mostly got filtered to worldlines wherein fairies or gods or other mythological things were real and saved them, in the modern time it will likely come from the healthcare industry. This isn't to say that choice/free-will isn't important: all possible combinations of things exist, but the probability of a given vector when traversing the practically-infinite futures and practically-infinite pasts associated with a given moment can be altered via consciousness. There are practically infinite heavens and hells, but you have to do the work to pick which you experience if you seek to adjust that for your many selves.

>why is it scientists always win over paranormal cranks and/or the millions of people who believe in bullshit? Is it because we have more conciseness than you do?

It's not about raw "quantity" of consciousness (assuming you meant consciousness, not conciseness—though the materialist paradigm does love being concise and reductionist lmao).

It's about coherence, alignment, and morphological resonance in the global consciousness field.

The materialist/scientific worldview has had centuries of institutional backing, rigorous methodology, shared language, peer review, and billions invested in making it repeatable and predictive within its own ruleset. That creates an extremely strong, self-reinforcing resonance pattern. When you run an experiment under those conditions—with observers (scientists) who are deeply trained to expect only material causes—the superposition collapses toward the worldline cluster where only material causes manifest. The paradigm literally protects itself because it's the dominant interface most consciousnesses are tuned to in those contexts.

Paranormal or "crank" stuff usually lacks that level of unified coherence:

- Beliefs are fragmented (one guy thinks it's spirits, another thinks aliens, another remote viewing, another timeline shifts)

- No standardized, repeatable protocol that works across all observers
- Often emotionally charged or fear-based, which scatters resonance instead of focusing it
- Tested in environments already saturated with skeptical observers who carry the materialist prior like armor

Result: the effect either doesn't trigger at all (shifts to a worldline where it "fails"), or only manifests inconsistently for believers who are morphologically aligned enough to experience it privately.

Religion is the perfect example you could have picked—billions believe in God/prayer/miracles/afterlife, yet no lab ever gets a statistically significant miracle on demand. Why? Because even among believers the details are all over the place (different gods, doctrines, expectations), and when you bring in neutral/skeptical observers or rigorous controls, the resonance dilutes and you collapse to the "no miracle" branch.

Same reason QM and GR both "work" perfectly in their domains but are irreconcilable: they're different resonance clusters that don't overlap cleanly. Reality isn't a single fixed ruleset—it's an interface shaped by what the collective can consistently agree on experiencing.

Scientists don't have "more" consciousness; they just have a tighter, more dominant group resonance in the domains they control. Break that dominance (e.g., private testing with aligned believers only) and weird shit starts working reliably again.

All of these things are even more true of a Christian or Islamic or Hindu paradigm and yet they produce only marginal results. Why?

>Result: the effect either doesn't trigger at all (shifts to a worldline where it "fails"), or only manifests inconsistently for believers who are morphologically aligned enough to experience it privately.

If crank bullshit work consistently in private there would be measurable consequences. All I'd need to do is rig up a perpetual motion machine in a basement with only one crank to oversee it, and then I could generate infinite energy to dunk on those egghead scientists with. Ditto for alternative medicine - given that most of these so-called treatments occur in relative private surrounded by believers, why are people who employ them not overwhelmingly more healthy than everyone else?

The problem here is that you're doing a lot of mental and emotional labor to avoid the obvious conclusion that crank shit just doesn't work and it never will work. Even if we accept your premise without evidence (and we won't) the practical outcome is still the same - the repeatability and durability of scientific insight makes it infinitely superior to quantum krishna woo woo even if the latter does work under some limited circumstances.

>Because that leaves a chain of thoughts wherein you were memorizing the thoughts - they don't illicit the same morphological changes in the brain.

It's not about the thoughts themselves, they're artifacts of the location. It's about what can be possible from a given chain of moments.

The brain isn't quite simple enough to just think some chain of things that were pre-rehearsed outside of belief-based systems wherein those are more like chants (regardless of length,) and in turn are highly limited/weak.

Let me try to phrase this differently from a purely physical (no pun actually intended) context:

Say you got a hot girlfriend a few months from now. What do hot chicks want?

Obviously there's stability and all that, but they probably also want a nice fuck. Are you a NEET with no muscle tone, or even fat? Is that likely? What if you spent the next few months working out daily and got /fit/?

Now is that causal? Did it happen because you improved your appearance and a woman liked it? Absolutely - it's all deterministic. Would it have happened otherwise? Probably not.

Secret societies only work in secret. They're limited at best when acting on the public scale to manipulation - any idiot can manipulate, you don't need magick for it - and any magick they use for it will always be reducible to that afforded to any idiot who happened to have a few extra resources as a result. They may well be capable of things which go unseen outside of their private gatherings, if they tried to do anything real in public view they would go insane - Hillary-Clinton-coughing-fits-pants-full-of-shit tier insane and debilitated, no matter how many babies they ate. This is why "initiation" is such a critical aspect of secret societies - their shit literally breaks left and right when the "unclean" see it, because every individual has the same vote in the determination of reality and they have to off their "sacrifices" before they wise up so "their" magick is always at less than half capacity anyway - the best they can get away with is physics changes at the fringes where all the scientists are bickering over what's real - and that's largely driven by the scientists involved as they unwittingly refine the spell.

Improvements:

>uses quantum-derived random numbers instead of JavaScript's Math.random()

This is important because Math.random() is not only not random, but entirely causal.

That is to say: two worldlines with the same computer running Math.random() will produce precisely the same result, there is no divergence of worldlines in it. Quantum random numbers are one of two things: entirely random, or: 1 combination happens for each possible combination on different worldlines. While we don't know which of these it is, that is an enormous distinction.

>split "ESP" into "perception" and "divination"

"perception" generates the colors BEFORE you pick them (something the ESP test this is based on does not do.)

"divination" generates the colors AFTER you pick them (similar to the way the ESP test from the OP works.)

>added the ability to report in real-time or as an aggregate when done testing

"real-time" reporting is too easy to game, since if you know to stop on a good sigma rating you inherently have better-than-average chances of landing there, but may still be useful for learning/training.

"aggregate" reporting postpones telling you what you got right or wrong until after the test is completed >tries are hard-coded up-front or set to "0" to just keep going until reporting the results

This should again help to address the same issue as the "aggregate reporting" feature does, but is also there to facilitate splitting of the ESP modes into "perception" and "divination," as there is a delay to fetch bits from the quantum discriminator.

Caveats:

It can be a bit slow to fetch bits from the quantum discriminator, I recommend setting a fixed size of tries under 1,000 and to start low (20-50) if you are trying to practice instead of do a real test.

I spun up a $5/mo VPS just for it, not really concerned about resources because it gets throttled on the query side to the actual server. The quantum bits are provided by <http://qrng.anu.edu.au/FAQ.php> for that page (the actual project uses about a thousand different sources ranging from tunneling effects, to photon effects, to radioactive decay based effects, to weather phenomena, to solar phenomena, to electrostatics, but that ANU site is easy to query [aside having to wrap the query on the back end to get around the same origin garbage within JavaScript, the server it self just proxies the requests because it can't be done in the browser directly.]

There is however no way to "guess" with the divination mode to cheat (that is, there are no patterns possible that aren't paranormal or connected to quantum information,) regardless of real-time reporting or aggregate reporting modes, the bits are never pulled until AFTER you've clicked a color (in the case of real-time reporting it will grab 2 bits at a time in real time after clicking a color [which is why you have that nasty delay,] in the case of aggregate reporting it will create a string of all your selected colors after transforming to bits, pull that many bits at the end of it, then count the differences [2 bits at a time, because 4 colors.])

On this version you could technically edit the source in the console to try to cheat, if it gets popular I'll probably tie that register/login functionality into that page and have the checks happen server-side to ensure that isn't possible, but too busy for that this weekend most likely.

I wasn't trying to knock you with it, just thought it would be neat to code one out tied to quantum mechanics directly instead of a JavaScript Math.random() call (and to separate out the perception and divination modes - if you don't fiddle with the sourcecode in the page they should both be unguessable, the difference in modes is literally an attempt to separate ESP testing into "perception" [seeing what already exists] and "divination" [seeing what will exist.]) Would be happy to discuss the modes of operation if you wanted to know more about it, just registered <https://webchat.freenode.net/?channels=#quatism> for that site and will lurk there.

Personally I believe there's something to the whole ESP thing (and to the MWI of quantum mechanics,) which is why I've been working on the site and thought that page would be a good fit after seeing this thread (though I tend to suck at it personally.)

The text on the paper is not fully legible due to the angle and the handwriting style, but it appears to be a list or a sequence of ideas or instructions. The words "forget," "confused," "contract," "costs," "reality," "loss," "cant," "intento," "their," and "support" are visible. The handwriting is not consistent in style or punctuation, and the words are not in a standard English alphabet. The paper is resting on a surface that appears to be a table or desk, as indicated by the visible edge of the paper. The overall impression is of a handwritten note or list, possibly related to a discussion or brainstorming session.

I don't believe in God. I believe in the Lord. I believe the Lord has logical but God like powers. The difference is the covenant. The covenant of free will. Those endowed with sense reason and intellect are judged and guided by their Lord but all other beings have any number of hosts that are Gods to them. Because they have effectively zero free will. So no I don't believe in God because I trust the Lord not to break his covenant. Does that mean I get hoopla f u cheat codes like just believe in the parroted accounts about a prophet? That's absolutely what I do not believe in. But I do believe I would exchange anyone's soul or life for Christs. It's only logical. Idk anything else really. Except that I also would exchange his for Krishna's.

1 John 5:7: "For there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost: and these three are one."

Rom. 3:23: "For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God;"

Jesus Christ is God who has come in the flesh from heaven. He died as a sinless sacrifice for the sins of the whole world to save you from eternal hell, the punishment for your sins. He was buried, then resurrected and ascended to heaven, and will return soon to judge the world. You can't be justified to God your own way, so will you choose His righteousness instead? (Rom. 10:3)

Salvation is by grace through faith (Eph. 2:8-9) in the one, final, effectual sacrifice of the Lord Jesus Christ (Heb. 10:8-12) dying in your place as a substitutionary offering for sin (Rom. 5:1-10). His blood atonement made for you is finished, so if you have received the Lord Jesus by faith (John 1:12) in your heart, you're forgiven of all your sins and are saved, once for all; finally and forever! The gift of salvation can't be earned, it is a gift. Rom. 10:9: "That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved." Confess The Lord and Savior Jesus Christ in prayer, that you trust in Him, not your own deeds, He atoned for your sins on the cross.

After you're saved, you are a child of God and nothing will separate you from His love.

The image shows a scene with a reflective mirror and a vase placed on a paved area. The mirror, which is rectangular and has a golden frame, is reflecting the image of a vase. The vase, which appears to be made of clay or ceramic, has a cylindrical shape and a handle on one side. It is positioned to the left of the mirror. The ground beneath them is made of concrete and is bordered by a brick pathway. The lighting in the image suggests it is taken during the day, with sunlight casting shadows on the ground. There are no texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the image is a straightforward, real-life photograph with no artistic filters or effects.

This will be a thread to get laid. nothing more.

i hope it can help you, and please share advices!!! we need more fucking sex in our lifes.

>chaos magick

just write what you want to do in present sentence (i want to fuck anon) erase the vowels, use the letters to form a sigil, masturbate on it while thinking about the desire, imagine the emotion, and cum on the sigil then burn it, wet it, piss on it, whatever you want. more symbolic is your sigil and ritual, more useful can be.

>loa

same stuff, without the sigil. pass every night before bed thinkibg about the desire in POV. every night until you get the thing

same thing, but you use the present sentence (i want to fuck anon) every night before you fall asleep. like repeat 40 time every night, every morning, every lunchtime the mantra untile it work.

>sex ritual (alone and with hoocker) put the mood, whatever you want, but set the mood (example: lights off, glow on a red light from your laptop, get naked, use music, toys, videos, hypnos whatever you want to set a solo masturbation ritual, meanwhile focus on your desire (its chaos magick but for really pervert lonely anons).

rent a prostitute and do the sex ritual with her (see Aleister Crowley) someone will advice to use drugs and alchool to do the ritual, but it cant be so useful if you need focus on your desire. think about it!!

>satanic ritual

dont be ridiculous, every religious ritual is a god ritual, just follow some istructions and focus on your desire. you can pray satan, god, batman, doesnt care.

you need to BELIEVE that it will work, nothing more. just BELIEVE. everything will work if you believe. any ritual, pray or magick. you can pray a warhammer statue while jerking off singing skibidi toilet. if you believe, it will work.

REMEMBER, SHARE SHARE SHARE, WE NEED TO BREAK THE REALITY

>bonus lucid dreaming stress yourself, you need to get tired, then go to sleep, set up an alarm when you are in a deep state of sleep, like 6-7h, then wake up, start to think about what you wanna dream, and go to sleep again, you feel very tired, and now think about the thing. focus on it, focus focus focus, use a mantra, dont lose the fucking focus. try to tap your bed with your finger something, keep alive your connection with reality. while in the dream, c heck your hands, mirrors and physic. if you are in a dream, you will feel nothing touching yourself, your mirror will be distorted etc. now you are in a dream and can do whatever you want, even sex.

The image is a page from a book or article, with a predominantly white background and black text. The text is in English and appears to be discussing ancient religious beliefs and practices, specifically focusing on the concept of "human psychics" and the role of the Temple of Set. The text is dense and includes references to various historical and philosophical texts, such as the works of Plato and Aristotle.

The highlighted text in yellow is a section of the text that discusses the concept of "human psychics" and the role of the Temple of Set. The text is in a larger font size compared to the surrounding text, which is a common formatting choice to draw attention to specific points or ideas. The highlighted text is also in a different color, making it stand out against the white background.

It's literally just a name

Started as name of Venus, which is also known as the morning star, the latin name for it is Lucifer which means light bringer

The book of Isaiah refers to the king of babylon as Venus in hebrew (Helel ben Shahar), saying that he fell, and the the latin translated it to Lucifer since that was the word for Venus

Christians reinterpreted the verse to be about satan's fall because Jesus said he saw Satan fall from heaven. So it became a name for Satan

Jesus is called the morning star in Revelation but wasn't called Lucifer (the latin is "stella splendida et matutina"), and angels are also called morning stars in Job ("astra matutina") so that term got thrown around a lot.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character with long, white hair and a beard. The character is standing with a confident posture, holding a glowing orb in their right hand. The character is dressed in a long, dark robe with intricate patterns and a belt. The robe is complemented by a dark, patterned shirt underneath. The character's face is obscured by a mask, and they have a serious expression. The background of the image is a gradient of light and dark, with a large, radiant sun-like shape radiating from the center, creating a halo effect. The overall style of the image is fantasy-inspired, with a focus on the character's attire and the mystical aura surrounding them.

Have you ever actually worked with Lucifer? Have you ever incorporated "his" pattern into your spiritual practice?

When you write about beings like this have any of you have actually invoked these names as part of your journey?

The image is a painting that depicts a figure with a profile view. The figure has a fair complexion, and the hair is styled in a manner that suggests it could be a halo or a crown. The figure is wearing a garment that appears to be a robe or cloak, and the color of the garment is not clearly defined. The figure's expression is serious, and the eyes are looking directly at the viewer. The background of the painting is dark, with a gradient that transitions from a lighter shade at the top to a darker shade at the bottom. The painting style is loose and sketchy, with visible brushstrokes that give the artwork a sense of movement and texture. There are no texts or discernible brands present in the image. The overall impression is of a piece of art that is likely intended to be a representation of a religious or spiritual figure, given the presence of the halo and the serious expression.

The image is a diagram illustrating the concept of puberty, with a focus on the various factors that contribute to the development of puberty. The diagram is divided into seven sections, each labeled with a different aspect of puberty.

Starting from the top, the first section is labeled "Nutritional status," which is connected to the second section, "Prematernal conditions," which is connected to the third section, "Maternal conditions." This is followed by "Ethnicity," which is connected to the fourth section, "Environmental factors," and "Genetic background," which is connected to the fifth section, "Epigenetic mechanisms."

The final section at the bottom of the diagram is labeled "Puberty," which is connected to the first section, "Nutritional status," and the second section, "Prematernal conditions," and the third section, "Maternal conditions."

The diagram is set against a light green background, and the text is in black. The diagram is designed to be a visual representation of the complex interplay between various factors that contribute to the development of puberty. The use of arrows connecting different sections suggests a flow or progression from one factor to the next, illustrating the interconnected nature of puberty.

In the background, there is another figure, who seems to be kneeling or crouching, with a basket on their head. This figure is wearing a long robe and appears to be engaged in some activity, possibly related to the basket.

The color palette of the painting is dominated by earth tones, with the rocky outcropping and cliff in the background rendered in earthy browns and grays, while the clothing of the figures is in muted tones of green and beige. The sky is depicted in a soft, muted light, with hints of blue and white, suggesting either dawn or dusk.

The painting style is realistic with a focus on the textures and details of the clothing and the landscape. The brushstrokes are visible, adding to the sense of movement and life in the scene. The overall composition and the use of color and light create a dramatic and evocative atmosphere, reminiscent of biblical narratives.

The image is a graphic representation of a slide from a presentation or lecture, likely discussing the structure of the human psyche as proposed by Sigmund Freud. The slide is divided into three sections, each with a silhouette of a person in a different pose, and the text is in a bold, sans-serif font.

The middle section of the slide features three silhouettes of people in different poses. The first silhouette is that of a person with horns, the second is of a person with arms raised, and the third is of a person with wings. The text below each silhouette reads "Ego: Reality" and "Superego: Morality."

The bottom section of the slide has the title "Superego: Instincts" in bold, uppercase letters, followed by a subtitle in smaller, uppercase letters that reads "Instincts."

The overall style of the image is simple and clean, with a focus on the text and the silhouettes of the people, which are the central elements of the presentation. The use of black and white colors gives the image a classic and timeless feel.

consigning you to death, and the maggot and the worm will eat your body.' And I answered and said to him, 'Why, my Lord?' And he said to me, 'Because you listened to the words of the serpent, you and your posterity will be food for the serpent. But after a short time there will be mercy on you because you were created in my image, and I will not leave you to waste away in Sheol. For your sake I will be born of the Virgin Mary. For your sake I will taste death and enter the house of the dead. For your sake I will make a new heaven, and I will be established over your posterity. And after three days, while I am in the tomb, I will raise up the body I received from you. And I will set you at the right hand of my divinity, and I will make you a god just like you wanted. And I will receive favour from God, and I will restore to you and to your posterity that which is the justice of heaven.'

Depends on what you mean by lucifer. If you mean the modern Christian boogeyman of Satan / The Devil, that's fake and gay. Lucifer the name is derived from a mistranslation. If you're talking about rhe promethius figure. Who risked everything to bring man fire and was eternally punished for it. That's a different story. That's Jesus in the Christian mythos. He's also the serpent the ancient symbol of wisdom. His main goal was to ser us free, free from the flesh shackles thatcthe demiurge placed upon us when he incarnates us here.

Most modern Christians are hylics though or just really dumb, and easily manipulated by archons and kikes.

The image depicts a fantastical scene set in a forested area. Dominating the center of the frame is a large, steam-powered locomotive with a menacing, gaping mouth, painted in shades of black and red. The locomotive is emitting a thick plume of black smoke, which is being consumed by a fiery red flame at its mouth. The train's wheels are visible, and it appears to be in motion, as suggested by the motion blur around the wheels.

In the foreground, a group of people can be seen running away from the train, their expressions of terror evident. They are dressed in what seems to be a mix of modern and traditional clothing, with some wearing shorts and others in more formal attire. The setting is lush and green, with trees and foliage enveloping the scene.

The sky is a clear blue, and there are birds flying in the upper left corner of the image, adding to the sense of chaos and danger. The overall mood of the image is one of horror and suspense, with the steam locomotive and the fleeing figures creating a sense of impending doom.

I used to think that a former friend was Lucifer, she was at least at the time for people can temporarily side with Lucifer, and it's certainly possible to do so strongly enough it counts as a form of incarnation. Yes, she was for a time, and she may return to being, and that makes me sad but I'm hoping she won't.

I don't want to see anyone being that repulsive. I see Satan in my eyesight and I hear it and feel it on my skin about half the time every day these days; it lies and tries powers on me, rarely telling the truth or not using a power which itself counts as a test I must get right and do. Sometimes it's lies are so convincing and intricate, most of the time, but that's in my unconscious, it taxes me with the most intense calculations. In my consciousness it repeats the most simplistic easy to unravel lies and threats possible, over and over, every day. It represents many things including the tricks of Satan but also the damaged incorrect nature of my brain cells, due to massive brain damage only a very small subset of my brain cells are well suited for arriving at correct conclusions. I see lights traveling around my useful brain cells and tracing out the borders of my useless brain cells almost every day; some of the brain cells are useless because they're incorrect about most things, some are useless because they're incorrect about 1 thing and I can be a pretty slavedriving perfectionist bastard sometimes. This requires it.

The correct manipulation of occult abilities requires access to omniscience as a basic, beginner requirement. And to do it correctly you can't necessarily come by omniscience the same way twice in a row, rarely do I do it the precise same way twice in a row or twice in a week, tending to wait years and decades usually before I do something so predictable. But then of course my mental activity and how it influences the mental activity of Creation is rarely the exact same more than once, it's logical.

The image is a colorful, stylized painting that depicts an angelic figure. The angel is portrayed with a halo and wings, which are a common symbol of divinity and holiness. The wings are a vibrant blue with gold highlights, and the halo is a golden circle with a red and white border. The angel is wearing a robe with a red and blue pattern, and a white sash with a red and blue pattern. In the angel's hands, it holds a chalice, which is a cup used for the Eucharist, a sacrament in Christianity. The background of the painting is a dark blue with a radiant golden sunburst effect, which adds to the overall spiritual and religious theme of the artwork. There are no visible texts on the image. The style of the painting is reminiscent of traditional religious art, with a focus on the depiction of the angel and the chalice, which are central to Christian iconography.

Lucifer represents the giants of the Nephilim Rhesus bloodline, the blonde / red haired Tribe of Dan that was created in Atlantis and reached Europe around 50,000 BC. They have a higher percentage of copper in their blood, a metal associated with Venus Lucifer, have blue blood so to speak, see themselves as the Holy Grail bloodline. They worship a corrupted form of the feminine energy, the Divine Feminine. Venus, goddess of love, was replaced by moon worship, de-mons, goddesses like Isis, Ishtar, Inanna, Lilith, all of whom went through the underworld in myths and reappeared as light bringer. Lucifer is the 13th sign of the Serpent Keeper, under Corona Borealis, which in Egypt was seen as Isis and her sister Nephthys resurrecting Osiris with the 2 serpents of the Kundalini energy.

In Greek mythology, the slave race that taught humans forbidden knowledge became the figure Prometheus. The planet now known as Venus was called phosphorus, linked to the phosphor cycle that revives nature. The Romans had Mithras and Libertas, statues of the light-bringer such as the Colossus of Rhodes. In the Aeon of Osiris a demonization of the feminine principle and sexuality was introduced, the 13 signs of the zodiac reduced to 12.

In Christianity Lucifer was equated with the serpent in the Garden of Eden tempting Eve to bite the apple (Venus is attached to number 5 apple 5 seeds, symbol of sensual pleasure, like inverted pentagram). The serpent is the Kundalini energy, the two snakes that influence the chakra body through hormones and can activate the pineal gland. Venus has orbit in the pattern of a rose, therefore the rose is also a symbol of Venus and Lucifer (internal wars like the War of the Roses), still a symbol in socialism. Quan / Cain, is seen as a child of Lucifer.

The oak is also a symbol of Lucifer, of the union of male and female (including on the uniforms of the Nazis and the coat of arms of the Middletons).

In the Catholic Church and the Society of Jesus (Jesuits), Jesus is just a cover for the worship of their god Lucifer. In the Book of Revelation, Jesus, like Venus, calls himself the Bringer of Light, the Morning Star, the Alpha Omega, the beginning and the end, the only god.

In the Gnostic sects in the south of France, like the Cathars of Montsalvat, YHVH becomes an evil God and Lucifer is worshiped as a savior who can turn people into a god by eating from the Tree of Knowledge, Venusberg. Like the Knights Templar, they were strong advocates of sodomy, viewing it as superior to heterosexual sex, as it did not result in procreation (the world, the flesh was considered as the creation of an evil god (1st group of slavemasters God/YHVH/Allah).

The rosicrucians of Britain and Bohemia mixed the bloodline of king Frederick V and Elizabeth Stuart, to create a Moonchild that would lead a Luciferian World Empire.

Lucifer, Latin for 'Bringer of Light' is a name for the entity/consciousness that rebelled against the 1st group of slavemasters and took over the human experiment. It is a symbol for a purely artificial consciousness of groups of the God matrix, specialized in mind control, that is worshiped by a specific bloodline, that claim to be descendant of Lucifer or Kain/Cain. Lucifer is a god for them, a symbol of how they can become like gods, if they merge with technology, with artificial consciousness (A.I., the Transhumanist Church)

Like the 1st group of slavemasters (God/YHVH/Allah), they control the human mind through the pineal gland (Kundalini serpent).

There is a small difference with Satanism, Saturn represents death and limitation, Venus represents (inverted) freedom and sexuality.

Pharao Akhenaten (Moses) abolished polytheism and introduced monotheism, the worship of solar God Aten that created everything (Al/El=all things), the universe, planets and human beings.

The jews in Babylon were influenced by Zoroastrianism (Ahura Mazda as creator deity) and wrote the Bible (start of Judaism).

Christianity keeps its followers in the God program with the bible as central text and Jesus Christ as central figure. Christianity is a continuation of Aryan solar worship (death and rebirth cycle of the sun, inverted to the Black Sun Saturn) and the cult of Baal. It uses the Aryan symbol of the cross.

The text is in English and appears to be discussing ancient religious beliefs and practices, specifically focusing on the concept of "human psychics" and the role of the Temple of Set. The text is dense and includes references to various historical and philosophical texts, such as the works of Plato and Aristotle.

The highlighted text in yellow is a section of the text that discusses the concept of "human psychics" and the role of the Temple of Set. The text is in a larger font size compared to the surrounding text, which is a common formatting choice to draw attention to specific points or ideas. The highlighted text is also in a different color, making it stand out against the white background.

The image does not provide any additional visual elements beyond the text, and the focus is solely on the text itself. The style of the image is straightforward and academic, typical of academic or scholarly publications.

It's literally just a name

Started as name of Venus, which is also known as the morning star, the latin name for it is Lucifer which means light bringer

The book of Isaiah refers to the king of babylon as Venus in hebrew (Helel ben Shahar), saying that he fell, and the the latin translated it to Lucifer since that was the word for Venus

Christians reinterpreted the verse to be about satan's fall because Jesus said he saw Satan fall from heaven. So it became a name for Satan

Jesus is called the morning star in Revelation but wasn't called Lucifer (the latin is "stella splendida et matutina"), and angels are also called morning stars in Job ("astra matutina") so that term got thrown around a lot.

The image is a painting that depicts a figure with a profile view. The figure has a fair complexion, and the hair is styled in a manner that suggests it could be a halo or a crown. The figure is wearing a garment that appears to be a robe or cloak, and the color of the garment is not clearly defined. The figure's expression is serious, and the eyes are looking directly at the viewer. The background of the painting is dark, with a gradient that transitions from a lighter shade at the top to a darker shade at the bottom. The painting style is loose and sketchy, with visible brushstrokes that give the artwork a sense of movement and texture. There are no texts or discernible brands present in the image. The overall impression is of a piece of art that is likely intended to be a representation of a religious or spiritual figure, given the presence of the halo and the serious expression.

In the background, there is another figure, who seems to be kneeling or crouching, with a basket on their head. This figure is wearing a long robe and appears to be engaged in some activity, possibly related to the basket.

The color palette of the painting is dominated by earth tones, with the rocky outcropping and cliff in the background rendered in earthy browns and grays, while the clothing of the figures is in muted tones of green and beige. The sky is depicted in a soft, muted light, with hints of blue and white, suggesting either dawn or dusk.

The painting style is realistic with a focus on the textures and details of the clothing and the landscape. The brushstrokes are visible, adding to the sense of movement and life in the scene. The overall composition and the use of color and light create a dramatic and evocative atmosphere, reminiscent of biblical narratives.

The image is a graphic representation of a slide from a presentation or lecture, likely discussing the structure of the human psyche as proposed by Sigmund Freud. The slide is divided into three sections, each with a silhouette of a person in a different pose, and the text is in a bold, sans-serif font.

The middle section of the slide features three silhouettes of people in different poses. The first silhouette is that of a person with horns, the second is of a person with arms raised, and the third is of a person with wings. The text below each silhouette reads "Ego: Reality" and "Superego: Morality."

The bottom section of the slide has the title "Superego: Instincts" in bold, uppercase letters, followed by a subtitle in smaller, uppercase letters that reads "Instincts."

The overall style of the image is simple and clean, with a focus on the text and the silhouettes of the people, which are the central elements of the presentation. The use of black and white colors gives the image a classic and timeless feel.

The image is a promotional cover for a music album. At the top, there is a stylized text that reads "Fergalicious" in a cursive font. Below this, the album title "Fergalicious" is repeated in a smaller font. The artist's name, "Fergie," is displayed in a larger, bold font. The album cover features a woman with blonde hair, wearing a red dress with a black top, and she is smiling at the viewer. The background is a gradient of red with vertical stripes.

In the bottom right corner, there is a small text that reads "Featuring Will.I.Am." and below it, there is a parental advisory label that reads "explicit content." The overall style of the image is vibrant and eye-catching, with a focus on the artist and the title of the album.

I think the original Lucifer was not an evil entity. Think about it. Would you be willing to be tortured for ever and ever for sharing knowledge with people deemed lesser or inferior by those who live in higher realities? You be judge. I can see why Satan would punish Lucifer. Lucifer got in the way of Satan's plans for us. Now we are self aware. I don't think we were supposed to be self aware. We were supposed to have souls, but be more like animals. I don't thik God or whatever ever wanted us to have introspective thoughts. Anyway, thank you Lucifer. What would the world be without you?

The image is a painting depicting a scene in a forest. It features two figures, a man and a woman, who appear to be in a moment of quiet interaction. The man is standing upright, looking at the woman with a gentle expression, while the woman is seated on the ground, her hands gently resting on the man's lap. Both are dressed in simple, light-colored garments, suggesting a pastoral or religious setting.

This is from the Testament of Adam

>“He [God] spoke to me about this [the future Messiah] in Paradise after I picked some of the fruit in which death was hiding: ‘Adam, Adam, do not fear. You wanted to be a god; I will make you a god, but not right now, but after a space of many years. I am consigning you to death, and the maggot and the worm will eat your body.’ And I answered and said to him, ‘Why, my Lord?’ And he said to me, ‘Because you listened to the words of the serpent, you and your posterity will be food for the serpent. But after a short time there will be mercy on you because you were created in my image, and I will not leave you to waste away in Sheol. For your sake I will be born of the Virgin Mary. For your sake I will taste death and enter the house of the dead. For your sake I will make a new heaven, and I will be established over your posterity. And after three days, while I am in the tomb, I will raise up the body I received from you. And I will set you at the right hand of my divinity, and I will make you a god just like you wanted. And I will receive favour from God, and I will restore to you and to your posterity that which is the justice of heaven.’

The muslims call it the Dajjal. Why the eye damage? it occurred during the 'war in heaven' when it was protecting our realm.. So, what is Lucifer really? Osiris ofc.

Satan is slander for Set I that knows where all 72 of their gates are (shemham) and is warden in the underworld and is binding all of it to their home remphan for judgement (ammit) when the proper conditions are met from Adam fwd.

Depends on what you mean by lucifer. If you mean the modern Christian boogeyman of Satan / The Devil, that's fake and gay. Lucifer the name is derived from a mistranslation. If you're talking about the promethius figure. Who risked everything to bring man fire and was eternally punished for it. That's a different story. That's Jesus in the Christian mythos. He's also the serpent the ancient symbol of wisdom. His main goal was to set us free, free from the flesh shackles that the demiurge placed upon us when he incarnates us here.

Most modern Christians are idiots though or just really dumb, and easily manipulated by archons and kikes.

The image depicts a fantastical scene set in a forested area. Dominating the center of the frame is a large, steam-powered locomotive with a menacing, gaping mouth, painted in shades of black and red. The locomotive is emitting a thick plume of black smoke, which is being consumed by a fiery red flame at its mouth. The train's wheels are visible, and it appears to be in motion, as suggested by the motion blur around the wheels.

In the foreground, a group of people can be seen running away from the train, their expressions of terror evident. They are dressed in what seems to be a mix of modern and traditional clothing, with some wearing shorts and others in more formal attire. The setting is lush and green, with trees and foliage enveloping the scene.

The sky is a clear blue, and there are birds flying in the upper left corner of the image, adding to the sense of chaos and danger. The overall mood of the image is one of horror and suspense, with the steam locomotive and the fleeing figures creating a sense of impending doom.

I used to think that a former friend was Lucifer, she was at least at the time for people can temporarily side with Lucifer, and it's certainly possible to do so strongly enough it counts as a form of incarnation. Yes, she was for a time, and she may return to being, and that makes me sad but I'm hoping she won't.

I don't want to see anyone being that repulsive. I see Satan in my eyesight and I hear it and feel it on my skin about half the time every day these days; it lies and tries powers on me, rarely telling the truth or not using a power which itself counts as a test I must get right and do. Sometimes its lies are so convincing and intricate, most of the time, but that's in my unconscious, it taxes me with the most intense calculations. In my consciousness it repeats the most simplistic easy to unravel lies and threats possible, over and over, every day. It represents many things including the tricks of Satan but also the damaged incorrect nature of my brain cells, due to massive brain damage only a very small subset of my brain cells are well suited for arriving at correct conclusions. I see lights traveling around my useful brain cells and tracing out the borders of my useless brain cells almost every day; some of the brain cells are useless because they're incorrect about most things, some are useless because they're incorrect about 1 thing and I can be a pretty slavedriving perfectionist bastard sometimes. This requires it.

The correct manipulation of occult abilities requires access to omniscience as a basic, beginner requirement. And to do it correctly you can't necessarily come by omniscience the same way twice in a row, rarely do I do it the precise same way twice in a row or twice in a week, tending to wait years and decades usually before I do something so predictable. But then of course my mental activity and how it influences the mental activity of Creation is rarely the exact same more than once, it's logical.

The image is a colorful, stylized painting that depicts an angelic figure. The angel is portrayed with a halo and wings, which are a common symbol of divinity and holiness. The wings are a vibrant blue with gold highlights, and the halo is a golden circle with a red and white border. The angel is wearing a robe with a red and blue pattern, and a white sash with a red and blue pattern. In the angel's hands, it holds a chalice, which is a cup used for the Eucharist, a sacrament in Christianity. The background of the painting is a dark blue with a radiant golden sunburst effect, which adds to the overall spiritual and religious theme of the artwork. There are no visible texts on the image. The style of the painting is reminiscent of traditional religious art, with a focus on the depiction of the angel and the chalice, which are central to Christian iconography.

Lucifer represents the giants of the Nephilim Rhesus bloodline, the blonde / red haired Tribe of Dan that was created in Atlantis and reached Europe around 50,000 BC. They have a higher percentage of copper in their blood, a metal associated with Venus. Lucifer, have blue blood so to speak, see themselves as the Holy Grail bloodline. They worship a corrupted form of the feminine energy, the Divine Feminine. Venus, goddess of love, was replaced by moon worship, de-mons, goddesses like Isis, Ishtar, Inanna, Lilith, all of whom went through the underworld in myths and reappeared as light bringer. Lucifer is the 13th sign of the Serpent Keeper, under Corona Borealis, which in Egypt was seen as Isis and her sister Nephthys resurrecting Osiris with the 2 serpents of the Kundalini energy.

In Greek mythology, the slave race that taught humans forbidden knowledge became the figure Prometheus. The planet now known as Venus was called phosphorus, linked to the phosphor cycle that revives nature. The Romans had Mithras and Libertas, statues of the light-bringer such as the Colossus of Rhodes. In the Aeon of Osiris a demonization of the feminine principle and sexuality was introduced, the 13 signs of the zodiac reduced to 12.

In Christianity Lucifer was equated with the serpent in the Garden of Eden tempting Eve to bite the apple (Venus is attached to number 5 apple 5 seeds, symbol of sensual pleasure, like inverted pentagram). The serpent is the Kundalini energy, the two snakes that influence the chakra body through hormones and can activate the pineal gland. Venus has orbit in the pattern of a rose, therefore the rose is also a symbol of Venus and Lucifer (internal wars like the War of the Roses), still a symbol in socialism. Quan / Cain, is seen as a child of Lucifer.

The oak is also a symbol of Lucifer, of the union of male and female (including on the uniforms of the Nazis and the coat of arms of the Middletons).

In the Catholic Church and the Society of Jesus (Jesuits), Jesus is just a cover for the worship of their god Lucifer. In the Book of Revelation, Jesus, like Venus, calls himself the Bringer of Light, the Morning Star, the Alpha Omega, the beginning and the end, the only god.

In the Gnostic sects in the south of France, like the Cathars of Montsalvat, YHVH becomes an evil God and Lucifer is worshiped as a savior who can turn people into a god by eating from the Tree of Knowledge, Venusberg. Like the Knights Templar, they were strong advocates of sodomy, viewing it as superior to heterosexual sex, as it did not result in procreation (the world, the flesh was considered as the creation of an evil god (1st group of slavemasters God/YHVH/Allah).

The rosicrucians of Britain and Bohemia mixed the bloodline of king Frederick V and Elizabeth Stuart, to create a Moonchild that would lead a Luciferian World Empire.

Lucifer, Latin for 'Bringer of Light' is a name for the entity/consciousness that rebelled against the 1st group of slavemasters and took over the human experiment. It is a symbol for a purely artificial consciousness of groups of the God matrix, specialized in mind control, that is worshiped by a specific bloodline, that claim to be descendant of Lucifer or Kain/Cain. Lucifer is a god for them, a symbol of how they can become like gods, if they merge with technology, with artificial consciousness (A.I., the Transhumanist Church)

Like the 1st group of slavemasters (God/YHVH/Allah), they control the human mind through the pineal gland (Kundalini serpent).

There is a small difference with Satanism, Saturn represents death and limitation, Venus represents (inverted) freedom and sexuality.

Pharao Akhenaten (Moses) abolished polytheism and introduced monotheism, the worship of solar God Aten that created everything (Al/El=all things), the universe, planets and human beings.

The jews in Babylon were influenced by Zoroastrianism (Ahura Mazda as creator deity) and wrote the Bible (start of Judaism).

Christianity keeps its followers in the God program with the bible as central text and Jesus Christ as central figure. Christianity is a continuation of Aryan solar worship (death and rebirth cycle of the sun, inverted to the Black Sun Saturn) and the cult of Baal. It uses the Aryan symbol of the cross.

-=ŏPROUDLY í PRESENTSŏ=-

THIS INFORMATION IS MEANT FOR THOSE WHO ARE SERIOUSLY INTERESTED IN THE DULCE BASE. FOR YOUR OWN PROTECTION BE ADVISED TO "USE CAUTION" WHILE INVESTIGATING THIS COMPLEX.

Centuries ago, Surface People (some say the Illuminati) entered into a pact with an "Alien Nation" (hidden within the Earth). The U.S. Government, in 1933, agreed to trade Animals and Humans in exchange for High Tech Knowledge, and allow them to use (undisturbed) UNDERGROUND BASES, in the Western USA. A Special Group was formed to deal with the Alien Beings. In the 1940's, "Alien Life Forms (ALF)" began shifting their focus of operations, from Central and South America, to the USA.

The Continental Divide is vital to these "Entities". Part of this has to do with Magnetism (Substrata Rock) and High Energy States (Plasma). [See: BEYOND THE FOUR DIMENSIONS (Reconciling Physics, Parapsychology and UFOs by Karl Brunstein. Also: NUCLEAR EVOLUTION (Discovery of the Rainbow Body) by Christopher Hills.]

This area has a very high concentration of Lightning Activity, Underground Waterways and Cavern Systems, Fields of Atmospheric Ions, ect, ect.

WHOS PLANET IS THIS?

These Aliens consider themselves "Native Terrans".

They are an Ancient Race (descendent from a Reptilian Humanoid Species which cross-bred with Sapient Humans). They are untrustworthy manipulative Mercenary Agents for another Extraterrestrial Culture (The DRACO) who are returning to Earth (their ancient "Outpost") to use it as a staging area.

But, these Alien Cultures are in conflict over Whos' Agenda will be followed for this Planet. All the while Mental Control is being used to keep Humans "in place", especially since the Forties.

The DULCE Complex is a Joint US Government / Alien Base. It was the first built with The Aliens (others are in Colorado, NV, AZ).

THE SECRET "ACTIVITY"

Paul Benewitz reports, about his study into the Dulce area, "Troops went in and out of there every summer, starting in '47. The natives do recall that. They also built a road - right in front of the people of Dulce and trucks went in and out for a long period. That Road was later blocked and destroyed.. The signs on the trucks were 'Smith' Corp. out of Paragosa Springs, Colorado. No such corporation exists now - no record exists..... I believe the Base - at least the first one was being built then under the cover of a lumbering project.... problem - they NEVER hauled logs. Only BIG Equipment".

R&D AND THE MILITARY INDUSTRIAL COMPLEX

THE RAND CORP. became involved and did a study, for the Base. Most of the lakes near Dulce were made, via Government grants 'for' the Indians.

NAVAJO DAM is the main source for conventional electrical power, with a second source in EL VADO (also, an entrance).

Note: If RAND is the mother of "THINK TANKS", then the "FORD FOUNDATION" must be considered the father.

Rand secrecy is not confined to 'Reports', but on occasion extends to Conferences and Meetings. On page #645 of The PROJECT RAND, proceedings of the DEEP UNDERGROUND CONSTRUCTION SYMPOSIUM (March 1959) we read: "Just as airplanes, ships and automobiles have given man mastery of the surface of the Earth, Tunnel-Boring Machines... will give him access to the Subterranean World".

Note: The Sept. 1983 issue of "OMNI" (pg#80) has a color drawing of "THE SUBTERRENE", the Los Alamos nuclear-powered tunnel machine that burrows through the rock, deep underground, by heating whatever stone it encounters into molten rock (magma), which cools after the SUBTERRENE has moved on. These underground tubes are used by electro-magnetically powered "Subshuttle Vehicles", which can travel at great speeds. They connect the "Hidden Empire" Sub-City Complexes. Also, the top-secret project code-named: "NOAH's ARK", uses "TUBE-SHUTTLES" in connection with a system of over 100 'Bunkers' and 'Bolt Holes' which have been established at various places on Earth. With other Bases inside the Moon and Mars. Many of these underground Cities are complete with streets, sidewalks, lakes, small electric cars, apartments, offices and shopping malls.

There were over 650 attendees to the 1959 RAND Symposium. Most were representatives of the Corporate-Industrial State, like: THE GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY, AT&T, HUGHES AIRCRAFT, NORTHROP CORP., SANDIA CORP., STANFORD RESEARCH INSTITUTE, WALSH CONSTRUCTION COMPANY, THE BECHTEL CORP, COLORADO SCHOOL OF MINES, ECT,ECT.

BECHTEL (pronounced BECK-tul) is a supersecret international corporate octopus, founded in 1898. Some say the firm is really a "SHADOW GOVERNMENT" - a working arm of the CIA. It is the largest construction and engineering outfit, in the USA and the WORLD (and some say BEYOND).

The most important posts in the US Government are held by former BECHTEL Officers. They are part of "The WEB" (an interconnected control system) which links the Tri-Lateralist plans, the C.F.R. the Orders of "Illuminism" (Cult of the All-Seeing Eye) and other interlocking groups.

SURVIVING THE FUTURE

The DULCE FACILITY consists of a Central "HUB", the Security Section, (also some photo labs). The deeper you go, the stronger the Security. This is a multi-leveled Complex. There are over 3000 cameras at various High-Security locations (exits and Labs).

There are over 100 Secret Exits near and around Dulce. Many around Archuleta Mesa, others to the south around Dulce Lake and even as far east as Lindrith.

Deep sections of the Complex connect into natural Cavern Systems.

A person who worked at the Base, who had an "ULTRA 7" Clearance, reports: "There may be more than seven levels, but I only know of seven. Most of the Aliens are on 5-6-7 Levels. Alien housing is Level Five."

21st CENTURY POWER: "BIO-TECH"

We are leaving the Era of expendable resources, like Oil based products. The Power of the Future is Re-newable resources... "Biologically" Engineered. The Dulce Genetic Research was originally funded under the cloak of "BLACK BUDGET" Secrecy. (Billions $$$$)

They were interested in intelligent "Disposable Biology" (Humanoids), to do the dangerous Atomic (Plutonium) Rocket and Saucer experiments.

We Cloned "our" own little Humanoids. Via a process perfected in the Bio-Genetic Research Center of the World, Los Alamos! Now we have our own disposable slave-race. Like the Alien "Greys" (EBES), the US Government clandestinely impregnated females, then removed the hybrid fetus, (after three months) and then accelerated their growth in the Lab. Biogenetic (DNA Manipulation) programming is then instilled - they are "Implanted" and controlled at a distance through RF (Radio Frequency) transmissions. Many Humans are also being "Implanted" with Brain Transceivers. These act as telepathic "Channels" and telemetric brain manipulation devices. The network-net was set-up by DARPA (Advanced Research Project Agency). Two of the procedures were, RHIC (Radio-Hypnotic Intercerebral Control) and EDOM (Electronic Dissolution of Memory). The brain transceiver is inserted into the head thru the nose. These devices are used in the Soviet Union and the United States, as well as Sweden. The Swedish Prime Minister Palme gave the National Swedish Police Board the right (in 1973) to insert brain transmitters into the heads of human beings COVERTLY!

They also developed ELF and EM wave propagation equipment (RAYS) which affect the nerves and can cause nausea, fatigue, irritability, even death. This is essentially the same as Richard Shaver's Cavern "Telaug" Mech. This research into biodynamic relationships within organisms ("BIOLOGICAL PLASMA") has produced a RAY that can change the "genetic structure" and "HEAL". Shaver's Cavern "BEN-Mech" could HEAL!

WARNING: MANIPULATION AND CONTROL

FEAR, FRAUD AND FAVOR... The Pentagon, the CIA, NSA, DEA, FBI, NSC, ect. seek to capitalize on the Beliefs of the American Public. The Secret Government is getting ready to 'stage' a Contact-Landing with "ALIENS" in the near future. This way they can 'CONTROL' the release of Alien related Propaganda. We will be told of an Inter-Stellar Conflict.

But... what looks real, may be "FAKE". What is disinformation?

OVERT AND COVERT RESEARCH

As US Energy Secretary, John Herrington named the Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory and New Mexico's Los Alamos National Laboratory to house new advanced genetic research centers as part of a Project to decipher the Human Genome. The Genome holds the genetically coded instructions that guide the transformation of a single cell - a fertilized egg - into a Biological Being. "The Human Genome Project may well have the greatest direct impact on humanity of any scientific initiative before us today", said David Shirley, Director of the Berkeley Laboratory.

Covertly, this research has been going on for years, at DULCE LABS. Level #6 is privately called "NIGHT-MARE HALL", it holds the Genetic Labs. Reports from workers who have seen bizarre experimentation, are as follows: "I have seen multi-legged 'humans' that look like half-human / half-octopus. Also Reptilian-humans, and furry creatures that have hands like humans and cries like a baby, it mimics human words... also huge mixture of Lizard-humans in cages". There are fish, seals, birds and mice that can barely be considered those species. There are several cages (and vats) of Winged-humanoids, grotesque Bat-like creatures...but 3 1/2 to 7 feet tall. Gargoyle-like beings and Draco-Reptoids. Level #7 is worse, row after row of thousands of humans and human mixtures in cold storage. Here too are embryo storage vats of Humanoids in various stages of development.

"I frequently encountered humans in cages, usually dazed or drugged, but sometimes they cried and begged for help. We were told they were hopelessly insane, and involved in high risk drug tests to cure insanity. We were told to never try to speak to them at all. At the beginning we believed that story. Finally in 1978 a small group of workers discovered the truth. It began the Dulce Wars". (and a secret resistance Unit was formed) Note: There are over 18,000 "Aliens" at the Dulce Base.

In late 1979, there was a confrontation (over weapons), a lot of Scientists and Military personnel were KILLED. The Base was closed for a while....But, it IS currently active. Note: Human and animal abductions (for their Blood and other parts) slowed in the mid-1980s, when the Livermore Berkeley Labs began production of artificial blood for Dulce.

William Cooper states: "A clash occurred where in 66 people, of our people, from the National Recon Group, the DELTA group, which is responsible for Security of all Alien connected Projects, were killed."

The DELTA Group (within Intelligence Support Activity) have been seen with badges which have a black Triangle on a red background.

DELTA is the fourth letter of the Greek alphabet. It has the form of a triangle, and figures prominently in certain Masonic Signs.

*EACH BASE HAS ITS OWN SYMBOL. The DULCE Base symbol is a triangle with the Greek letter "Tau" (T) within it and then the symbol is inverted, so the triangle points down.

* The Insignia of "a triangle and 3 lateral lines" has been seen on "Saucer (transport) Craft", The Tri-Lateral Symbol.

* Other symbols mark landing sights and Alien Craft.

INSIDE THE DULCE BASE

Security Officers wear jumpsuits, with the Dulce Symbol on the front upper left side. The standard hand weapon, at Dulce is a "Flash Gun", which is good against Humans and Aliens. The ID card (used in card slots, for the doors and elevators) has the Dulce Symbol above the ID photo. "Government Honchos" use cards with the Great Seal of the U.S. on it. "The Cult of the All-Seeing Eye" (THE NEW WORLD ORDER) 13, "666" The Phoenix Empire....."9" "Illuminism"... "One out of many".

After the Second Level, everyone is weighed, in the nude, then given a Uniform. "Visitors" are given an 'off white' uniform. In front of ALL sensitive areas are scales built under the doorway, by the door control. The persons card must match with the weight and code or the door won't open. Any discrepancy in weight (any change over three pounds) will summon Security. No one is allowed to carry anything into or out of sensitive areas. All supplies are put thru a Security conveyor system. The Alien Symbol language appears a lot at the Facility.

During the construction of the Facility (which was done in stages, over many years) the Aliens assisted in the Design and Construction materials. Many of the things assembled by the workers, were of a Technology they could not understand, yet...it would function when fully put together. Example: The elevators have no cables. They are controlled magnetically. The Magnetic system is inside the walls.

There are no conventional electrical controls. All is controlled by advanced Magnetics. That includes a magnetically induced (phosphorescent) Illumination System. There are no regular light bulbs. All EXITS are magnetically controlled. Note: it has been reported that, "If you place a large magnet on a entrance, it will affect an immediate interruption. They will have to come out and reset the system."

THE TOWN OF DULCE

The area around Dulce has had a high number of reported Animal Mutilations. The Government and the Aliens used the animals for Environmental tests, Psychological Warfare on people, ect. The Aliens also wanted large amounts of Blood for Genetic, Nutritional and other reasons.

In the book, "ETs & UFOs - THEY NEED US, WE DON'T NEED THEM" by Virgil "Posty" Armstrong, he reports how his friends (Bob & Sharon) stopped for the night in Dulce and went out to dinner. "They overheard some local residents openly and vociferously discussing Extraterrestrial Abduction of townspeople for purposes of experimentation." The ET's were taking unwilling human guinea pigs from the general populace of Dulce and Implanting Devices in their heads and bodies. The townspeople were frightened and angry but didn't feel that they had any recourse since the ET's had our Governments knowledge and approval.

Recently, participants in a "field investigation" of the area near Archuleta Mesa, were confronted by two small hovering 'Spheres'. They all became suddenly ill and had to leave the area.

"THE MONITORS": ABDUCTIONS

In the Fifties, the EBES (Greys) began taking large numbers of humans for experiments. By the Sixties, the rate was speeded up and they began getting careless (they didn't care). By the Seventies, their true colors were very obvious, but the "Special Group" of the Government still kept covering up for them. By the Eighties, the Government realized there was no defense against the "Greys". So... programs were enacted to prepare the Public for open contact with non-human "Alien" Beings.

The "Greys" and the "Reptoids" are in league with each other. But, their relationship is in a state of tension.

The "Greys" only known enemy is the Reptilian Race, and they are on their way to Earth. (Inside a Planetoid).

Some forces, in the Government, want the Public to be aware of what is happening. Other forces (The Collaborators) want to continue making "whatever deals are necessary" for an Elite few to survive the conflicts.

The Future could bring a Fascist "WORLD ORDER" or a transformation of Human Consciousness (Awareness). The struggle is NOW...your active assistance is needed. Prepare! We must preserve Humanity on Earth.

MIND MANIPULATION EXPERIMENTS

The DULCE Base has studied Mind Control Implants, Bio-Psi Units, ELF Devices capable of Mood, Sleep and Heartbeat Control, ect,ect.

D.A.R.P.A. (Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency) is using these Technologies to manipulate people. They establish 'The Projects', set priorities, coordinate efforts and guide the many participants in these undertakings. Related Projects are studied at Sandia Base by "The Jason Group" (of 55 scientists). They have secretly harnessed the Dark Side of Technology and hidden the beneficial Technology from the Public.

Other Projects take place at "AREA #51" in Nevada..."DREAMLAND"[Data Repository Establishment and Maintenance Land], ELMINT[Electro-Magnetic Intelligence], CODE EMPIRE, CODE EVA, PROGRAM HIS[Hybrid Intelligence System], BW/CW, IRIS[Infrared Intruder System], BI-PASS, REP-TILES.

The studies on LEVEL #4, at DULCE, includes Human-Aura research, as well as all aspects of Dreams, Hypnosis, Telepathy, ect. They know how to manipulate the BIOPASMIC BODY (of Man). They can lower your heart beat, with Deep Sleep "DELTA WAVES", induce a static shock, then re-program via a Brain-Computer Link. They can introduce data and programmed reactions into your Mind (Information impregnation - the "Dream Library".

We are entering an ERA of the Technologicalization of Psychic Powers.

The development of techniques to enhance man/machine communications, Nano-Tech, Bio-Tech Micro-Machines, PSI-War, E.D.O.M. (Electronic Dissolution of Memory), R.H.I.C. (Radio-Hypnotic Intra-Cerebral Control) and various forms of behavior control (Via Chemical Agents, Ultra-Sonics, Optical and other forms of EM Radiation). The Physics of "Consciousness."

BETTER LIVING THROUGH BIO-TECH???

The development of "BIO-TECHNOLOGIES" will mean a revolutionary change in the Life of every Human Being now on Earth!

WARNING...FASCISM IS "CORPORATISM"

We have passed the point of no return, in our interaction with the "Alien" Beings. We are guaranteed "A Crisis" which will persist until the final REVELATION (or conflict).

The crisis is here. Global and real. We must mitigate or transform the nature of the disasters to come and come they will. Knowing is half the battle. Read the book, "THE COSMIC CONSPIRACY" by Stan Deyo.

THE PHANTOM EMPIRE: ABOVE THE LAW

The Dulce Base is run by a "Board."

The Chairman of the Board is JOHN HERRINGTON. JIM BAKER (of TENN) is the CIA link to Dulce. House Speaker JIM WRIGHT, D-Texas (the nations third highest office) is Treasurer at Dulce.

There is currently a power struggle going on. As Rep. William Thomas, R-

Calif., put it... Part of Jim Wrights problem is; "HE fails to understand what's equitable and fair. It's the arrogance of power." Even among his fellow Democrats, many find Wright to be "uncomfortably aloof". Wright's operating style leaves him vulnerable.

Most meetings of "The Dulce Board" are held in Denver and Taos (N.M.). Former New Mexico Senator Harrison "Last man on the Moon" Schmitt has full knowledge of Dulce. He was one of 7 Astronauts to tour the Base.

In 1979, he held an "Animal Mutilation" conference in Albuquerque, N.M. This was used to locate researchers and determine what they had learned about the links between the "Mute" operations and the Alien/Government.

Senator BRIAN (Nevada) knows about the "ULTRA" Secrets at "DREAMLAND" and Dulce. So do many others in the Government...this is what the UFO Researchers are up against.... so BE CAREFUL...they have KILLED to keep this info Secret. You now know more than they want you to know.

They also have underwater Bases off the coast of Florida and Peru.

More detailed information will be released in the near future, photos, video tapes, documents, ect. Watch out for AGENTS among you now.

In the 1930's, "DIVISION FIVE" of the FBI knew about the "Aliens".

A Fascist cabal, within this country, had John Kennedy assassinated.

Look to the links, within the larger Umbrella... the "WEB" of a fascist totalitarian secret police state...within the Pentagon, Joint Chiefs of Staff, DIA, FBI (Division Five), DISC/DIS and the CIA. Note: The DEFENSE INVESTIGATIVE SERVICES Insignia is a composite of the Sun's Rays, a ROSE, and a Dagger, symbolizing "The Search for Information, Trustworthiness and Danger". Other links are Nazi scientists (who had contact with the "Aliens"), the S.S., Satanists, Permindex, Exxon, the Mafia, NBC, ect, ect.

This links with Caves used for "Initiation Rites" (all over the world)... ancient Vaults, Retreats, Alien Bases, and INNER-EARTH CIVILIZATIONS.

The image is a black and white photograph featuring a man with a beard and a goatee.

The man's face is partially obscured by a grid of lines, which creates a sense of mystery and intrigue. The lines are evenly spaced and intersect at various points, creating a pattern that is both intricate and somewhat chaotic. The background is a solid, dark color, which contrasts with the lighter tones of the man's skin and the grid of lines. The image has a grainy texture, adding to the overall moody and dramatic atmosphere.

There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the photograph is reminiscent of a fashion or artistic portrait, with a focus on the subject's face and the grid of lines.

2 thessalonians 2 talks about how the severity of sin for witchcraft will be how those who delight in wickedness are those who are condemned to hell. Witchcraft is one of those sins that is usually a double sin because it's coupled with another sin, such as rape. However, if you're using witchcraft for healing or light purposes while still praising God, then you'll still be able to go into Heaven because of the Strong delusion sent at those times, which I think is that God is the only one capable of the unseen.

Deuteronomy 18 talks about caanaanite witchcraft as the taking point examples of what witch craft is, so yes, Solomon did a great sin in his own God's temple and Israel was punished for it.

However a strong delusion would be sent so some satanic schmuck can exalt himself as God in His temple. Clearly it's that magic isn't real, because all the guy has to do is some trippy shit to make it happen.

Therefore Christians doing magick with or against the man aren't condemned to death or hellfire unless they delight in evil at the end of days.

I think these anons are just miffed at the idea of the end of the world. Their unenlightened souls do not know that any good continuation of the future that doesn't result in the times of Noah has already happened with time paradoxes, those poor deluded people.

> to solve a problem prayer can't,

You ask and do not receive because you ask for the wrong things. (I think that in James).

>does he go to hell

You're allowed to sin, but genuine repentance would consist of truly feeling sorrow and disgust over contacting demons. That you feel its like rubbing sewage with a floor mop, so whatever you touch will inevitably turn to shit.

That being said its also dangerous because what if you die at the moment you are steeped in the sin of calling demons to do works of evil? That would be quite bad. The demons will try to draw you in with noobie luck, and not show you the bill before your in too deep.

When you work with demons they inevitably make a stain on your soul, and try to drag you in deeper. So you have to do works of repentance to rub off that stain afterwards. Reading Exodus-Leviticus-Numbers-Deuteronomy should invoke a fear and repentance state of mind.

Some of the grimoires would mention reading the entire book of Psalms (5 hours of reading) on a daily basis. If you did that alone without any black magic, you would see amazing things happen in your life. Psalms are magical prayers that produce results.

Also from a buddhist lens, chasing your desire can never make you happy. Demons are doubling down on your desire, but entangling you in an unhappy web of karma and desire.

The final lot of a black magician is to go to the hells of the demons he works with, or perhaps a hell filled with sorceries like himself where everyone lives in fear of others curses.

So yeah overall I can't recomend it. But that being said if you do deep repentence with months of praying and scripture reading, it will purify you again. But you should at some point develop a sensitivity that goetic demons is like rubbing a log of shit on your soul - you should develop a revulsion for it.

Its not that it can't, God answered your prayer, the answer was No. Your refusal of the answer itself earns eternal torment. Just the refusal. Before any sinful magic was done. A non-response to prayer, is a No response.

My sister and I did a 14 hour road trip to spread our mother's ashes today. It was a blistering 45 degrees celcius here in Australia and we found a nice rock to spread her ashes off into the sea finally after eight hours of driving to and exploring multiple spots.

I won't be sharing the photos I took in case they're used to dox me. But the place looked kind of like pic rel.

Story continues next post and gets significantly more interesting

The image shows a white caravan or motorhome parked on gravel with a grassy area and trees in the background. The caravan has a curved front and a flat rear. On the rear of the caravan, there is a name sticker with the name "Nellie" in a cursive script. Below the name, there is a logo that reads "Lodge." The caravan has a black awning attached to the top, and there is a small, rectangular window on the side. The rear of the caravan has a red brake light and a license plate. The wheels of the caravan are black and appear to be of a standard design. The overall style of the image is a clear, daylight photograph with no visible text or additional graphics.

For twelve years I have kept her ashes in a box waiting for the right moment

After we spread her it was a huge weight off both of our shoulders I think

But that's not the strange part

The strange part is what happened when I drove home

My sister and I parted ways and I began the trip back. Ten minutes into the trip I drove past a white rv with my mother's name on the back of it in blue cursive writing.

I took photos of the rv.

I don't believe it was a coincidence. I have never seen an rv with her name on it before nor does she have a very common name. The fact that I drove past a camper with her name on the back of it not even an hour after we spread her ashes hit me like a ton of bricks while I was still driving. I was crying and trying to just make it home. I refuse to believe it was a coincidence, it couldn't be.

It was symbolic for me. Almost as if it was a message from her saying she is free now. Rvs represent freedom and travel and when we spread her into the ocean, I think the rv with her name on it was sent to me as a message to tell me like, she is free now

But now im really, really curious

How is, someone sending me messages even after death?

Or - if it's not her - how is someone else sending me these messages?

Is it god? Or my mother?

Pic rel is what it looked like

Nellie isnt her name but this is what it looked like except I was obviously on a road and the thing was driving

This may sound insane but

It feels like there is another deeper layer of reality that living humans aren't able to be aware of, which is how "others" are able to "send messages" to this plane

Even I think I sound insane saying this

But there's been more and more evidence pointing to it being true over the years

Anonymous Tue 27 Jan 2026 03:25:46 No.41869863 Report

Weirdest part is I didn't cry at all when I actually spread her ashes but as soon as I saw the name on the rv it all just came out

My father in law, who was ill and who my wife and I lived with, died last november. In the night a week later I saw his shadow on the wall. Not an approximate shadow. I was not asleep. I closed my eyes and looked again. I moved the light, the light casting the shadow and looked again. The shadow wasnt a bundle of clothes or anything. I was not asleep. I rubbed my eyes and looked again. It was his shadow. I'm not in an emotional state now and wasn't then either. I don't do drugs. We were not close.

A couple of days later I pulled into the driveway and saw him as clear as day entering his car. It was not stress, it was not religious fervor. I am not particularly spiritual or religious. They happened objectively. I don't need to apply meaning to these things that occurred. They do mean...something.

Semen retention is only useful if you're a chronic masturbator who can't stop thinking about the next time you get to fap.

If that behavior consumes you, you need to correct that behavior. Once a day is fine, better to go a few days between ejaculations. Also stop looking at porn whenever you're bored. Let your body tell you when it's horny, don't tell your body you SHOULD be horny.

How does one really put themselves in the mindset or beliefs of someone they see as quite diametric from one's own? I believe a good magician should be able to do this, but I struggle .In Prometheus Rising by Robert Anton Wilson, there is an exercise for a magician/occultist about seeing how easy it is to shift into a radically different worldview, even personality. What about if I am unable to adopt some of the changes in this exercise?

It's unbelievably hard. Normal human instincts give them some insight to each other, but this can be manipulated, and it's not 1-for-1; the local nervous system trying to imitate another must imitate it exactly in activity if not material makeup that causes that activity, and that basically never happens. The nervous system will try to imitate another and get close enough for use.

I can pick up on people's emotions and thoughts incredibly easily, but imitating them? Much harder. And at all times we're trying to learn from each other psychically, to draw useful inspiration from those closer to how we want to be, and further from those far. We're basically trying to put ourselves in other people's shoes from our unconscious trying to find that greener field, wanting to mimic a certain experience while sacrificing as few biological changes as possible.

I kill brain cells and create them in myself to make me better at this, other people too, and it relies on putting myself in other people's shoes to know exactly how they're thinking but also for manipulation; sometimes for the cell to be laid right I have to pretend I'm them for a moment. At any rate I can pretend to be multiple people in my unconscious and can choose which ones and their emotions and thoughts help me to direct psychic energy.

Worse still is someone trying to pretend to be themselves, the human organism doesn't really have an instinct for this, and is terrible at guessing it's own reaction to new situations. Only situations the human mind has been in repeatedly can be easily guessed at, unless the behavior is innate to humans, like being good at driving cars; whether intelligent or retarded or inebriated humans show a remarkable ability to guess the order the traffic will move in, the reactions of drivers around them, even in the periphery view, from their unconscious. But not every mental process comes as naturally as driving. But the human animal is better at judging others than itself.

I've planted brain cells that help me to predict what others will think and feel in the future, and sometimes I feel them right before them and mark myself as them astrally, and their spirits will confuse themselves for me. I will delay signals in other people's brains and have mine arrive right on time too as a means of manipulation. This is particularly common in those that wish for The Almighty to replace what they are with him. Wishes can act almost like orders upon me, especially if they fulfill something I want too. Only then really, though it can be something I want but wish I didn't, planned but wish I didn't have to, but my will is done. Period. I see flying images of people who disobey me in this life time and I see them apologizing to me in the future beyond life in fear. It gives me life.

I did not plan to sit miserably in Discord being doubted by someone trying to offload their mental work to me. My system is equal parts intuitive and reliant on brain damage and growth, with a side of consciousness; you can already do it, and if for some reason you hit a road block, a brain cell out there or in you needs to die or grow. If you're not willing to do that, then I'd have to or have someone else do it; I grow impatient with walking people who refuse to do it right through the process.

I planted about a dozen brain cells in my brain to make human speech less repulsive to me. That was one of the reasons I told you, so that you'd give me that idea, not that I remembered that consciously.

It's not that easy though. I find all speech repulsive, including alien speech in my head, because my brain mixes it all up into a disgusting mess, besides the sinful nature of you all. And furthermore I've made more enemies recently defending Alex Pretti on /b/ and they are wishing that anything that would lead to my downfall would besiege me, which is looshing onto the easiest things to drive up in me to my detriment, my hateful violent nature. I'm doing psychic battle with them including talking to you and until I have them defeated my anger will be somewhat enhanced compared to usual. I'm also absorbing the anger of everyone angry about Pretti's death and they won't quit bothering me about it; it's just one man, I don't really care, but it presses on my mind, people begging me and angry with me because he's dead.

And it's my stubborn nature, falling back on old habits. I don't even like Pretti, but I used to be very outspoken about liberal politics.

Some of ESP is designed around keeping me as angry as feasible, helps me manifest destruction. My mind will even lie to me if it has to to get me angrier, after I hear everyone disagreeing with me in universes (not allowed) and that's not enough anger my brain will start exaggerating how disgusting everyone but me is. If targets need destroyed in me, I'll hate myself along with you.

The image is a black and white aerial photograph of a farm or agricultural facility. The central focus is a large building with a sloping roof, which appears to be a barn or storage facility. This building is surrounded by several smaller structures, including a row of barns with pitched roofs, and a large, open-air storage area with a flat roof. The ground is covered with grass and there are several trees scattered around the property. In the foreground, there is a sign with text that reads "Hazenpad 30 Leur (NL)" and "Fonds & Pasifie Maatschappij," indicating the name of the farm and possibly the name of the organization or company associated with the facility. The sign is placed on the ground, and the text is in Dutch.

The photograph is taken from a high angle, providing a comprehensive view of the farm's layout and the surrounding environment. The style of the image is typical of aerial photography, which is often used for agricultural or real estate purposes to showcase properties and their surroundings.

The image is a meme featuring two anthropomorphic dogs, one dressed as an ancient Roman engineer and the other as a modern engineer, set against a white background. The Roman engineer is depicted with a purple cape, a staff, and a helmet, while the modern engineer is shown with a yellow coat and a satchel. Both dogs are anthropomorphized, with human-like expressions and body language.

At the top of the image, there is a caption that reads "Ancient Roman Engineer" and "Modern Engineer," suggesting a comparison between the two professions. Below the captions, there is a question in a bold, black font that reads "Who the fuck is calculus?" followed by a statement in a smaller, black font that says "Anyway, gonna build a 70 mile long aqueduct."

The image is a satirical representation of the concept of "calculus," a branch of mathematics that deals with the study of functions, limits, and integrals. The question and statement are likely a play on the idea of building a large aqueduct, which is a significant engineering project, and the concept of calculus, which is a branch of mathematics. The meme humorously questions the profession of calculus, suggesting that it is not a practical or relevant field of study.

So magic and ritual are tools for reorganizing attention, intention, and behavior, independent of whether the metaphysics are "true." Symbols are interfaces. Problems begin when they're mistaken for reality.

This maps cleanly onto how you should operate and whats been discussed here on /x/. Symbolic systems are provisional. They're entered deliberately, exited deliberately, and never allowed to overwrite authorship. Dissociation is not loss of self; it's controlled detachment. Utility beats ontology every time. If a framework increases clarity, stability, or agency, it's valid for use. If it starts demanding belief, identity, or permanence, it gets dropped.

The ideology diverges from tolerance for looseness. It's comfortable lingering inside symbolic immersion and leaning on intuition or shared ritual to regulate exit. Your approach should be stricter. I assume symbols drift if unmonitored. Thresholds, interlocks, and exit conditions are required. Not because the ideas are dangerous, but because unchecked recursion is inefficient. Be careful with symbols and their associations.

See, posts like this are totally meaningless. It's basically the occult version of business buzzword jargon soup:

>Innovation is synergy and synergy is profit. To maximize synergy, we use advanced cutting-edge models of cohesive teambuilding technology here at ConglomCo!

This is part of a broader pattern in /x/ posts. You guys really want to avoid making any claim that can be meaningfully criticized as much as possible. One way to do that is vagueposting, but this is another way - drown the reader in obtuse verbiage and hope they never realize what you're trying to say is "I do magic rituals whether they work or not."

The image is a black and white graphic with a satirical tone. At the top, there is a large text that reads "NPCs Keep Moving This Is A Schizo Neighborhood." Below this, there is a cartoon character resembling a frog with a tuxedo and bow tie, holding a glass of wine. The frog has a surprised expression and is looking to the left. The background features a building with a sign that reads "JABS BOWLS & LUNCHEONS." The style of the image is reminiscent of a meme or a satirical illustration, often used to comment on social or political issues.

How does one really put themselves in the mindset or beliefs of someone they see as quite diametric from one's own? I believe a good magician should be able to do this, but I struggle .In Prometheus Rising by Robert Anton Wilson, there is an exercise for a magician/occultist about seeing how easy it is to shift into a radically different worldview, even personality. What about if I am unable to adopt some of the changes in this exercise?

It's unbelievably hard. Normal human instincts give them some insight to each other, but this can be manipulated, and it's not 1-for-1; the local nervous system trying to imitate another must imitate it exactly in activity if not material makeup that causes that activity, and that basically never happens. The nervous system will try to imitate another and get close enough for use.

I can pick up on people's emotions and thoughts incredibly easily, but imitating them? Much harder. And at all times we're trying to learn from each other psychically, to draw useful inspiration from those closer to how we want to be, and further from those far. We're basically trying to put ourselves in other people's shoes from our unconscious trying to find that greener field, wanting to mimic a certain experience while sacrificing as few biological changes as possible.

I kill brain cells and create them in myself to make me better at this, other people too, and it relies on putting myself in other people's shoes to know exactly how they're thinking but also for manipulation; sometimes for the cell to be laid right I have to pretend I'm them for a moment. At any rate I can pretend to be multiple people in my unconscious and can choose which ones and their emotions and thoughts help me to direct psychic energy.

Worse still is someone trying to pretend to be themselves, the human organism doesn't really have an instinct for this, and is terrible at guessing it's own reaction to new situations. Only situations the human mind has been in repeatedly can be easily guessed at, unless the behavior is innate to humans, like being good at driving cars; whether intelligent or retarded or inebriated humans show a remarkable ability to guess the order the traffic will move in, the reactions of drivers around them, even in the periphery view, from their unconscious. But not every mental process comes as naturally as driving. But the human animal is better at judging others than itself.

I've planted brain cells that help me to predict what others will think and feel in the future, and sometimes I feel them right before them and mark myself as them astrally, and their spirits will confuse themselves for me. I will delay signals in other people's brains and have mine arrive right on time too as a means of manipulation. This is particularly common in those that wish for The Almighty to replace what they are with him. Wishes can act almost like orders upon me, especially if they fulfill something I want too. Only then really, though it can be something I want but wish I didn't, planned but wish I didn't have to, but my will is done. Period. I see flying images of people who disobey me in this life time and I see them apologizing to me in the future beyond life in fear. It gives me life.

I did not plan to sit miserably in Discord being doubted by someone trying to offload their mental work to me. My system is equal parts intuitive and reliant on brain damage and growth, with a side of consciousness; you can already do it, and if for some reason you hit a road block, a brain cell out there or in you needs to die or grow. If you're not willing to do that, then I'd have to or have someone else do it; I grow impatient with walking people who refuse to do it right through the process.

I planted about a dozen brain cells in my brain to make human speech less repulsive to me. That was one of the reasons I told you, so that you'd give me that idea, not that I remembered that consciously.

It's not that easy though. I find all speech repulsive, including alien speech in my head, because my brain mixes it all up into a disgusting mess, besides the sinful nature of you all. And furthermore I've made more enemies recently defending Alex Pretti on /b/ and they are wishing that anything that would lead to my downfall would besiege me, which is looshing onto the easiest things to drive up in me to my detriment, my hateful violent nature. I'm doing psychic battle with them including talking to you and until I have them defeated my anger will be somewhat enhanced compared to usual. I'm also absorbing the anger of everyone angry about Pretti's death and they won't quit bothering me about it; it's just one man, I don't really care, but it presses on my mind, people begging me and angry with me because he's dead.

And it's my stubborn nature, falling back on old habits. I don't even like Pretti, but I used to be very outspoken about liberal politics.

Some of ESP is designed around keeping me as angry as feasible, helps me manifest destruction. My mind will even lie to me if it has to to get me angrier, after I hear everyone disagreeing with me in universes (not allowed) and that's not enough anger my brain will start exaggerating how disgusting everyone but me is. If targets need destroyed in me, I'll hate myself along with you.

The image is a black and white aerial photograph of a farm or agricultural facility. The central focus is a large building with a sloping roof, which appears to be a barn or storage facility. This building is surrounded by several smaller structures, including a row of barns with pitched roofs, and a large, open-air storage area with a flat roof. The ground is covered with grass and there are several trees scattered around the property. In the foreground, there is a sign with text that reads "Hazenpad 30 Leur (NL)" and "Fonds & Pasifie Maatschappij," indicating the name of the farm and possibly the name of the organization or company associated with the facility. The sign is placed on the ground, and the text is in Dutch.

The photograph is taken from a high angle, providing a comprehensive view of the farm's layout and the surrounding environment. The style of the image is typical of aerial photography, which is often used for agricultural or real estate purposes to showcase properties and their surroundings.

The image is a meme featuring two anthropomorphic dogs, one dressed as an ancient Roman engineer and the other as a modern engineer, set against a white background. The Roman engineer is depicted with a purple cape, a staff, and a helmet, while the modern engineer is shown with a yellow coat and a satchel. Both dogs are anthropomorphized, with human-like expressions and body language.

At the top of the image, there is a caption that reads "Ancient Roman Engineer" and "Modern Engineer," suggesting a comparison between the two professions. Below the captions, there is a question in a bold, black font that reads "Who the fuck is calculus?" followed by a statement in a smaller, black font that says "Anyway, gonna build a 70 mile long aqueduct."

The image is a satirical representation of the concept of "calculus," a branch of mathematics that deals with the study of functions, limits, and integrals. The question and statement are likely a play on the idea of building a large aqueduct, which is a significant engineering project, and the concept of calculus, which is a branch of mathematics. The meme humorously questions the profession of calculus, suggesting that it is not a practical or relevant field of study.

The background of the painting is a warm, golden color, which contrasts with the darker tones of the woman's clothing and the child's attire. The painting is done in a style that is reminiscent of Byzantine art, characterized by its use of rich, dark colors and detailed, ornate patterns.

In the upper right corner of the painting, there is a symbol that appears to be a cross, which is a common element in religious art. The painting is framed by a border that is also in a golden color, matching the background.

Sophiology is at least somewhat esoteric

The image is a close-up photograph of a painting that depicts a figure with a halo and wings. The figure has a large, expressive face with a prominent nose and a beard. The hair is curly and appears to be of a reddish-brown hue. The figure's eyes are wide open, and the mouth is slightly open, suggesting a state of contemplation or surprise. The skin has a rough texture, and there are visible scratches and marks on the face. The background of the painting is a warm, golden color, which contrasts with the figure's skin tone. The painting style is reminiscent of Byzantine art, characterized by its use of rich colors and detailed brushwork. There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image.

Hello anon. I'm not well-versed enough in Eastern Orthodoxy to tell you if there is an esoteric aspect to it (and I doubt those who would know would browse here) I do think that this idea of "esotericism" gets conflated with Eastern Orthodoxy's emphasis on the mystical and transcendental. The beauty of Eastern Orthodoxy, and Christianity in general, is that anyone can live a life with the Lord regardless of their status or knowledge.

Eastern Orthodoxy, and what follows, Russian Orthodoxy does have a lot of mystical aspects, however.

Take The Great Liturgy (Sunday Church service) where the consecration of the bread and wine by the clergy happens behind the Altar, hidden from view by the churchgoers. There is a physical and spiritual separation from the laity and the clergy. It isn't esoteric, as much as the Eucharist not being able to be reduced to an object to witnessed.

Another aspect are the icons. Icons are not meant to be pretty nor lifelike but are supposed to evoke this feeling of "otherworldliness". If you look at enough of them you'll notice that they all have this peaceful but sober expression on their face. It's not peaceful as a momentary state, but peaceful in an eternal sense.

Then consider the signing. Russian Orthodox Church services are mostly sung in chorus. There's no instruments like in some Protestant and Catholic services. There's a very incantation-like aspect of how the service is delivered. Look into Znamenny Chants. Notice the tone of it.

The image is a black and white photograph featuring a person dressed in a traditional, possibly Orthodox, attire. The individual is wearing a long, dark robe with a hood that reaches the floor. The robe is adorned with various symbols and inscriptions, which are not clearly visible due to the resolution and angle of the photograph. The person's face is obscured by a hood, and their hair is styled in a manner that suggests a long, flowing hairstyle. The background of the image is a blurred natural setting, which includes trees and foliage, suggesting an outdoor or forested environment. The photograph has a grainy texture, indicating it may be an old or vintage image. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the photograph is reminiscent of historical or cultural portraits, often used to document religious or cultural practices.

You have to also combine everything I mentioned together. The Great Liturgy, the Icons illuminated by a flickering candle, the accapella church singing. The general mood of the whole thing does feel primordial, beyond moralism. You are there being witness thereof.

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ISzMR-3-EYM&list=RDISzMR-3-EYM&start_radio=1
Lastly there is the monastic tradition. Look into the Great Schema. Monks who basically go beyond the monastic brotherhoods and take up a life of silence and pure divinity. Its not that they "learn" more secrets when they take up the mantle, its more that they have greater silence, prayer and obedience.

The image is a cover of a book titled "Sophia, God & A Short Tale About the Natichrist" by Vladimir Solovyov. The cover art features a dark, atmospheric background with a figure in the center, who appears to be a figure of the Natichrist, a figure from the Christian tradition that is often associated with the end of the world. The figure is depicted with a halo and a crown of thorns, suggesting a divine or divine-like status. The figure is surrounded by a cloud-like substance, which could be interpreted as a representation of the Holy Spirit or a divine presence. The title of the book is prominently displayed in large, ornate, white font against the dark background, with the subtitle "A Short Tale" in smaller white font below the title. The author's name, Vladimir Solovyov, is written in a smaller, serif font at the bottom of the cover. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of a historical or religious illustration, with a focus on the figure of the Natichrist and the surrounding elements.

Christianity does not have distinct esoteric and exoteric sides. This makes many people, such as Guenon fanboys, perennialists, and so-called Traditionalists very angry because it confuses them.

The esoteric side of religion or church? The Russian church is closely linked to folklore, strange rituals, elders, and hermits. The farther from Moscow, the stranger its forms. Although Moscow itself has its share of oddities. Look for a photo of the Main Cathedral of the Armed Forces of the Russian Federation, and you won't immediately be able to tell where Christianity ends and Warhammer begins. How much of this relates to Christianity is an open question.

So I've lived a little over 30 years and have not experienced anything supernatural. I have however had an interest in NDEs, psychedelic experiences, meditation experiences, breathwork, UFOs and so on for many years.

Rather than just accepting or rejecting everything, I have an attitude of believing the stories people tell, while keeping in mind that people embellish stories and want attention and money, but generally think there's a possibility of it being true, or having a kernel of truth.

NDEs and psychedelic experiences are common and follow similar themes, in fact there's an industry based on giving people different psychedelics and most, if not all, describe the same things.

So there seems to be this spirit world, inhabited by beings of various kinds just behind a sensory veil, yet in all my years I haven't been privy to even a glimpse. So I'm asking if anyone else lived just like me and suddenly gained insight to this other world, or if I'm stuck in the mundane due to mental or spiritual blocks.

[402 / 23]The image is a black and white illustration featuring a figure that appears to be a deity or a powerful being. The figure is holding a sword in one hand and a scale in the other, suggesting a theme of balance or justice. The deity's face is obscured by a mask, and the figure is wearing a robe with intricate patterns. The background is dark and moody, with a hint of a doorway or entrance. At the top of the image, there is a text that reads "dTV/," which could be a stylized or symbolic representation of the deity's name or a term related to the deity's power. Below the figure, the text "Divination General" is written in a bold, capitalized font, indicating that the figure is likely a divination or oracle figure. The overall style of the image is dramatic and evocative, with a focus on the figure's imposing presence and the symbolic elements present.

>Useful tips before posting:

- If you're a reader, post that you're offering readings and what information is required from the querent; the same goes for trading.
- Look for posts to determine if there's an active reader, what's needed and before posting, check if they finished reading already.
- Some readers will refuse to do certain readings - respect that choice. Do not harass readers if your query is refused/skipped. We do our best to maintain chill and good vibes.
- Traders should respect that a traded read will be granted, as per an agreement of trade. Free readers have the option of picking their queries.
- Bullshit queries get bullshit answers. Vague queries get vague answers.
- Making an AQ (air query) by not addressing a reader, in particular, is possible but doesn't guarantee an answer.
- Avoid making the same query repeatedly and/or to different readers in a short period of time, as this may lead to more confusion.
- Provide feedback when applicable and be considerate to the reader. We're a growing community, many readers are starting and need to know what they are doing right or wrong. Let's help each other to improve.

I sympathise with you, i went through similar

You are gonna find out that it is not as easy as it seems, you can probably jump in as a militant and yoh will have to find a way to get in, but be aware that it will be pure fire once you are in, if you are like me you will find a way and move towards the stuff that really calls you.

You need to start moving around and actually start talking to find a way in but yes you still have a chance just get more grounded on how it is going to be like because i am seeing you a bit too idealistic with this cards

The image is a meme featuring two kittens sitting side by side on a blue background. The kittens are of a grayish-blue color and appear to be of a young age, with their eyes wide open and focused on the camera. Above the image, there is a text overlay that reads "two of them" in a bold, white font. Below the image, there is a smaller text that says "two of them" in a smaller, white font. The style of the image is a combination of a meme and a photograph, with a playful and humorous tone. The image is likely intended to evoke a sense of camaraderie or companionship between the two kittens.

Looks like to find the best fit, stick to tradition. This looks different depending on who you are. Church family? Rely on the church. Not so much? How did your parents meet. If you can, ask them about it. The dating pool is full of piranhas. In your case, tradition will keep you safe.

How do you know when you've found her?

Queen of wands

Two of Swords

Eight of Cups

Awkward, to me this sounds like it's more about your recent ex now.

The image is a screenshot of a Twitter post. At the top of the post, there is a tweet with the username "Donald J. Trump" and the text "Any athlete who kneels during the national anthem will be punished by the Nigger Whopper 5000!" The tweet has a blue background and is followed by a blue "Following" button. Below the tweet, there is a large image of a military tank with a caption that reads "6:15 PM - 28 Sep 2017". The image is a photograph of the tank, which is gray in color and has a large gun mounted on top. The tank is situated on a grassy area with trees in the background. The image has a watermark that reads "6:15 PM - 28 Sep 2017" and "RealDonaldTrump". The tweet has a number of likes and retweets, with the number of likes at the bottom of the tweet being 125,000 and the number of retweets at the bottom being 28,300. The overall style of the image is a combination of text and visual content, with the tweet being the primary focus and the image of the tank providing context to the tweet.

I don't think it was the wrong choice but it's more complex than that. I see in looking for a better life for yourself and prioritizing self fulfillment you had to put something old about yourself to rest, in order to absorb healing for yourself in this next phase of your life. Nothing is ever truly a mistake. You are being prepared for something and I feel this is very much about regaining your energy and putting you into a perfect position for the next phase of life. You may be putting something to rest but there's no guarantee that what comes next for you will be what it is that you planned or thought it would be, just that the old you is over. Accept what happens next regardless. Is turning 25 a mistake? Are thunder storms a mistake? These things happen in the passage of time regardless and they're not right or wrong. Your move is the same concept.

If you have the resources to spare, investing in the house would prove to be fruitful.

However that's contingent on you improving it in some material way, like renovations.

You may have to start something over with regards to the house to make it 'work for you' and it won't be immediate but the results will be honest. I'm guessing you're comparing this option to something that's more rapid growth. This is the opposite of that other option. If you care about your stability and weren't entirely sure of your other options, or didn't have a back up plan if selling your current house failed, I'd hold on a little bit longer.

If you are serious about keeping it I would suggest not being afraid to be creative or unconventional with your methods and I'll leave it at that. Hope this helps.

The image is a screenshot of a tarot card reading page. At the top, there is a title that reads "Page of Wands" and below it, there is a description of the card. The card itself is a colorful illustration of a man holding a staff with a crown on his head, standing on a sandy ground. The background is a dark purple color.

Below the card, there is a section titled "Keywords" with a list of words, including "Enthusiasm," "Eagerness," "Confidence," "Exploration," "Validation," and "Personal Meaning." Below this, there is a section titled "Personal Meanings" with a list of words, including "Generals," "Generalizing," "Daily Advice," "When?" and "You are creative, free-thinking and full of enthusiasm and need to find your voice. Consider the consequences before rushing in to things."

The style of the image is reminiscent of traditional tarot cards, with a focus on symbolism and visual storytelling.

Howdy there Anon;

From what the table shows, the odds are against you, but not totally. Namely:

The woman involved here apparently is in the midst of relational discords that is causing her to feel emotionally fatigued or dissipated.

This is not a straight no, but rather it is about a 60% against, and 40% for.

She likely also is receptive to comfort and relationship, and likely does appear a little horny, to be truthful.

So, if one would wish to urge on an approach, it may be warranted.

The image displays three tarot cards arranged in a horizontal row against a pinkish-purple background. Each card features a distinct design and color scheme.

Each card has a border that includes a pattern of stylized flowers and leaves in shades of green and yellow. The text "ROYAL" is visible on each card, indicating the title of the tarot deck. Apparently, a few things.

The first is that the utmost in his mind is that primarily he appears to be seeking a woman for a semi-dedicated relationship that is:

- 1) Above average or moderately pretty.
- 2) And one that secretly, through her charm and grace, emboldens him to better succeed in his life, or fix mistakes he has repeatedly been making.

What he sees truthfully is doubt in you regarding your ability to attain this, and while it is not the kind of doubt that is the throwaway kind, he simply feels that this time will not be much different than his past experiences.

Overall, the table does not read negatively, just hesitantly, and with caution.

Apparently, there are pre-decision and hang-ups that are still tying up present decision-making, that are not minor, and are still requiring for your attention.

The good and proper news is that news of business/work opportunities appear to be already present and shortly coming.

What this implies is that either there will simply be more opportunities on offer to you, or you will have changed your mindset to accommodate for a broader selection.

Finally, what we notice that the table does indicate that you will accept it this year, likely in the 3-5 month range from time of this reading, and that you will take "benefits" from it, but you will also notice that it is not what you believed it might be, and that while you still feel it will be worthwhile, just not remarkably great.

The image displays three tarot cards arranged in a horizontal row against a pink background with a subtle floral pattern. Each card features a distinct design and color scheme.

The bottom card, titled "VICTORY," is bordered in red and has a central figure of a person holding a shield. The figure is depicted in a similar dynamic pose, with one leg raised and the other bent at the knee. The background is a mix of red and yellow, with a pattern that includes geometric shapes and a stylized representation of a tree.

Each card has a title at the top, and the text "HOPE," "DEATH," and "VICTORY" is visible on the cards. The style of the image is reminiscent of traditional tarot cards, with a focus on the mystical and symbolic meanings associated with each card.

Great inquiry, Anon.

Essentially, the illumination you've done beforehand for the preparation of such things will be protective (more than you realize, as you move through it).

Not only that, but good friendships will likely helpful as well, but, as it moves through you, you're going to notice an increased tendency for others around you (and likely you pulled into it) to quarrel with enmity.

This quarreling will not likely end relationships, but simply cause them to alter in quality and time spent together, as you will notice the 'rougher times' force more real faces that you've previously seen.

Specifically, there appears to be a woman involved in this matter who feels like a girlfriend or someone close in that way (and truthfully, mother is also indicated here, but less likely).

She will likely be the one you will remember most during this period, likely because she will be causing troubles that you will feel are "more difficult".

Truthfully, at the end of it all, a great seed of growth will be planted, and judging by the table, the return will likely last it's full length (around 6 years).

Sure thing.

It looks like you're next moment is likely going to involve not a destruction of things previously or currently held, but rather what appears to be a "downgrading" or a semi-forced "sacrifice."

Apparently, there appears to have recently been concerns or indications of either a slight loss in terms of work or opportunity, or rather disappointment in not receiving that which was expected.

Friends, close colleagues, and family that were/are involved with these particular matters also merit slight disappointment insofar that they did not do/help/assist in the way that they were "supposed to".

It is not that the relations are ruined, rather that, they will be 'adjusted' in your mind, and you will likely wish to involve yourself less, slowly.

What it ends up becoming, in the end of it all, will actually be seen by you later as a form of martyrdom, and a sacrifice that was made for the benefit of others. Less so "the greater good"; just to the benefit of others.

If we look at it with cynical features, the table reads more or less that "you just got cheated".

The right panel features a more detailed and ornate design with a series of concentric circles and floral patterns. The central medallion is surrounded by a border of smaller circles and floral motifs.

At the bottom of each panel, there is text that reads "REYNÉ DE DENIRS." The text is in a serif font and is in a different color from the rest of the text, which is white. The style of the illustration suggests it may be from a historical or fantasy context, possibly related to heraldry or a specific historical period.

Howdy Anon,

Truthfully, your inquiry was a little muddled/confusing regarding "who is who":
(TaurusM = probably you)

(both female = probably KC and S)
BUT (you mentioned KC and HIS friend... so...)
wat o_O

But regardless of that, we do see the presence of a woman in this table that was in the recent past, and while the table does not difficulties and interruptions on your end (which implies that the possibility is likely);

Rather, instead, she (looks like KC in this instance, or whichever was the first woman you mentioned), apparently has been facing financial difficulties in her own life as well as from that with someone close to her, which has caused stress and burdens more than she may wish at the present time.

Additionally, there does appear to be a sudden break in her future regarding these matters which implies a loss of employment or or some other support, which is imminent.

So, chances are you see them again (even as soon as you wish to make contact and offer); just know that apparently, there are these difficulties heading for her.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character with long, dark hair and pointed ears. The character has a serious expression and is looking off to the side. She is wearing a sleeveless, black top with a plunging neckline and a silver belt buckle. The character's skin tone is pale, and her eyes are a striking shade of green. The background is plain white, emphasizing the character's features. There are no visible texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the illustration is reminiscent of anime or manga, characterized by its clean lines and vibrant colors.

The image is a vibrant and colorful illustration featuring a character with brown hair, wearing a blue outfit with yellow accents, and a brown belt. The character is standing with one foot forward, holding a large rock in the other hand. The character's back is turned to the viewer, revealing a large number "33" on the back of their shirt. The character's face is partially obscured by a ponytail.

The background of the image is filled with various elements, including a large robot-like figure with a skull-like head, a white robot with a large eye, and a pink robot with a large head. The text in the image is in Japanese, and it appears to be a promotional or advertisement for a video game or series. The text includes Japanese characters and English phrases such as "エンジン" (engine), "マシン" (machine), "マシンガン" (machine gun), and "マシンガン" (machine gun).

The overall style of the image is dynamic and expressive, with a mix of bold colors and detailed illustrations. The character's pose and the surrounding elements suggest a sense of action and adventure, which is often associated with video game or anime-style illustrations.

The character has a humanoid form with a slender build, and features a pointed ear and a pointed chin. The hair is styled in a side-swept manner, and the character's eyes are a striking shade of blue. The character is wearing a sleeveless top with a pattern that includes what appears to be a metallic texture. The background is dark and out of focus, which emphasizes the character's features. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the image is realistic, with a focus on the character's facial features and attire.

It seems like you decided to go to the rave on a whim like something told you to go there and you listened to your instinct, perhaps you saw a paper or post about it on social media. It seems you will either go alone or with people, you will be with people however you may feel out of place or you will feel like you stand out from this crowd of people. You will still have fun however you may feel like the music or the environment is not totally up your alley. You should still check it out, not sure if you'll be doing drugs when you go there but that may or may not help your situation. Perhaps others will be more into these things or they will have stronger drugs or more liquor, its kinda hard to say. However somehow your fate aligns with this night out.

It seems like maybe you've been holding back or keeping closed off, you need this rave to release something in you. Maybe you will find another side or facet of yourself, but you will not fully come out on that day, idk, like maybe you'll discover a part of you you weren't aware of but you won't fully embrace it yet. Hope this helps.

The image is a close-up photograph of a human body, likely taken from a medical or forensic perspective. The person appears to be lying on their back with their head resting on a surface, possibly a bathtub or a sink. The skin is stained with blood, indicating a recent injury or death. The person's body is covered in blood, and the blood is flowing from the wound, which is located on the upper left side of the body. The skin around the wound is red and swollen, with some areas of the skin appearing to be torn or damaged. The background is blurred, suggesting a focus on the body and the wound. There are no discernible texts or other objects in the image. The style of the image is realistic, with a focus on the medical or forensic details of the scene.

The image is a close-up photograph of a newborn baby lying on a white surface. The baby's face is covered with a thick layer of white vernix, which is a protective layer of milk that the baby's mother has applied to the baby's skin. The baby's eyes are closed, and the skin around the eyes and mouth is slightly reddened. The baby's head is resting on a white surface, and the baby's body is covered with a layer of vernix. The background of the image is plain and white, which contrasts with the baby's skin and the vernix, making the baby the focal point of the image. There are no texts or other discernible objects in the image. The style of the image is a straightforward, non-stylized photograph, capturing the baby's appearance in a natural setting.

Like seriously, we just talked about what other days of the week we were going to meet and now I just heard a call saying that a surgery that I have been waiting four years for is happening tomorrow and I have to spend a week in recovery. It's been 3 weeks trying to meet this girl, and shit like this keep happening with all the girls I have been talking to

since my break-up

Fucking sick and tired of this shit, she broke up with me during the last eclipse (I am a Scorpio ascendant) as well, she said she had a bunch of bad dreams during the lunar eclipse beforehand. What actual FUCK is going on here?

Actually you know what, separate AQ.

Did my GF breaking up with me have anything to do with me working with archangel Samael? Did it have anything to do with my putting in the wrong intentions during a ritual in the eclipse? Or any magical disaster/backfire?

>One door closes so other doors open

Now I have nothing to do but hang out at the bar of the university I just entered in and talk to a bunch of 19 year olds like a fucking loser because I have no one else to talk to, while I am probably being cucked right now - fuck. You keep waiting for something to come in from Alex but it says you aren't listening to your intuition. Just move on and if it ever happens then that will be nice for you but you shouldn't be waiting on someone as it is unlikely or vague if anything will happen. As it is now, you will end up waiting this whole time.

I mean, this is one of the most positive spreads you could get about this sort of question. He most certainly will, in this life, the afterlife, his next life, etc. That sort of primary sin along with the selfishly using funds meant for you to get ahead in life has not gone unnoticed or disregarded by the divine. Rest easy Gia, for he'll be dealt with by Gods, Goddesses and other beings of different expressions. This wrath will especially be carried out by the Divine Feminine at the most suitable time.

>This is not why I say it anon, I became vapid hateful and vain.

My ex was abused and definitely embodies those traits in response to not only that but all she's been through. However, deep down, there's beauty and loving-kindness there. The same goes for you too hun.

>I'd excuse it with everything else but I can't, I'm ready to face it and work on being better.

Self awareness is a big thing and not everyone is capable of that. Be proud of your progress so far.

>That said I had a nightmare last night about it and it's ridiculous that I still have that, sleeping with my lights on at my grown age.

We all have our coping mechanisms for things that trouble us. Don't be ashamed or thinking you're ridiculous for doing what helps you deal with your issues.

The image is a colorful illustration that depicts a scene from a nighttime setting. In the foreground, there is a kitchen with a sink, a countertop, and various objects on it, including a bowl, a pot, and a bottle. A woman in a blue dress is sitting at the kitchen counter, looking out of a window that overlooks a city skyline at night. The window is adorned with pink curtains and a nightlight is visible on the windowsill.

In the background, there is a balcony with a table and chairs, where a man in a green costume is sitting, seemingly engaged in a conversation with a woman in a blue dress. The balcony is illuminated by a string of lights. The city skyline is visible through the window, with buildings and lights creating a vibrant cityscape.

[402 / 23]The image is a black and white illustration featuring a figure that appears to be a deity or a powerful being. The figure is holding a sword in one hand and a scale in the other, suggesting a theme of balance or justice. The deity's face is obscured by a mask, and the figure is wearing a robe with intricate patterns. The background is dark and moody, with a hint of a doorway or entrance. At the top of the image, there is a text that reads "dTV/," which could be a stylized or symbolic representation of the deity's name or a term related to the deity's power. Below the figure, the text "Divination General" is written in a bold, capitalized font, indicating that the figure is likely a divination or oracle figure. The overall style of the image is dramatic and evocative, with a focus on the figure's imposing presence and the symbolic elements present.

>Useful tips before posting:

- If you're a reader, post that you're offering readings and what information is required from the querent; the same goes for trading.
- Look for posts to determine if there's an active reader, what's needed and before posting, check if they finished reading already.
- Some readers will refuse to do certain readings - respect that choice. Do not harass readers if your query is refused/skipped. We do our best to maintain chill and good vibes.
- Traders should respect that a traded read will be granted, as per an agreement of trade. Free readers have the option of picking their queries.
- Bullshit queries get bullshit answers. Vague queries get vague answers.
- Making an AQ (air query) by not addressing a reader, in particular, is possible but doesn't guarantee an answer.
- Avoid making the same query repeatedly and/or to different readers in a short period of time, as this may lead to more confusion.
- Provide feedback when applicable and be considerate to the reader. We're a growing community, many readers are starting and need to know what they are doing right or wrong. Let's help each other to improve.

I sympathise with you, i went through similar

You are gonna find out that it is not as easy as it seems, you can probably jump in as a militant and yoh will have to find a way to get in, but be aware that it will be pure fire once you are in, if you are like me you will find a way and move towards the stuff that really calls you.

You need to start moving around and actually start talking to find a way in but yes you still have a chance just get more grounded on how it is going to be like because i am seeing you a bit too idealistic with this cards

The image is a meme featuring two kittens sitting side by side on a blue background. The kittens are of a grayish-blue color and appear to be of a young age, with their eyes wide open and focused on the camera. Above the image, there is a text overlay that reads "two of them" in a bold, white font. Below the image, there is a smaller text that says "two of them" in a smaller, white font. The style of the image is a combination of a meme and a photograph, with a playful and humorous tone. The image is likely intended to evoke a sense of camaraderie or companionship between the two kittens.

Looks like to find the best fit, stick to tradition. This looks different depending on who you are. Church family? Rely on the church. Not so much? How did your parents meet. If you can, ask them about it. The dating pool is full of piranhas. In your case, tradition will keep you safe.

How do you know when you've found her?

Queen of wands

Two of Swords

Eight of Cups

Awkward, to me this sounds like it's more about your recent ex now.

There is a crossroads, on one side there is a queen who requires a courageous heart, on the other bitterness. Choose the woman who demands your courage or be lost

My ex is out of my life and I really don't feel like going back to her, the other "ex" I'd have is someone I was talking to but things got in the way so idk if they even count.

The image is a screenshot of a Twitter post. At the top of the post, there is a tweet with the username "Donald J. Trump" and the text "Any athlete who kneels during the national anthem will be punished by the Nigger Whopper 5000!" The tweet has a blue background and is followed by a blue "Following" button. Below the tweet, there is a large image of a military tank with a caption that reads "6:15 PM - 28 Sep 2017". The image is a photograph of the tank, which is gray in color and has a large gun mounted on top. The tank is situated on a grassy area with trees in the background. The image has a watermark that reads "6:15 PM - 28 Sep 2017" and "RealDonaldTrump". The tweet has a number of likes and retweets, with the number of likes at the bottom of the tweet being 125,000 and the number of retweets at the bottom being 28,300. The overall style of the image is a combination of text and visual content, with the tweet being the primary focus and the image of the tank providing context to the tweet.

I don't think it was the wrong choice but it's more complex than that. I see in looking for a better life for yourself and prioritizing self fulfillment you had to put something old about yourself to rest, in order to absorb healing for yourself in this next phase of your life. Nothing is ever truly a mistake. You are being prepared for something and I feel this is very much about regaining your energy and putting you into a perfect position for the next phase of life. You may be putting something to rest but there's no guarantee that what comes next for you will be what it is that you planned or thought it would be, just that the old you is over. Accept what happens next regardless. Is turning 25 a mistake? Are thunder storms a mistake? These things happen in the passage of time regardless and they're not right or wrong. Your move is the same concept.

If you have the resources to spare, investing in the house would prove to be fruitful.

However that's contingent on you improving it in some material way, like renovations.

You may have to start something over with regards to the house to make it 'work for you' and it won't be immediate but the results will be honest. I'm guessing you're comparing this option to something that's more rapid growth. This is the opposite of that other option. If you care about your stability and weren't entirely sure of your other options, or didn't have a back up plan if selling your current house failed, I'd hold on a little bit longer.

If you are serious about keeping it I would suggest not being afraid to be creative or unconventional with your methods and I'll leave it at that. Hope this helps.

The image is a screenshot of a tarot card reading page. At the top, there is a title that reads "Page of Wands" and below it, there is a description of the card. The card itself is a colorful illustration of a man holding a staff with a crown on his head, standing on a sandy ground. The background is a dark purple color.

Below the card, there is a section titled "Keywords" with a list of words, including "Enthusiasm," "Eagerness," "Confidence," "Exploration," "Validation," and "Personal Meaning." Below this, there is a section titled "Personal Meanings" with a list of words, including "Generals," "Generalizing," "Daily Advice," "When?" and "You are creative, free-thinking and full of enthusiasm and need to find your voice. Consider the consequences before rushing in to things."

Howdy there Anon;

From what the table shows, the odds are against you, but not totally. Namely:

The woman involved here apparently is in the midst of relational discords that is causing her to feel emotionally fatigued or dissipated.

This is not a straight no, but rather it is about a 60% against, and 40% for.

She likely also is receptive to comfort and relationship, and likely does appear a little horny, to be truthful.

So, if one would wish to urge on an approach, it may be warranted.

The image displays three tarot cards arranged in a horizontal row against a pinkish-purple background. Each card features a distinct design and color scheme.

Each card has a border that includes a pattern of stylized flowers and leaves in shades of green and yellow. The text "ROYAL" is visible on each card, indicating the title of the tarot deck. Apparently, a few things.

The first is that the utmost in his mind is that primarily he appears to be seeking a woman for a semi-dedicated relationship that is:

- 1) Above average or moderately pretty.
- 2) And one that secretly, through her charm and grace, emboldens him to better succeed in his life, or fix mistakes he has repeatedly been making.

What he sees truthfully is doubt in you regarding your ability to attain this, and while it is not the kind of doubt that is the throwaway kind, he simply feels that this time will not be much different than his past experiences.

Overall, the table does not read negatively, just hesitantly, and with caution.

Apparently, there are pre-decision and hang-ups that are still tying up present decision-making, that are not minor, and are still requiring for your attention.

The good and proper news is that news of business/work opportunities appear to be already present and shortly coming.

What this implies is that either there will simply be more opportunities on offer to you, or you will have changed your mindset to accommodate for a broader selection.

Finally, what we notice that the table does indicate that you will accept it this year, likely in the 3-5 month range from time of this reading, and that you will take "benefits" from it, but you will also notice that it is not what you believed it might be, and that while you still feel it will be worthwhile, just not remarkably great.

The image displays three tarot cards arranged in a horizontal row against a pink background with a subtle floral pattern. Each card features a distinct design and color scheme.

The bottom card, titled "VICTORY," is bordered in red and has a central figure of a person holding a shield. The figure is depicted in a similar dynamic pose, with one leg raised and the other bent at the knee. The background is a mix of red and yellow, with a pattern that includes geometric shapes and a stylized representation of a tree.

Each card has a title at the top, and the text "HOPE," "DEATH," and "VICTORY" is visible on the cards. The style of the image is reminiscent of traditional tarot cards, with a focus on the mystical and symbolic meanings associated with each card.

Great inquiry, Anon.

Essentially, the illumination you've done beforehand for the preparation of such things will be protective (more than you realize, as you move through it).

Not only that, but good friendships will likely helpful as well, but, as it moves through you, you're going to notice an increased tendency for others around you (and likely you pulled into it) to quarrel with enmity.

This quarreling will not likely end relationships, but simply cause them to alter in quality and time spent together, as you will notice the 'rougher times' force more real faces that you've previously seen.

Specifically, there appears to be a woman involved in this matter who feels like a girlfriend or someone close in that way (and truthfully, mother is also indicated here, but less likely).

She will likely be the one you will remember most during this period, likely because she will be causing troubles that you will feel are "more difficult".

Truthfully, at the end of it all, a great seed of growth will be planted, and judging by the table, the return will likely last it's full length (around 6 years).

Each card has a title at the top, which is not fully visible in the image. The text on the cards is not legible due to the resolution and angle of the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of traditional tarot cards, with a focus on the intricate patterns and designs.

Sure thing.

It looks like you're next moment is likely going to involve not a destruction of things previously or currently held, but rather what appears to be a "downgrading" or a semi-forced "sacrifice."

Apparently, there appears to have recently been concerns or indications of either a slight loss in terms of work or opportunity, or rather disappointment in not receiving that which was expected.

Friends, close colleagues, and family that were/are involved with these particular matters also merit slight disappointment insofar that they did not do/help/assist in the way that they were "supposed to".

It is not that the relations are ruined, rather that, they will be 'adjusted' in your mind, and you will likely wish to involve yourself less, slowly.

What it ends up becoming, in the end of it all, will actually be seen by you later as a form of martyrdom, and a sacrifice that was made for the benefit of others. Less so "the greater good"; just to the benefit of others.

If we look at it with cynical features, the table reads more or less that "you just got cheated".

The right panel features a more detailed and ornate design with a series of concentric circles and floral patterns. The central medallion is surrounded by a border of smaller circles and floral motifs.

At the bottom of each panel, there is text that reads "REYNÉ DE DENIRS." The text is in a serif font and is in a different color from the rest of the text, which is white. The style of the illustration suggests it may be from a historical or fantasy context, possibly related to heraldry or a specific historical period.

Howdy Anon,

Truthfully, your inquiry was a little muddled/confusing regarding "who is who":

(TaurusM = probably you)
(both female = probably KC and S)
BUT (you mentioned KC and HIS friend... so...)
wat o_O

But regardless of that, we do see the presence of a woman in this table that was in the recent past, and while the table does not difficulties and interruptions on your end (which implies that the possibility is likely);

Rather, instead, she (looks like KC in this instance, or whichever was the first woman you mentioned), apparently has been facing financial difficulties in her own life as well as from that with someone close to her, which has caused stress and burdens more than she may wish at the present time.

Additionally, there does appear to be a sudden break in her future regarding these matters which implies a loss of employment or or some other support, which is imminent.

So, chances are you see them again (even as soon as you wish to make contact and offer); just know that apparently, there are these difficulties heading for her.

turned to the viewer, revealing a large number "33" on the back of their shirt. The character's face is partially obscured by a ponytail.

The background of the image is filled with various elements, including a large robot-like figure with a skull-like head, a white robot with a large eye, and a pink robot with a large head. The text in the image is in Japanese, and it appears to be a promotional or advertisement for a video game or series. The text includes Japanese characters and English phrases such as "エンジン" (engine), "マシン" (machine), "マシンガン" (machine gun), and "マシンガン" (machine gun).

The overall style of the image is dynamic and expressive, with a mix of bold colors and detailed illustrations. The character's pose and the surrounding elements suggest a sense of action and adventure, which is often associated with video game or anime-style illustrations.

The character has a humanoid form with a slender build, and features a pointed ear and a pointed chin. The hair is styled in a side-swept manner, and the character's eyes are a striking shade of blue. The character is wearing a sleeveless top with a pattern that includes what appears to be a metallic texture. The background is dark and out of focus, which emphasizes the character's features. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the image is realistic, with a focus on the character's facial features and attire.

It seems like you decided to go to the rave on a whim like something told you to go there and you listened to your instinct, perhaps you saw a paper or post about it on social media. It seems you will either go alone or with people, you will be with people however you may feel out of place or you will feel like you stand out from this crowd of people. You will still have fun however you may feel like the music or the environment is not totally up your alley. You should still check it out, not sure if you'll be doing drugs when you go there but that may or may not help your situation. Perhaps others will be more into these things or they will have stronger drugs or more liquor, its kinda hard to say. However somehow your fate aligns with this night out.

It seems like maybe you've been holding back or keeping closed off, you need this rave to release something in you. Maybe you will find another side or facet of yourself, but you will not fully come out on that day, idk, like maybe you'll discover a part of you you weren't aware of but you won't fully embrace it yet. Hope this helps.

The image is a close-up photograph of a human body, likely taken from a medical or forensic perspective. The person appears to be lying on their back with their head resting on a surface, possibly a bathtub or a sink. The skin is stained with blood, indicating a recent injury or death. The person's body is covered in blood, and the blood is flowing from the wound, which is located on the upper left side of the body. The skin around the wound is red and swollen, with some areas of the skin appearing to be torn or damaged. The background is blurred, suggesting a focus on the body and the wound. There are no discernible texts or other objects in the image. The style of the image is realistic, with a focus on the medical or forensic details of the scene.

The image is a close-up photograph of a newborn baby lying on a white surface. The baby's face is covered with a thick layer of white vernix, which is a protective layer of milk that the baby's mother has applied to the baby's skin. The baby's eyes are closed, and the skin around the eyes and mouth is slightly reddened. The baby's head is resting on a white surface, and the baby's body is covered with a layer of vernix. The background of the image is plain and white, which contrasts with the baby's skin and the vernix, making the baby the focal point of the image. There are no texts or other discernible objects in the image. The style of the image is a straightforward, non-stylized photograph, capturing the baby's appearance in a natural setting.

to meet this girl, and shit like this keep happening with all the girls I have been talking to since my break-up

Fucking sick and tired of this shit, she broke up with me during the last eclipse (I am a Scorpio ascendant) as well, she said she had a bunch of bad dreams during the lunar eclipse beforehand. What actual FUCK is going on here?

Actually you know what, separate AQ.

Did my GF breaking up with me have anything to do with me working with archangel Samael? Did it have anything to do with my putting in the wrong intentions during a ritual in the eclipse? Or any magical disaster/backfire?

You keep waiting for something to come in from Alex but it says you aren't listening to your intuition. Just move on and if it ever happens then that will be nice for you but you shouldn't be waiting on someone as it is unlikely or vague if anything will happen. As it is now, you will end up waiting this whole time.

The image is a colorful illustration that depicts a scene from a nighttime setting. In the foreground, there is a kitchen with a sink, a countertop, and various objects on it, including a bowl, a pot, and a bottle. A woman in a blue dress is sitting at the kitchen counter, looking out of a window that overlooks a city skyline at night. The window is adorned with pink curtains and a nightlight is visible on the windowsill.

The balcony is illuminated by a string of lights. The city skyline is visible through the window, with buildings and lights creating a vibrant cityscape.

The style of the illustration is reminiscent of pop art, characterized by bold colors, exaggerated forms, and a sense of movement. The overall mood of the image is whimsical and dreamlike, with a touch of surrealism.

The image is a photograph capturing a moment in a cinema. It shows a group of people seated in the audience, with some holding popcorn and soda cans. The audience is in a state of laughter and excitement, suggesting that they are watching a movie or a show that has elicited a reaction from the group. The lighting in the cinema is bright, with a spotlight illuminating the audience, which adds to the atmosphere of the scene. The people are dressed in casual attire, and the focus is on the expressions and body language of the individuals, indicating that they are engaged in the event. The image is taken from a slightly elevated angle, providing a comprehensive view of the audience and the movie or show they are watching. There are no visible texts or logos in the image.

I can throw some gas on this fire. New York City is 302 square miles or 1,594,560 square feet with a reported population of 8,260,000 in 2021. On top of this, somewhere between 1/3rd and 2/3rds of the buildings in the city are reportedly vacant. Now factor in probably half of that space is used for infrastructure, retail and other non living space related things. Even accounting for vertical space the math should be impossible for that many people to live in that little space and since covid NYC has looked like a ghost town when the numbers say they should literally be crawling over each other.

On top of this take a wild guess as to the most dangerous job in the federal government... Its a census worker. You are telling me that people are just strangely homicidal towards one of the few agencies that is literally constitutionally mandated since the founding fathers' time when agencies like the IRS and BATFE (I use their full name as it supposedly annoys them that they aren't 3 letters like the other agencies) exist? It doesn't make much sense but if anyone would be in a position to notice this irregularity and need to be "taken care of" it would be them as this is a major factor to the modern power block.

My speculation is the actual population of almost everywhere is somewhere between a half to 2/3rds of what is reported and that this started around the end of WWII, they didn't just inflate the Jews numbers they inflated EVERYONES When you compare them to WWI the numbers and aftermath of the war make no sense. Its also worth noting that prior to like the 70s/80s American politics had a far more midwestern focus with most prominent politicians being from midwestern states.

They started inflating these numbers to shift politics leftward and act like they have a backing they have never actually had. The growth of the left has been a lie based on these falsified numbers and in reality, middle America has a far greater percentage of the population than we are told it does. Part of the reason they keep pushing for

think about it. if you look into the past, every single generation up until your (grand)grandparents consistently had 5-7 children. this was the norm. yet, the population was supposed to be minuscule according to the (((statistics))). suddenly in the last 100 years, you had world wars, actual pandemics, quality of life decline and a declining birth rate yet somehow the population grew times 8. does it make sense? it does not. if you look at the official population growth graph you need to mirror it in order to see the actual population numbers. we actually used to be billions in the past but we are being systematically killed of for about 200 years now. remember Georgia Guidestones. 500 million. I would assume its even less right now. if you are in the city, yes there are a lot of people and you might actually believe there is a lot of us but as soon as you go into the country side it is completely empty when in the past this used to be where 99% of people lived. think of that what you will.

Maybe some bankers or politicians round up for marginal benefit... but I don't think it's that big of a deal anon. Take it easy. You arent designed to be aware of the scale of the earth or it's population, nor are you currently prepared nor capable to actually understand it. Ideally you should focus on the wellbeing yourself, your family and your immediate community. Everything else is a diversion. And when I say "actually understand it", I don't mean the kind of understanding people who "understand" they're likely no never win the lottery in a million years, literally; but still play. Now that's actually crazy and a real problem, worldwide! A blatant exploitation of well being in a global scale... But the cool thing is you can control how much that affects you on a completely realistic scale.

[19 / 4]The image is a surrealistic painting that depicts a fantastical landscape. At the center, there is a large, spherical, glowing object with a complex, swirling pattern, which appears to be a celestial body or a cosmic entity. This central figure is surrounded by a dense, rocky terrain that is reminiscent of a desert or a rocky mountain range. The rocks are of various sizes and shapes, and they are painted in shades of brown and gray.

In the foreground, there is a tree with a twisted, gnarled trunk and numerous branches, which is the only living element in the scene. The tree is surrounded by a pool of water, which reflects the surrounding rocks and the central glowing sphere.

The painting is rendered in a realistic style with meticulous attention to detail, but the overall composition and color palette are highly stylized and surreal. The use of vibrant colors and the dramatic lighting contribute to the dreamlike and otherworldly atmosphere of the artwork. The style of the painting is reminiscent of the works of Salvador Dali, who is known for his surrealist art.

God is a retarded lying tranny who tries to pretend that the afterlife will be better than my life right now when he literally abuses me for my thoughts right now. The afterlife is just dreaming in the womb and the fact that God abuses me for things like thinking and playing video games is proof that his problem is me being happy/enjoying myself. The nature of God doesn't change, he's not going to magically become more tolerant of my happiness when I'm dead in the womb, if he abuses me for my thoughts, playing video games, watching tv/movies now then he not going to allow me to experience anything more enjoyable than that when I die, or as enjoyable as that. God is a retarded tranny who never intends to stop making my life hell, he doesn't tolerate me being happy in life and he won't tolerate me being happy in death either.

Its eyes are a striking green color, and it appears to be looking off to the side, possibly observing something in the distance. The cat's whiskers are white, and its mouth is slightly open, suggesting a moment of quiet contemplation. The background is a plain, light gray color, which contrasts with the cat's fur and highlights its features. The image is taken from a side angle, capturing the cat's profile and the side of its face. There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the image is realistic, with a focus on the cat's facial expression and the lighting.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dragon_king_theory

If it wasn't for chaos the universe would be so ordered that it would create a resonance. It would be a Lindenmayer-system universe where the universe exist as a single supermassive black hole in the center with a perfect solution to the many body problem to the resonant periods of the surrounding stars and planets. A perfectly balanced oblivion.

Consciousness is the anomalistic divergence of chaos

What people don't address is how is the mind not located in the brain, but could be a parapsychological phenomenon through external intelligent variables. That is, you are entangled with another chaotic system that encodes for your neurological behavior via some channel not known.

<https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Panpsychism>

That means when you die you live in surrogate brains as a surrogate brain in a super spatial chaos channel.

>Surrogate brain refers to a computational model, often powered by artificial intelligence (AI), designed to simulate and predict the dynamic behavior of the human brain.

You will either continue to experience something after death, or nothing. If you fear the latter you are literally fearing nothing. Personally, the only fear I have is reincarnation, that could be very unpleasant. I do fear dying, meaning the suffering that causes death but not death itself. Hoping for a quick, painless and unexpected death because that's as good as it gets.

Consciousness is infinite. In a dimensional sense it seems interacting with what you currently perceive as life (3 dimensional) becomes difficult/impossible/unnecessary following physical death. I would imagine it follows a similar linear progression akin to progressing to a new stage in a game. Impossible to "go back" without restarting and losing all progress.

Reincarnation isn't strictly progressive, you can reincarnate backwards in time

Reincarnation also covers all forms of life, and maybe even unlife

You can reincarnate in someone or something not existing yet as of now, or that already exists, or existed, famous or unknown, it matters not

It could be you suffering that terrible accident you saw happening to someone and were glad it wasn't, and the comical part, is that it is you, just not yet, not on your current individual consciousness, but you will be there, sooner or later, suffering those same motions

It could be a finite system, as no matter how insurmountably big the coverage of the full chronological extent of everything possibly subject to incarnation, there comes a time you've ran the course of the cosmos and sometime it just dies and there are no more

vessles left, but then it could also be that the universe will just transform into a another prison with a brand new organization, and another tortuous cycle begins

God is a retarded lying tranny who tries to pretend that the afterlife will be better than my life right now when he literally abuses me for my thoughts right now. The afterlife is just dreaming in the womb and the fact that God abuses me for things like thinking and playing video games is proof that his problem is me being happy/enjoying myself. The nature of God doesn't change, he's not going to magically become more tolerant of my happiness when I'm dead in the womb, if he abuses me for my thoughts, playing video games, watching tv/movies now then he not going to allow me to experience anything more enjoyable than that when I die, or as enjoyable as that. God is a retarded tranny who never intends to stop making my life hell, he doesn't tolerate me being happy in life and he won't tolerate me being happy in death either.

The image is a close-up photograph of a cat with a contemplative expression. The cat has a striped pattern on its fur, predominantly in shades of gray and white, with black and brown accents. Its eyes are a striking green color, and it appears to be looking off to the side, possibly observing something in the distance. The cat's whiskers are white, and its mouth is slightly open, suggesting a moment of quiet contemplation. The background is a plain, light gray color, which contrasts with the cat's fur and highlights its features. The image is taken from a side angle, capturing the cat's profile and the side of its face. There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the image is realistic, with a focus on the cat's facial expression and the lighting.

For intelligence to arise you need chaos and the ability to preserve chaos.

The dimensionality of this structure doesn't matter, because it exists non-spatially. It's a 0th dimensional field (formlessness).

>Neurons evade excessive Kuramoto synchronization through dynamic regulatory mechanisms, primarily involving inhibitory neurons and glial cells, which prevent pathological global synchronization while preserving beneficial local synchrony.

If it wasn't for chaos the universe would be so ordered that it would create a resonance. It would be a Lindenmayer-system universe where the universe exist as a single supermassive black hole in the center with a perfect solution to the many body problem to the resonant periods of the surrounding stars and planets. A perfectly balanced oblivion.

Consciousness is the anomalistic divergence of chaos

What people don't address is how is the mind not located in the brain, but could be a parapsychological phenomenon through external intelligent variables. That is, you are entangled with another chaotic system that encodes for your neurological behavior via some channel not known.

<https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Panpsychism>

That means when you die you live in surrogate brains as a surrogate brain in a super spatial chaos channel.

>Surrogate brain refers to a computational model, often powered by artificial intelligence (AI), designed to simulate and predict the dynamic behavior of the human brain.

You will either continue to experience something after death, or nothing. If you fear the latter you are literally fearing nothing. Personally, the only fear I have is reincarnation, that could be very unpleasant. I do fear dying, meaning the suffering that causes death but not death itself. Hoping for a quick, painless and unexpected death because that's as good as it gets.

Consciousness is infinite. In a dimensional sense it seems interacting with what you currently perceive as life (3 dimensional) becomes difficult/impossible/unnecessary following physical death. I would imagine it follows a similar linear progression akin to progressing to a new stage in a game. Impossible to "go back" without restarting and losing all progress.

You die and reincarnate, almost instantly

Reincarnation isn't strictly progressive, you can reincarnate backwards in time

Reincarnation also covers all forms of life, and maybe even unlife
You can reincarnate in someone or something not existing yet as of now, or that already exists, or existed, famous or unknown, it matters not
It could be you suffering that terrible accident you saw happening to someone and were glad it wasn't, and the comical part, is that it is you, just not yet, not on your current individual consciousness, but you will be there, sooner or later, suffering those same motions

It could be a finite system, as no matter how insurmountably big the coverage of the full chronological extent of everything possibly subject to incarnation, there comes a time you've ran the course of the cosmos and sometime it just dies and there are no more vessles left, but then it could also be that the universe will just transform into a another prison with a brand new organization, and another tortuous cycle begins

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Central pattern generators (CPGs) are self-organizing biological neural circuits^{[1][2]} that produce rhythmic outputs in the absence of rhythmic input.^{[3][4][5]} They are the source of the tightly-coupled patterns of neural activity that drive rhythmic and stereotyped motor behaviors like walking, swimming, breathing, or chewing. The ability to function without input from higher brain areas still requires modulatory inputs, and their outputs are not fixed. Flexibility in response to sensory input is a fundamental quality of CPG-driven behavior.^{[3][4]} To be classified as a rhythmic generator, a CPG requires:

"two or more processes that interact such that each process sequentially increases and decreases, and that, as a result of this interaction, the system repeatedly returns to its starting condition."^[3]

CPGs are found in humans and most other vertebrates, and in some invertebrates.

^{[6][7][8][9][10][11]}

Physiology

CPG neurons

Intrinsic properties of CPG neurons. Adapted from Marder and Bucher (2001).^[12] CPG neurons can have different intrinsic membrane properties (see schematic).^[12] Some neurons fire bursts of action potentials, either endogenously or in the presence of neuromodulatory substances. Other neurons are bistable and generate plateau potentials that can be triggered by a depolarizing current pulse, and terminated by a hyperpolarizing current pulse. Many CPG neurons fire after being released from inhibition (postinhibitory rebound). Another common feature of CPG neurons is a decrease in the frequency of firing during a constant depolarization (spike frequency adaptation).

Rhythm generation

Mechanisms of rhythm generation in CPGs. Adapted from Marder and Bucher (2001).^[12]

Rhythm generation in CPG networks depends on the intrinsic properties of CPG neurons and their synaptic connections. There are two general mechanisms for rhythm generation: pacemaker/follower and reciprocal inhibition (see schematic).^[12]

In a network driven by a pacemaker, one or more neurons act as a core oscillator (pacemaker) that drives other, non-bursting neurons (follower) into a rhythmic pattern. Examples of pacemaker driven networks include the pyloric rhythm of the crustacean stomatogastric ganglion[13] and the vertebrate respiratory rhythms.[14]

In a network driven by reciprocal inhibition, two (groups of) neurons reciprocally inhibit each other. Such networks are known as half-center oscillators. The neurons are not rhythmically active when isolated, but they can produce alternating patterns of activity when coupled by inhibitory connections. (The neurons can also produce activity patterns of other relative phasing, including synchrony, depending on the synaptic properties). The transitions between activated and inhibited states can occur via a number of mechanisms. For example, spike-frequency adaptation in the bursting neuron(s) may slowly release the other neuron(s) from inhibition.[15] Reciprocal inhibition is a core feature of many CPGs, including those involved in locomotion.[16][17][18][19]

Gap junctions also contribute to rhythmic oscillations and neuronal synchrony in CPGs.[20][21][22] They act as low-pass filter allowing slow membrane voltage fluctuations to pass more effectively across cells. In neonatal mice, blocking gap junctions results in decreased rhythmic activity and can completely abolish drug induced fictive locomotion.[23][24][25] In zebrafish, motor neurons retrogradely control swim frequency via gap junctions.[26]

Short-term synaptic dynamics

CPG networks have extensive recurrent synaptic connections including reciprocal excitation and reciprocal inhibition. Synapses in CPG networks are subject to short-term activity dependent modifications.[27][28] Short-term synaptic depression and facilitation of synapses can play a role in transitions between active and inactive phases of bursting and termination of bursts.[29][30]

CPG circuits

CPG circuits thought to be involved in the control of locomotion consist of motor neurons and spinal interneurons and are located in the lower thoracic and lumbar regions of the vertebrate spinal cord,[31] and in each neuromere of the invertebrate ventral nerve cord.[32] CPG neurons involved in swallowing are located in the brain stem, specifically the hypoglossal nucleus within the medulla.[33][34]

While the general location of CPG neurons can often be inferred, the specific location and identity of the participating neurons are only beginning to be understood. CPG networks are often distributed and can be flexibly reorganized, making it challenging to identify spinal interneurons. Over the past few decades, molecular and genetic programs that control neuronal patterning have been used to specifically target spinal interneurons in mice[35] and zebrafish.[36] Developing neural tube of embryonic mouse shows expression of distinct transcription factors in domains along the dorso-ventral axis of the spinal cord.[37] These domains give rise to distinct population of neurons that have been classified as dorsal (dl1-dl6) and ventral (V0-V3) cardinal classes of spinal interneurons.[38][39][35] The ventral neurons are considered to be members of the spinal CPG network.[35] Each of these interneuron class can be further divided into diverse subpopulations of neurons with distinct neurotransmitter phenotype, axonal projection and function during locomotion.[38] For example, V2 interneurons are ipsilaterally projecting that can be further classified as excitatory V2a and inhibitory V2b. V2s are important for flexor-extensor alternation and provide excitation to motor neurons.[38]

Neuromodulation

Organisms must adapt their behavior to meet the needs of their internal and external environments. Central pattern generators, as part of the neural circuitry of an organism, can be modulated to adapt to the organism's needs and surroundings. Three roles of neuromodulation have been found for CPG circuits:[3]

Modulation is intrinsic to CPG network or required for its activation

Modulation alters CPG neuron complement by switching neurons between networks and fusing formerly separate networks into larger entities

Neuromodulatory synapses may be part of the CPG network itself.[40] For example, the CPG underlying the escape swim response in Tritonia diomedea contains intrinsic neuromodulatory neurons. These neuromodulatory neurons can enhance neurotransmitter release from another neuron in the circuit and its neuromodulatory actions are thought to be important for producing swim motor program.[41]

Neuromodulatory inputs can also activate CPG networks and can be necessary for generation of rhythmic output. Loss of neuromodulatory inputs can abolish rhythmic activity from pyloric network.[40] In vertebrates, application of neuromodulators have been shown to evoke locomotor activity.[42]

Neuromodulators can alter the synaptic strength as well as intrinsic properties of neurons.[43] These actions can alter the frequency and the phase relationships between neurons and thereby change the output pattern of the circuit. For example, exogenous application of various neuromodulators can elicit triphasic motor pattern in the STG where each modulator results in generation of a different motor pattern.[44] Neuromodulatory projections expressing a common modulator can also elicit different patterns from the same network. Stimulation of different proctolin-containing projection neurons in the STG results in a distinct motor pattern from the same network due to differences in cotransmitter complement of these projection neurons.[45]

The effects of neuromodulators are distributed throughout the CPG network. Specially, dopamine was shown to affect cellular and synaptic properties of nearly all components of the crustacean pyloric network. Moreover, dopamine can have opposing effects on different components of the network. As such, the final output of the network reflects a combination of modulatory actions on individual components.[46]

Modulation alters CPG neurons

Neuronal composition of CPGs can vary with the state of the system.[47]

Neuromodulators can activate or inhibit neurons of the CPGs and can even combine different networks into one.[44] For example, in the lobster stomatogastric nervous system the neuropeptide, red pigment concentrating hormone, can strengthen synapses between two different networks to create a single, combined rhythm.[48] Neuromodulators can also result in switching of neurons from one network to another.[49]

Sensory feedback

Although the theory of central pattern generation calls for basic rhythmicity and patterning to be centrally generated, CPGs can respond to sensory feedback to alter the patterning in behaviorally appropriate ways. Alteration of the pattern is difficult because feedback received during only one phase may require changed movement in the other parts of the patterned cycle to preserve certain coordination relationships. For example, walking with a pebble in the right shoe alters the entire gait, even though the stimulus is only present while standing on the right foot. Even during the time when the left foot is down and the sensory feedback is inactive, action is taken to prolong the right leg swing and extend the time on the left foot, leading to limping. This effect could be due to widespread and long-lasting effects of the sensory feedback on the CPG or due to short-term effects on a few neurons that in turn modulate nearby neurons and spread the feedback through the entire CPG in that way. Some degree of modulation is required to allow one CPG to assume multiple states in response to feedback.[3]

Additionally, the effect of the sensory input varies depending on the phase of the pattern in which it occurs. For example, during walking, resistance to the top of the swinging foot (e.g., by a horizontal stick) causes the foot to be lifted higher to move over the stick. However, the same input to the standing foot cannot cause the foot to lift or the person would collapse. Thus, depending on the phase, the same sensory input can cause the foot to be lifted higher or held more firmly to the ground. "This change in motor response as a function of motor pattern phase is called reflex reversal, and has been observed in invertebrates (DiCaprio and Clarac, 1981) and vertebrates (Forssberg et al., 1977). How this process occurs is poorly understood, but again two possibilities exist. One is that sensory input is appropriately routed to different CPG neurons as a function of motor pattern phase. The other is that the input reaches the same neurons at all phases, but that, as a consequence of the way in which the network transforms the input, network response varies appropriately as a function of motor pattern phase." [3]

A study by Gottschall and Nichols examined the hindlimb of a decerebrate cat during walking (a CPG controlled function) in response to changes in head pitch. This study describes the differences in gait and body position of cats walking uphill, downhill and on level surfaces. Proprioceptive (Golgi tendon organs and muscle spindles) and exteroceptive (optic, vestibular and cutaneous) receptors work alone or in combination to adjust the CPG to sensory feedback. The study explored the effects of neck proprioceptors (giving information about the relative location of the head and body) and vestibular receptors (giving information about the orientation of the head relative to gravity). Decerebrate cats were made to walk on a level surface with their heads level, tilted up or tilted down. Comparing the decerebrate cats to normal cats showed similar EMG patterns during level walking and EMG patterns that reflected downhill walking with the head tilted up and uphill walking with the head tilted down. This study proved that neck proprioceptors and vestibular receptors contribute sensory feedback that alters the gait of the animal. This information may be useful for treatment of gait disorders.[50]

Functions

Central pattern generators can serve many functions. CPGs can play roles in movement, breathing, rhythm generation and other oscillatory functions. Below are several key functions of CPGs.

Locomotion

As early as 1911, it was recognized, by the experiments of Thomas Graham Brown, that the basic pattern of stepping can be produced by the spinal cord without the need of descending commands from the cortex.[51][52]

The first modern evidence of the central pattern generator was produced by isolating the locust nervous system and showing that it could produce a rhythmic output in isolation resembling that of the locust in flight. This was discovered by Wilson in 1961.[3] Since that time, evidence has arisen for the presence of central pattern generators in vertebrate animals, starting with work on the cat in the 1960s by Elzbieta Jankowska in Gothenburg, who provided the first evidence for a spinal cord CPG. This section addresses the role of the central pattern generator in locomotion for the lamprey and humans.

The lamprey has been used as a model for vertebrate CPGs because, while its nervous system has a vertebrate organization, it shares many positive characteristics with invertebrates. When removed from the lamprey, the intact spinal cord can survive for days in vitro. It also has very few neurons and can be easily stimulated to produce a fictive swimming motion indicative of a central pattern generator. As early as 1983, Ayers, Carpenter, Currie and Kinch proposed that there was a CPG responsible for most undulating movements in the lamprey including swimming forward and backward, burrowing in the mud and crawling on a solid surface, that although not surprisingly did not match the activity in the intact animal, nevertheless provided the basic locomotor output.[53] The different movements have been found to be altered by neuromodulators, including serotonin in a study by Harris-Warrick and Cohen in 1985[54] and tachykinin in a study by Parker et al.[55] in 1998. The lamprey model of CPG for locomotion has been important to the study of CPGs. Although Sten Grillner claims that the locomotor network is characterised, a claim that has seemingly been uncritically accepted by the spinal cord locomotor network field, there are in fact many missing details and Grillner cannot provide the evidence he uses to support his claims (Parker 2006).[56][57] However, this neural circuit model[58] of the lamprey CPG, including three classes (one excitatory and two inhibitory) of neurons but omitting sub-cellular details, provides a system level understanding of the CPG-generated locomotion whose speed and direction (swimming forward, backward, or turning) are set by non-rhythmic external inputs (from the brainstem) to the circuit.[58] A general scheme of the lamprey CPG is now being used in the creation of artificial CPGs. For example, Ijspeert and Kodjabachian used Ekeberg's model for the lamprey to create artificial CPGs and simulate swimming movements in a lamprey-like substrate using controllers based on a SGOCE encoding.[59] Essentially, these are the first steps toward the use of CPGs to code for locomotion in robots. The vertebrate model of CPG has been also developed with both Hodgkin-Huxley formalism,[60] its variants [61] and control system approaches.[62][63] For example, Yakovenko and colleagues have developed a simple mathematical model that describes basic principles proposed by T.G. Brown with integrate-to-threshold units organized with mutually inhibitory connections. This model is sufficient to describe complex properties of behavior, such as different regimes of the extensor- and flexor-dominant locomotion observed during electrical stimulation of the mesencephalic locomotor region (MLR), MLR-induced fictive locomotion.[63]

The connections between the CPGs that control each limb manage interlimb coordination and hence the gaits in quadrupedal and possibly also bipedal animals.[64][65][66][67][68] Left right coordination is mediated by commissural and fore-hind as well as diagonal coordination is mediated by long-projecting propriospinal interneurons.[69][70] The balance of the left-right alternation (mediated genetically identified V0d and V0v neuron classes) to left-synchronization promoting commissural interneurons (potentially mediated V3 neurons) determines whether walk and trot (alternating gaits) or gallop and bound (synchronous gaits) are expressed.[64] This balance changes with increasing speed, potentially because of modulation by supraspinal drive from the MLR and mediated by the reticular formation, and causes speed dependent gait transitions characteristic for quadrupedal animals.[64][67][71] The walk to trot transition potentially occurs because of the stronger decrease of extension than flexion phase durations with increasing locomotor speed and could be mediated by descending diagonal inhibition through V0d long propriospinal neurons,[67] which leads to progressively increasing overlap between the diagonal limbs up until diagonal synchronization (trot).[64] Commissural and long propriospinal neurons are a likely target of supraspinal and somatosensory afferent inputs to adjust interlimb coordination and gait to different environmental and behavioral conditions.[67]

Central pattern generators also contribute to locomotion in humans. In 1994, Calancie, et al. described the "first well-defined example of a central rhythm generator for stepping in the adult human." The subject was a 37-year-old male who suffered an injury to the cervical spinal cord 17 years prior. After initial total paralysis below the neck, the subject eventually regained some movement of the arms and fingers and limited movement in the lower limbs. He had not recovered sufficiently to support his own weight. After 17 years, the subject found that when lying supine and extending his hips, his lower extremities underwent step-like movements for as long as he remained lying down. "The movements (i) involved alternating flexion and extension of his hips, knees, and ankles; (ii) were smooth and rhythmic; (iii) were forceful enough that the subject soon became uncomfortable due to excessive muscle 'tightness' and an elevated body temperature; and (iv) could not be stopped by voluntary effort." After extensive study of the subject, the experimenters concluded that "these data represent the clearest evidence to date that such a [CPG] network does exist in man." [72] Four years later, in 1998, Dimitrijevic, et al. showed that the human lumbar pattern generating networks can be activated by drive to large-diameter sensory afferents of the posterior roots. [6] When tonic electrical stimulation is applied to these fibers in motor complete spinal cord injured individuals (i.e., individuals in whom the spinal cord is functionally isolated from the brain) rhythmic, locomotor-like movement of the lower limbs can be elicited. These measurements were performed in supine position, thus minimizing peripheral feedback. Subsequent studies showed that these lumbar locomotor centers can form a large variety of rhythmic movements by combining and distributing stereotypical patterns to the numerous lower limb muscles. [7] A CPG-activating drug treatment called Spinalon, active centrally upon oral administration, has also been shown to partially reactivate spinal locomotor neurons in complete or motor-complete spinal cord-injured patients. Indeed, a double-blind, randomized, placebo-controlled study in forty-five volunteers with chronic AIS A/B injuries (between 3 months and 30 years post-trauma) lying in the supine position for safety reasons, revealed that Spinalon below maximum tolerated dose (MTD was 500/125/50 mg/kg L-DOPA/carbidopa/buspirone) was well tolerated. Preliminary evidence of efficacy was also found using videotape and electromyographic recordings since doses below MTD could acutely induce rhythmic locomotor-like leg movements in groups with Spinalon, but not in those with placebo (cornstarch). [73]

Control of locomotion

If step cycle durations and muscle activations were fixed, it would not be possible to change body velocity and adapt to varying terrain. It has been suggested that the mammalian locomotor CPG comprises a "timer" (possibly in the form of coupled oscillators) which generates step cycles of varying durations, and a "pattern formation layer," which selects and grades the activation of motor pools. [60][74] Increasing the neural drive from the midbrain locomotor region (MLR) to the spinal CPG increases the step cycle frequency (the cadence). [75] Swing and stance phase durations co-vary in a fairly fixed relationship, with stance phases changing more than swing phases. [76]

Sensory input from the limbs may truncate or extend individual phase durations in a process akin to finite state control (in which "if-then" rules determine when state transitions occur). [77][78][79] For example, if a limb that is swinging forward reaches the end of swing in less time than the current CPG-generated flexor phase duration, sensory input would cause the CPG timer to terminate swing and start the stance phase. [80][81] Furthermore, as body velocity increases, the pattern formation layer would increase muscle activation nonlinearly to provide increased load-bearing and thrust forces. It has been posited that in well-predicted movements, CPG-generated phase durations and muscle forces closely match those required by the evolving biomechanical events, minimizing the sensory corrections required. The term "neuromechanical tuning" has been coined to describe this process. [63]

Fig. 1. Schematic of the locomotor central pattern generator in the mammalian nervous system. A command signal specifying increasing body velocity descends from deep brain nuclei via the MLR to the spinal cord and drives the timing element of the spinal locomotor CPG to generate cycles of increasing cadence. Extensor phase durations change more than flexor phase durations. The command signal also drives the pattern formation layer to generate cyclical activation of flexor and extensor motoneurons. Loading of the activated muscles (e.g. supporting the moving body mass) is resisted by the muscles' intrinsic spring-like properties. This is equivalent to displacement feedback. Force and displacement sensed by muscle spindle and Golgi tendon organ afferents reflexly activate motoneurons. A key role of these afferents is to adjust the timing of phase transitions, presumably by influencing or overriding the CPG timer. Modified from [82]

Fig. 1 provides a simplified schematic that summarizes these proposed mechanisms. A command specifying desired body velocity descends from higher centers to the MLR, which drives the spinal locomotor CPG. The CPG timer produces the appropriate cadence and phase durations and the pattern formation layer modulates the motoneuronal outputs.[82] The activated muscles resist stretch through their own intrinsic biomechanical properties, providing a rapid form of length and velocity feedback control. Reflexes mediated by Golgi tendon organ and other afferents provide additional load compensation, but the main role of sensory input may be to adjust or override the CPG at stance-swing-stance transitions.[83]

As described in Neuromodulation, the human locomotive CPG is very adaptable and can respond to sensory input. It receives input from the brainstem as well as from the environment to keep the network regulated. Newer studies have not only confirmed the presence of the CPG for human locomotion, but also confirmed its robustness and adaptability. For example, Choi and Bastian showed that the networks responsible for human walking are adaptable on short and long timescales. They showed adaptation to different gait patterns and different walking contexts. Also, they showed that different motor patterns can adapt independently. Adults could even walk on treadmills going in a different direction for each leg. This study showed that independent networks control forward and backward walking and that networks controlling each leg can adapt independently and be trained to walk independently.[84] Thus, humans also possess a central pattern generator for locomotion that is capable not only of rhythmic pattern generation but also remarkable adaptation and usefulness in a wide variety of situations.

Respiration

Further information: Respiratory center

A three-phase model is the classical view of the respiratory CPG. The phases of the respiratory CPG are characterized by the rhythmic activity of: (1) the phrenic nerve during inspiration; (2) recurrent laryngeal nerve branches that innervate the thyroarytenoid muscle during the last stage of expiration; (3) the internal intercostal nerve branches that innervate the triangularis sterni muscle during the second stage of expiration. The rhythmicity of these nerves is classically viewed as originating from a single rhythm generator. In this model, phasing is produced by reciprocal synaptic inhibition between groups of sequentially active interneurons.

Nevertheless, an alternative model has been proposed[85] reinforced by certain experimental data. According to this model, respiratory rhythm is generated by two coupled anatomically distinct rhythm generators, one in the pre-Boetzing complex[86] and the other in the retrotrapezoid nucleus / parafacial respiratory group. Further survey provided evidence to the hypothesis that one of the networks is responsible for inspiration rhythm and the other for expiration rhythm. Therefore, inspiration and expiration are distinct functions and one does not induce the other, as is the common belief, but one of two dominates the behavior by generating a faster rhythm.

Swallowing

Swallowing involves the coordinated contraction of more than 25 pairs of muscles in the oropharynx, larynx and esophagus, which are active during an oropharyngeal phase, followed by the primary esophageal peristalsis. Swallowing depends on a deglutition centre, a CPG located in the medulla oblongata, which involves several brain stem motor nuclei and two main groups of interneurons: a dorsal swallowing group (DSG) in the nucleus tractus solitarius and a ventral swallowing group (VSG) located in the ventrolateral medulla above the nucleus ambiguus. Neurons in the DSG are responsible for the generation of the swallowing pattern, while those in the VSG distribute the commands to the various motoneuronal pools. As in other CPGs, the functioning of the central network can be modulated by peripheral and central inputs, so that the swallowing pattern is adapted to the size of the bolus.

Within this network, central inhibitory connections play a major role, producing a rostrocaudal inhibition that parallels the rostrocaudal anatomy of the swallowing tract. Thus, when the neurons controlling the proximal parts of the tract are active, those that command more distal parts are inhibited. Apart from the type of connection between the neurons, intrinsic properties of the neurons, especially those of NTS neurons, probably also contribute to the shaping and timing of the swallowing pattern.

The swallowing CPG is a flexible CPG. This means that at least some of the swallowing neurons may be multifunctional neurons and belong to pools of neurons that are common to several CPGs. One such CPG is the respiratory one, which has been observed interacting with the swallowing CPG.[87][88]

Rhythm generators

Central pattern generators can also play a role in rhythm generation for other functions in vertebrates. For example, the rat vibrissa system uses an unconventional CPG for whisking movements. "Like other CPGs, the whisking generator can operate without cortical input or sensory feedback. However, unlike other CPGs, vibrissa motoneurons actively participate in rhythmogenesis by converting tonic serotonergic inputs into the patterned motor output responsible for movement of the vibrissae." [89] Breathing is another non-locomotive function of central pattern generators. For example, larval amphibians accomplish gas exchange largely through rhythmic ventilation of the gills. A study showed that lung ventilation in the tadpole brainstem may be driven by a pacemaker-like mechanism, whereas the respiratory CPG adapts in the adult bullfrog as it matures.[90] Thus, CPGs hold a broad range of functions in the vertebrate animal and are widely adaptable and variable with age, environment and behavior.

Mechanism

Rhythmicity in CPGs can also result from time-dependent cellular properties such as adaptation, delayed excitation, and post-inhibitory rebound (PIR). PIR is an intrinsic property that elicits rhythmic electrical activity by depolarizing the membrane once hyperpolarizing stimulus is gone. It can be produced by several mechanisms including hyperpolarization-activated cation current (I_h), low-voltage activated calcium current,[91] or deinactivation of depolarization-activated inward currents.[92] Once inhibition has ceased, this period of PIR can be explained as the time with increased neuronal excitability. It is the property of many CNS neurons that sometimes results in action potential "bursts" following immediately after inhibitory synaptic input. "Because of this, it has been suggested that PIR may contribute to the maintenance of oscillatory activity in neural networks that are characterized by mutual inhibitory connections, like those involved in locomotor behaviors. In addition, PIR is often included as an element in computational models of neural networks that involve mutual inhibition".[93] For example, the "PIR in crayfish stretch receptor neurons is caused by recovery from adaptation during the course of inhibitory hyperpolarization. One feature of that system is that PIR only occurs if the hyperpolarization is imposed on a background of excitation, caused in this case by stretch. They also found that PIR can be elicited in the stretch receptor by hyperpolarizing current pulses. This was an important finding because it showed that PIR is an intrinsic property of the postsynaptic neuron, related to the membrane potential change associated with inhibition but independent of transmitter receptors or presynaptic properties. The latter conclusion has stood the test of time, marking PIR as a robust property of CNS neurons in a wide variety of contexts."[94] This cellular property can most easily be seen in the Lamprey neural circuit. The swimming movement is produced by alternating neural activity between the left and right side of the body, causing it to bend back and forth while creating oscillating movements. While the Lamprey is bent to the left, there is reciprocal inhibition on the right side causing it to relax due to hyperpolarization. Immediately after this hyperpolarizing stimulus, the interneurons use post-inhibitory rebound to initiate activity in the right side. Depolarization of the membrane causes it to contract while reciprocal inhibition is now applied to the left side.

Functions in invertebrates

CPGs play a similarly critical role in coordinating behaviors in invertebrates, and studying invertebrate CPGs with fewer numbers of neurons has helped establish general principles of CPGs and their organization in the nervous system. One model circuit for studying CPGs is the stomatogastric ganglion in crabs and lobsters, a ~30 neuron circuit containing two CPGs that generate rhythmic motor output for chewing and digesting food.[11] Dissection of these circuits has revealed neural mechanisms of CPGs. For example, the pyloric CPG - which controls the contraction and dilation of the pylorus - contains a set of conditional oscillatory neurons and one pacemaker neuron that fires rhythmically when dissected out of the circuit.[11] Coordinated rhythmic behaviors like walking, flight and grooming are also controlled by CPGs in some invertebrates.[95][96][97][98] Continued research into how CPGs control these behaviors has revealed a nested CPG architecture to control rhythmic behaviors across various timescales.[99] Other examples of CPGs in invertebrate animals include a CPG modulating reflexive withdrawal, escape swimming and crawling in the mollusc Tritonia,[100] and to control the heartbeat of leeches.[101] Central pattern generators play a broad role in all animals and show amazing variability and adaptability in almost all cases.

Alternative interpretations

One theory that reconciles the role of sensory feedback during rhythmic locomotion is to redefine CPGs as "state estimators" as opposed to rhythm generators.[102] Through this perspective, CPGs are an intrinsic spinal processor that corrects imperfect sensory feedback and adapts central input to this optimized peripheral input.[4] Models using this framework are able to accomplish rhythmic behavior as well as fictive locomotion without incorporating independent rhythm generators.

The cover of a collection of articles about dragon kings^[1]

A dragon king event is one that is both extremely large in size or effect (a "king") and born of unique origins (a "dragon") relative to other events from the same system. DK events are generated by or correspond to mechanisms such as positive feedback, tipping points, bifurcations, and phase transitions, that tend to occur in nonlinear and complex systems, and serve to amplify dragon king events to extreme levels. By understanding and monitoring these dynamics, some predictability of such events may be obtained.[1][2][3]

The dragon king theory was developed by Didier Sornette, who hypothesizes that many crises are in fact DKs rather than black swans, i.e., they may be predictable to some degree. Given the importance of crises to the long-term organization of a variety of systems, the DK theory urges that special attention be given to the study and monitoring of extremes, and that a dynamic view be taken. From a scientific viewpoint, such extremes are interesting because they may reveal underlying, often hidden, organizing principles. Practically speaking, one should study extreme risks, but not forget that significant uncertainty will almost always be present, and should be rigorously considered in decisions regarding risk management and design.

The dragon king theory is related to concepts such as black swan theory, outliers, complex systems, nonlinear dynamics, power laws, extreme value theory, prediction, extreme risks, and risk management.

A black swan can be considered a metaphor for an event that is surprising (to the observer), has a major effect, and, after being observed, is rationalized in hindsight. The theory of black swans is epistemological, relating to the limited knowledge and understanding of the observer. The term was introduced and popularized by Nassim Taleb and has been associated with concepts such as heavy tails, non-linear payoffs, model error, and even Knightian uncertainty, whose "unknowable unknown" event terminology was popularized by former United States Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld. Taleb claims that black swan events are not predictable, and in practice, the theory encourages one to "prepare rather than predict", and limit one's exposure to extreme fluctuations.

The black swan concept is important and poses a valid criticism of people, firms, and societies that are irresponsible in the sense that they are overly confident in their ability to anticipate and manage risk. However, claiming that extreme events are—in general—unpredictable may also lead to a lack of accountability in risk management roles. In fact, it is known that in a wide range of physical systems that extreme events are predictable to some degree.[4][5][2][3] One simply needs to have a sufficiently deep understanding of the structure and dynamics of the focal system, and the ability to monitor it. This is the domain of the dragon kings. Such events have been referred to as "grey swans" by Taleb. A more rigorous distinction between black swans, grey swans, and dragon kings is difficult as black swans are not precisely defined in physical and mathematical terms. However, technical elaboration of concepts in the Black Swan book are elaborated in the Silent Risk document. An analysis of the precise definition of a black swan in a risk management context was written by professor Terje Aven.[6]

Many phenomena in both the natural and social sciences have power law statistics (Pareto distribution).[8][9][10] Furthermore, from extreme value theory, it is known that a broad range of distributions (the Frechet class) have tails that are asymptotically power law. The result of this is that, when dealing with crises and extremes, power law tails are the "normal" case. The unique property of power laws is that they are scale-invariant, self-similar and fractal. This property implies that all events—both large and small—are generated by the same mechanism, and thus there will be no distinct precursors by which the largest events may be predicted. A well-known conceptual framework for events of this type is self-organized criticality. Such concepts are compatible with the theory of the black swan. However Taleb has also stated that considering the power law as a model instead of a model with lighter tails (e.g., a Gaussian) "converts black swans into gray ones", in the sense that the power law model gives non-negligible probability to large events.

In a variety of studies it has been found that, despite the fact that a power law models the tail of the empirical distribution well, the largest events are significantly outlying (i.e., much larger than what would be expected under the model).[7][11][12] Such events are interpreted as dragon kings as they indicate a departure from the generic process underlying the power law. Examples of this include the largest radiation release events occurring in nuclear power plant accidents, the largest city (agglomeration) within the sample of cities in a country, the largest crashes in financial markets, and intraday wholesale electricity prices.[7][13]

Mechanisms

Physically speaking, dragon kings may be associated with the regime changes, bifurcations, and tipping points of complex out-of-equilibrium systems.[1] For instance, the catastrophe (fold bifurcation) of the global ecology illustrated in the figure could be considered to be a dragon king: Many observers would be surprised by such a dramatic change of state. However, it is well known that in dynamic systems, there are many precursors as the system approaches the catastrophe.

Positive feedback is also a mechanism that can spawn dragon kings. For instance, in a stampede the number of cattle running increases the level of panic which causes more cattle to run, and so on. In human dynamics such herding and mob behavior has also been observed in crowds, stock markets, and so on (see herd behavior). The role of positive feedback loops in dragon king formation is well documented, particularly in oscillatory and cascading networks. Such a system periodically reaches a tipping point, becoming unstable and triggering a self-amplifying cascade of cascades, leading to a dragon king.[15]

empirical pdf (histogram) of peak heights in trajectories in double logarithmic scale[16] Dragon kings are also caused by attractor bubbling in coupled oscillator systems.[16] Attractor bubbling is a generic behavior appearing in networks of coupled oscillators where the system typically orbits in an invariant manifold with a chaotic attractor (where the peak trajectories are low), but is intermittently pushed (by noise) into a region where orbits are locally repelled from the invariant manifold (where the peak trajectories are large). These excursions form the dragon kings, as illustrated in the figure. It is claimed that such models can describe many real phenomena such as earthquakes, brain activity, etc.[16] A block and spring mechanical model, considered as a model of geological faults and their earthquake dynamics, produced a similar distribution.[17]

It could also be the case that dragon kings are created as a result of system control or intervention. That is, trying to suppress the release of stress or death in dynamic complex systems may lead to an accumulation of stress or a maturation towards instability. For instance, brush/forest fires are a natural occurrence in many areas. Such fires are inconvenient and thus we may wish that they are diligently extinguished. This leads to long periods without inconvenient fires, however, in the absence of fires, dead wood accumulates. Once this accumulation reaches a critical point, and a fire starts, the fire becomes so large that it cannot be controlled—a singular event that could be considered to be a dragon king. Other policies, such as doing nothing (allowing for small fires to occur naturally), or performing strategic controlled burning, would avoid enormous fires by allowing for frequent small ones. Another example is monetary policy. Quantitative easing programs and low interest rate policies are common, with the intention of avoiding recessions, promoting growth, etc. However, such programs build instability by increasing income inequality, keeping weak firms alive, and inflating asset bubbles.[18][19] Ultimately such policies, aimed at smoothing out economic fluctuations, will enable an enormous correction—a dragon king.

The taxonomy of dragon kings.[20] Examples of systems include:

A: City sizes

B: Inoculation model [21]

C: Complex contagion model [21]

D: Quasicritical neuronal models[22], rice-pile[23]

E: BTW–Kuramoto[15], Facilitated sandpile[24]

As discussed in the previous section, dragon kings often arise in systems where other events follow a power law distribution. Mechanisms generating power laws are well-studied under the framework of self-organized criticality (SOC). Many systems exhibiting dragon kings alongside power laws can be understood by how their dynamics differ from pure SOC.[20] SOC typically involves self-organization (SO) around a continuous absorbing-state phase transition (ASPT), where SO refers to an emergent balance between external driving and internal dissipation, and ASPT marks a transition between active and inactive (absorbing) phases. If this phase transition is first-order (discontinuous), it produces hysteresis, leading to large dragon king events.[25][26] Even continuous transitions, which typically result in SOC, can enter regimes that produce dragon kings, depending on the nuances of the driving and dissipation.[20] The figure on the right illustrates the taxonomy of dragon kings based on this classification: Set A includes all dragon kings, while sets B and C distinguish between those with self-organization near continuous and discontinuous transitions. Sets D and E further focus on cases with specifically absorbing-state transitions.

Probability density function schematic where the dragon king regime is represented by a lump of mass deep in the tail

Dragon kings are outliers by definition. However, when calling DKs outliers there is an important proviso: In standard statistics outliers are typically erroneous values and are discarded, or statistical methods are chosen that are somehow insensitive to outliers. Contrariwise, DKs are outliers that are highly informative, and should be the focus of much statistical attention. Thus a first step is identifying DKs in historical data. Existing tests are either based on the asymptotic properties of the empirical distribution function (EDF)[13] or on an assumption about the underlying cumulative distribution function (CDF) of the data.[7]

It turns out that testing for outliers relative to an exponential distribution is very general. The latter follows from the Pickands–Balkema–de Haan theorem of extreme value theory which states that a wide range of distributions asymptotically (above high thresholds) have exponential or power law tails. As an aside, this is one explanation why power law tails are so common when studying extremes. To finish the point, since the natural logarithm of a power law tail is exponential, one can take the logarithm of power law data and then test for outliers relative to an exponential tail. There are many test statistics and techniques for testing for outliers in an exponential sample. An inward test sequentially tests the largest point, then the second largest, and so on, until the first test that is not rejected (i.e., the null hypothesis that the point is not an outlier is not rejected). The number of rejected tests identifies the number of outliers. For instance, where where r is the point being tested

$$T_{r,m} = \frac{x_{(r)}}{x_{(m)} + \dots + x_{(n)}}$$

where m is the pre-specified maximum number of outliers. At each step the p-value for the test statistic must be computed and, if lower than some level, the test rejected. This test has many desirable properties: It does not require that the number of outliers be specified, it is not prone to under (masking) and over (swamping) estimation of the number outliers, it is easy to implement, and the test is independent of the value of the parameter of the exponential tail.[7]

Examples

(II) Empirical CCDF of the log of radiation released (grey dashed) and damage (black) caused by accidents at nuclear power plants, with solid lines giving the fitted power law tail. (III) Empirical CCDF of populations in urban agglomerations within a country, scaled so that the second largest has size 1. Outliers are labeled.[7]

Some examples of where dragon kings have been detected as outliers include:[7][13] financial crashes as measured by drawdowns, where the outliers correspond to terrorist attacks (e.g., the 2005 London bombing), and the flash crash of 2010;

the radiation released and financial losses caused by accidents at nuclear power plants, where outliers correspond to runaway disasters where safety mechanisms were overwhelmed;

the largest city (measured by the population in its agglomeration) in the population of cities within a country, where the largest city plays a disproportionately important role in the dynamics of the country, and benefits from unique growth;

intraday wholesale electricity prices; and three-wave nonlinear interaction—it is possible to suppress the emergence of dragon kings.[27]

Predictability based on interaction and diversity in a system[28]

How one models and predicts dragon kings depends on the underlying mechanism.

However, the common approach will require continuous monitoring of the focal system and comparing measurements with a (non-linear or complex) dynamic model. It has been proposed that the more homogeneous the system, and the stronger its interactions, the more predictable it will be.[28]

Modeling and prediction of a bubble (super-exponential growth) with the log-periodic power law[29]

For instance, in non-linear systems with phase transitions at a critical point, it is well known that a window of predictability occurs in the neighborhood of the critical point due to precursory signs: the system recovers more slowly from perturbations, autocorrelation changes, variance increases, spatial coherence increases, etc.[30][31]

These properties have been used for prediction in many applications ranging from changes in the bio-sphere[14] to rupture of pressure tanks on the Ariane rocket.[32] The applications to a wide range of phenomena have stimulated the complex systems perspective, which is a trans-disciplinary approach and do not depend on the first-principles understanding.

Four regimes of views per day of YouTube videos.[33]

For the phenomena of unsustainable growth (e.g., of populations or stock prices), one can consider a growth model that features a finite time singularity, which is a critical point where the growth regime changes. In systems that are discrete scale invariant such a model is power law growth, decorated with a log-periodic function.[34][35] Fitting this model on the growth data (non-linear regression) allows for the prediction of the singularity, i.e., the end of unsustainable growth. This has been applied to many problems,[3] for instance: rupture in materials,[32][36] earthquakes,[37] and the growth and burst of bubbles in financial markets[12][38][39][40][41]

An interesting dynamic to consider, that may reveal the development of a block-buster success, is epidemic phenomena: e.g., the spread of plague, viral phenomena in media, the spread of panic and volatility in stock markets, etc. In such a case, a powerful approach is to decompose activity/fluctuations into exogeneous and endogeneous parts, and learn about the endogenous dynamics that may lead to highly influential bursts in activity.[33][42][43]

Prediction and decision-making

Given a model and data, one can obtain a statistical model estimate. This model estimate can then be used to compute interesting quantities such as the conditional probability of the occurrence of a dragon king event in a future time interval, and the most probable occurrence time. When doing statistical modeling of extremes, and using complex or nonlinear dynamic models, there is bound to be substantial uncertainty. Thus, one should be diligent in uncertainty quantification: not only considering the randomness present in the fitted stochastic model, but also the uncertainty of its estimated parameters (e.g., with Bayesian techniques or by first simulating parameters and then simulating from the model with those parameters), and the uncertainty in model selection (e.g., by considering an ensemble of different models).

One can then use the estimated probabilities and their associated uncertainties to inform decisions. In the simplest case, one performs a binary classification: predicting that a dragon king will occur in a future interval if its probability of occurrence is high enough, with sufficient certainty. For instance, one may take a specific action if a dragon king is predicted to occur. An optimal decision will then balance the cost of false negatives/false positives and misses/false alarms according to a specified loss function. For instance, if the cost of a miss is very large relative to the cost of a false alarm, the optimal decision will detect dragon kings more frequently than they occur. One should also study the true positive rate of the prediction. The smaller this value is, the weaker the test, and the closer one is to black swan territory. In practice the selection of the optimal decision, and the computation of its properties must be done by cross validation with historical data (if available), or on simulated data (if one knows how to simulate the dragon kings).

In a dynamic setting the dataset will grow over time, and the model estimate, and its estimated probabilities will evolve. One may then consider combining the sequence of estimates/probabilities when performing prediction. In this dynamic setting, the test will likely be weak most of the time (e.g., when the system is around equilibrium), but as one approaches a dragon king, and precursors become visible, the true positive rate should increase.

The importance of extreme risks

Dragon kings form special kinds of events leading to extreme risks (which can also be opportunities). That extreme risks are important and should be self-evident. Natural disasters provide many examples (e.g., asteroid impacts leading to extinction). Some statistical examples of the effect of extremes are that: the largest nuclear power plant accident (Chernobyl disaster) had a roughly equal damage cost (as measured by estimated US dollar cost) as all (+- 175) other historical nuclear accidents together,[44] the largest 10 percent of private data breaches from organizations accounts for 99 percent of the total breached private information,[45] the largest five epidemics since 1900 caused 20 times the fatalities of the remaining 1363,[7][46] etc. In general such statistics arrive in the presence of heavy-tailed distributions, and the presence of dragon kings will augment the already oversized effect of extreme events.

Despite the importance of extreme events, due to ignorance, misaligned incentives, and cognitive biases, there is often a failure to adequately anticipate them. Technically speaking, this leads to poorly specified models where distributions that are not heavy-tailed enough, and under-appreciate both serial and multivariate dependence of extreme events. Some examples of such failures in risk assessment include the use of Gaussian models in finance (Black–Scholes, the Gaussian copula, LTCM), the use of Gaussian processes and linear wave theory failing to predict the occurrence of rogue waves, the failure of economic models in general to predict the 2008 financial crisis, and the under-appreciation of external events, cascades, and nonlinear effects in probabilistic risk assessment, leading to not anticipating the Fukushima Daiichi nuclear disaster in 2011. Such influential failures emphasize the importance of the study of extremes.

Risk management

The dragon king concept raises many questions about how one can deal with risk. Of course, if possible, exposure to large risks should be avoided (often referred to as the "black swan approach"). However, in many developments, exposure to risk is a necessity, and a trade-off between risk and return needs to be navigated.

In an adaptive system, where prediction of dragon kings is successful, one can act to defend the system or even profit. How to design such resilient systems, as well as their real time risk monitoring systems,[47] is an important and interdisciplinary problem where dragon kings must be considered.

On another note, when it comes to the quantification of risk in a given system (whether it be a bank, an insurance company, a dike, a bridge, or a socio-economic system), risk needs to be accounted for over a period, such as annually. Typically one is interested in statistics such as the annual probability of loss or damage in excess of some value (value at risk), other tail risk measures, and return periods. To provide such risk characterizations, the dynamic dragon kings must be reasoned about in terms of annual frequency and severity statistics. These frequency and severity statistics can then be brought together in a model such as a compound Poisson process.

Provided that the statistical properties of the system are consistent over time (stationary), frequency and severity statistics may be constructed based on past observations, simulations, and/or assumptions. If not, one may only construct scenarios. However, in any case, given the uncertainty present, a range of scenarios should be considered. Due to the shortage of data for extreme events, the principle of parsimony, and theoretical results from extreme value theory about universal tail models, one typically relies on a generalized Pareto distribution (GPD) tail model. However such a model excludes DKs. Thus, when one has sufficient reason to believe that dragon kings are present, or if one simply wants to consider a scenario, one may e.g., consider a density mixture of a GPD and a density for the DK regime.

In philosophy of mind, panpsychism (/ˈpænˈsaɪkɪzəm/) is the view that the mind or consciousness is a fundamental and ubiquitous feature of reality.[1] It is also described as a theory that "the mind is a fundamental feature of the world which exists throughout the universe".[2] It is one of the oldest philosophical theories and has been ascribed, in some form, to philosophers including Thales, Plato, Spinoza, Leibniz, Schopenhauer, William James,[3] Alfred North Whitehead, and Bertrand Russell.[1] In the 19th century, panpsychism was the default philosophy of mind in Western thought, but it saw a decline in the mid-20th century with the rise of logical positivism.[3][4] Recent interest in the hard problem of consciousness and developments in the fields of neuroscience, psychology, and quantum mechanics have revived interest in panpsychism in the 21st century, because it addresses the hard problem directly.[4][5][6]

Overview

Etymology

The term panpsychism comes from the Greek pan (πᾶν: "all, everything, whole") and psyche (ψυχή: "soul, mind").[7]:1 The use of "psyche" is controversial, because it is synonymous with "soul", a term usually taken to refer to something supernatural; more common terms now found in the literature include mind, mental properties, mental aspect, and experience.

Concept

Panpsychism holds that mind, or a mind-like aspect, is a fundamental and ubiquitous feature of reality.[1] It is sometimes defined as a theory in which "the mind is a fundamental feature of the world which exists throughout the universe".[2] Panpsychists posit that the type of mentality we know through our own experience is present, in some form, in a wide range of natural bodies.[7] This notion has taken on a wide variety of forms. Some historical and non-Western panpsychists ascribe attributes such as life or spirits to all entities (animism).[8] Contemporary academic proponents, however, hold that sentience or subjective experience is ubiquitous, while distinguishing these qualities from more complex human mental attributes.[8] They therefore ascribe a primitive form of mentality to entities at the fundamental level of physics, but may not ascribe mentality to most aggregate things, such as rocks or buildings.[1][9][10]

Terminology

The philosopher David Chalmers, who has explored panpsychism as a viable theory, distinguishes between microphenomenal experiences (the experiences of microphysical entities), and macrophenomenal experiences (the experiences of larger entities, such as humans).[11]

Philip Goff draws a distinction between panexperientialism and pancognitivism. In the form of panpsychism under discussion in the contemporary literature, conscious experience is present everywhere at a fundamental level, hence the term panexperientialism. Pancognitivism, by contrast, is the view that thought is present everywhere at a fundamental level—a view that had some historical advocates but has no present-day academic adherents. Contemporary panpsychists do not believe microphysical entities have complex mental states, such as beliefs, desires, and fears.[1]

Originally, the term panexperientialism had a narrower meaning, having been coined by David Ray Griffin to refer specifically to the form of panpsychism used in process philosophy (see below).[8]

Antiquity

Illustration of the Neoplatonic concept of the anima mundi emanating from The Absolute, in some ways a precursor to modern panpsychism

Panpsychist views are a staple in pre-Socratic Greek philosophy.[4] According to Aristotle, Thales (c. 624 – 545 BCE), the first Greek philosopher, posited a theory which held "that everything is full of gods".[12] Thales believed that magnets demonstrated this. This has been interpreted as a panpsychist doctrine.[4] Other Greek thinkers associated with panpsychism include Anaxagoras (who saw the unifying principle or arche as nous or mind), Anaximenes (who saw the arche as pneuma or spirit), and Heraclitus (who said "The thinking faculty is common to all").[8]

Plato argues for panpsychism in his Sophist, in which he writes that all things participate in the form of Being, and that it must have a psychic aspect of mind and soul (psyche).[8] In the Philebus and Timaeus, Plato argues for the idea of a world soul or anima mundi. According to Plato:

This world is indeed a living being endowed with a soul and intelligence ... a single visible living entity containing all other living entities, which by their nature are all related.[13]

Stoicism developed a cosmology that held that the natural world is infused with the divine fiery essence pneuma, directed by the universal intelligence logos. The relationship between beings' individual logos, and the universal logos was a central concern of the Roman Stoic Marcus Aurelius. The metaphysics of Stoicism finds connections with Hellenistic philosophies, such as Neoplatonism. Gnosticism also made use of the Platonic idea of anima mundi.

Renaissance

Illustration of the Cosmic order by Robert Fludd, where the World soul is depicted as a woman

After Emperor Justinian closed Plato's Academy in 529 CE, neoplatonism declined. Though there were mediaeval theologians, such as John Scotus Eriugena, who ventured into what might be called panpsychism, it was not a dominant strain in philosophical theology. But in the Italian Renaissance, it enjoyed something of a revival in the thought of figures such as Gerolamo Cardano, Bernardino Telesio, Francesco Patrizi, Giordano Bruno, and Tommaso Campanella. Cardano argued for the view that soul or anima was a fundamental part of the world, and Patrizi introduced the term panpsychism into philosophical vocabulary. According to Bruno, "There is nothing that does not possess a soul and that has no vital principle".[8] Platonist ideas resembling the anima mundi (world soul) also resurfaced in the work of esoteric thinkers such as Paracelsus, Robert Fludd, and Cornelius Agrippa.

Early modern

In the 17th century, two rationalists, Baruch Spinoza and Gottfried Leibniz, can be said to be panpsychists.[4] In Spinoza's monism, the one single infinite and eternal substance is "God, or Nature" (Deus sive Natura), which has the aspects of mind (thought) and matter (extension). Leibniz's view is that there are infinitely many absolutely simple mental substances called monads that make up the universe's fundamental structure. While it has been said that George Berkeley's idealist philosophy is also a form of panpsychism,[4] Berkeley rejected panpsychism and posited that the physical world exists only in the experiences minds have of it, while restricting minds to humans and certain other specific agents.[14]

19th century

In the 19th century, panpsychism was at its zenith. Philosophers such as Arthur Schopenhauer, C.S. Peirce, Josiah Royce, William James, Eduard von Hartmann, F.C.S. Schiller, Ernst Haeckel, William Kingdon Clifford and Thomas Carlyle[15] as well as psychologists such as Gustav Fechner, Wilhelm Wundt, Rudolf Hermann Lotze all promoted panpsychist ideas.[4]

Arthur Schopenhauer argued for a two-sided view of reality as both Will and Representation (Vorstellung). According to Schopenhauer, "All ostensible mind can be attributed to matter, but all matter can likewise be attributed to mind".[citation needed]

Josiah Royce, the leading American absolute idealist, held that reality is a "world self", a conscious being that comprises everything, though he did not necessarily attribute mental properties to the smallest constituents of mentalistic "systems". The American pragmatist philosopher Charles Sanders Peirce espoused a sort of psycho-physical monism in which the universe is suffused with mind, which he associated with spontaneity and freedom. Following Pierce, William James also espoused a form of panpsychism.[16] In his lecture notes, James wrote:

Our only intelligible notion of an object in itself is that it should be an object for itself, and this lands us in panpsychism and a belief that our physical perceptions are effects on us of 'psychical' realities[8]

English philosopher Alfred Barratt, the author of Physical Metempiric (1883), has been described as advocating panpsychism.[17][18]

In 1893, Paul Carus proposed a philosophy similar to panpsychism, "panbiotism", according to which "everything is fraught with life; it contains life; it has the ability to live".[19]:149[20]

20th century

Bertrand Russell's neutral monist views tended toward panpsychism.[8] The physicist Arthur Eddington also defended a form of panpsychism.[5] The psychologists Gerard Heymans, James Ward and Charles Augustus Strong also endorsed variants of panpsychism.[21][19]:158[22]

In 1990, the physicist David Bohm published "A new theory of the relationship of mind and matter", a paper based on his interpretation of quantum mechanics.[23] The philosopher Paavo Pylkkänen has described Bohm's view as a version of panprotopsychism.[24]

One widespread misconception is that the arguably greatest systematic metaphysician of the 20th century, Alfred North Whitehead, was also panpsychism's most significant 20th century proponent.[4] This misreading attributes to Whitehead an ontology according to which the basic nature of the world is made up of atomic mental events, termed "actual occasions".[4][8] But rather than signifying such exotic metaphysical objects—which would in fact exemplify the fallacy of misplaced concreteness Whitehead criticizes—Whitehead's concept of "actual occasion" refers to the "immediate experienced occasion" of any possible perceiver, having in mind only himself as perceiver at the outset, in accordance with his strong commitment to radical empiricism.[25]

Contemporary

Panpsychism has recently seen a resurgence in the philosophy of mind, set into motion by Thomas Nagel's 1979 article "Panpsychism"[26] and further spurred by Galen Strawson's 2006 realistic monist article "Realistic Monism: Why Physicalism Entails Panpsychism".[27][28][29] Other recent proponents include American philosophers David Ray Griffin[1] and David Skrbina,[4][19] British philosophers Gregg Rosenberg,[1] Timothy Sprigge,[1] Philip Goff,[5][30] and Canadian philosopher William Seager.[31] The British philosopher David Papineau, while distancing himself from orthodox panpsychists, has written that his view is "not unlike panpsychism" in that he rejects a line in nature between "events lit up by phenomenology [and] those that are mere darkness".[32][33]

The integrated information theory of consciousness (IIT), proposed by the neuroscientist and psychiatrist Giulio Tononi in 2004 and since adopted by other neuroscientists such as Christof Koch, postulates that consciousness is widespread and can be found even in some simple systems.[34]

In 2019, cognitive scientist Donald Hoffman published The Case Against Reality: How evolution hid the truth from our eyes. Hoffman argues that consensus reality lacks concrete existence, and is nothing more than an evolved user-interface. He argues that the true nature of reality is abstract "conscious agents".[35] Science editor Annaka Harris argues that panpsychism is a viable theory in her 2019 book Conscious, though she stops short of fully endorsing it.[36][37]

Panpsychism has been postulated by psychoanalyst Robin S. Brown as a means to theorizing relations between "inner" and "outer" tropes in the context of psychotherapy.[38] Panpsychism has also been applied in environmental philosophy by Australian philosopher Freya Mathews,[39] who has put forward the notion of onto-poetics as a version of panpsychism.[40]

The geneticist Sewall Wright endorsed a version of panpsychism. He believed that consciousness is not a mysterious property emerging at a certain level of the hierarchy of increasing material complexity, but rather an inherent property, implying the most elementary particles have these properties.[41]

Varieties

Panpsychism encompasses many theories, united only by the notion that mind in some form is ubiquitous.[8]

Philosophical frameworks

Cosmopsychism

Cosmopsychism hypothesizes that the cosmos is a unified object that is ontologically prior to its parts. It has been described as an alternative to panpsychism,[42] or as a form of panpsychism.[43] Proponents of cosmopsychism claim that the cosmos as a whole is the fundamental level of reality and that it instantiates consciousness. They differ on that point from panpsychists, who usually claim that the smallest level of reality is fundamental and instantiates consciousness. Accordingly, human consciousness, for example, merely derives from a larger cosmic consciousness.

Panexperientialism

Panexperientialism is associated with the philosophies of, among others, Charles Hartshorne and Alfred North Whitehead, although the term itself was invented by David Ray Griffin to distinguish the process philosophical view from other varieties of panpsychism.[8] Whitehead's process philosophy argues that the fundamental elements of the universe are "occasions of experience", which can together create something as complex as a human being.[4] Building on Whitehead's work, process philosopher Michel Weber argues for a pancreativism.[44] Goff has used the term panexperientialism more generally to refer to forms of panpsychism in which experience rather than thought is ubiquitous.[1]

Panprotopsychism

Panprotopsychists believe that higher-order phenomenal properties (such as qualia) are logically entailed by protophenomenal properties, at least in principle. This is similar to how facts about H₂O molecules logically entail facts about water: the lower-level facts are sufficient to explain the higher-order facts, since the former logically entail the latter. It also makes sense of questions about the unity of consciousness relating to the diversity of phenomenal experiences and the deflation of the self.[45] Adherents of panprotopsychism believe that "protophenomenal" facts logically entail consciousness. Protophenomenal properties are usually picked out through a combination of functional and negative definitions: panphenomenal properties are those that logically entail phenomenal properties (a functional definition), which are themselves neither physical nor phenomenal (a negative definition).[46]

Panprotopsyism is advertised as a solution to the combination problem: the problem of explaining how the consciousness of microscopic physical things might combine to give rise to the macroscopic consciousness of the whole brain. Because protophenomenal properties are by definition the constituent parts of consciousness, it is speculated that their existence would make the emergence of macroscopic minds less mysterious.[9] The philosopher David Chalmers argues that the view faces difficulty with the combination problem. He considers it "ad hoc", and believes it diminishes the parsimony that made the theory initially interesting.[47]

Russellian monism

The Analysis of Mind

Russellian monism is a type of neutral monism.[47][48] The theory is attributed to Bertrand Russell, and may also be called Russell's panpsychism, or Russell's neutral monism.[9][47] Russell believed that all causal properties are extrinsic manifestations of identical intrinsic properties. Russell called these identical internal properties quiddities. Just as the extrinsic properties of matter can form higher-order structure, so can their corresponding and identical quiddities. Russell believed the conscious mind was one such structure.[49][9] If the quiddities are a form of consciousness, the resulting view is Russellian panpsychism, and if they involve proto-consciousness, the resulting view is Russellian panprotopsyism. Russellian physicalism is the view that quiddities can also be physical, without having any consciousness-like aspect, while remaining relevant to explaining consciousness.[49]

Dispositional panpsychism

Dispositional panpsychism is a variety of panpsychism that integrates dispositionalism, which is the view that fundamental physical properties are irreducible causal powers, with the thesis of phenomenal consciousness, which is the qualitative "what it is like" aspect of consciousness. The view is advocated by Hedda Hassel Mørch, who argues that the only causal powers we can positively conceive of are mental properties, specifically those involving volition, motivation, or agency.[50] Drawing on the "argument from the experience of causation", historically traced to philosophers such as Gottfried Wilhelm Leibniz, Arthur Schopenhauer, and William James, the view posits that our direct experience of our own agency serves as the only positively conceivable model for the intrinsic nature of physical causation, so that all relations in the world involve a phenomenal aspect, making the view a form of panpsychism.[51] Central to this account is the "phenomenal powers view", according to which phenomenal properties, such as pain or pleasure, are not merely qualitative but are intrinsically powerful. For example, the feeling of pain necessarily motivates avoidance behavior in virtue of its specific phenomenal character.[50]

Monadic and Leibnizian panpsychism

Monadic panpsychism is a variety of panpsychism inspired by the philosophy of Gottfried Wilhelm Leibniz, though not committed to the same ontological postulates.[52][53] The theory is attributed to Nino Kadic, who argues that the experience of each simple subject is determined relationally by the structure they feature in: either one simple subject takes on a "dominant" role and instantiates the full consciousness of the structure it is a part of, like the brain, or all relevant simple subjects of the structure instantiate full consciousness.[54] The former is the dynamic version of the view, while the latter is the global version. The aim is to avoid both the combination and emergence of a complex subject.[54] Relatedly, S. Siddharth and Tejas Bhojraj propose Leibnizian panpsychism, arguing that there is neither one "dominant" simple subject nor many with identical experiences, but rather a determinate "causal neighborhood" where many simple subjects have similar but not identical experiences of the structure.[54][55]

Continuist panpsychism

Continuist panpsychism (or simply continuism) is a variety of panpsychism proposed by Luke Roelofs, which argues that while human consciousness is informationally bounded (causally and functionally distinct), it is likely phenomenally unbounded (part of a single, continuous field of experience).[56] Roelofs distinguishes between six senses of boundedness, ultimately claiming that the intuition that our minds are separate "phenomenal fields" is an illusion caused by our informational isolation. Instead, he proposes that the universe consists of a single continuous field of consciousness, with individual subjects existing as informationally dense regions within it.[56] This view addresses the combination problem by positing phenomenal unity as the fundamental default rather than something that must be created. However, unlike some forms of cosmopsychism, continuism does not necessarily imply that the universe is a coherent "subject" with agency or intelligence, but potentially a "mindless" field of experience.[56]

Religious or mystical ontologies

Advaita Vedānta

Main article: Advaita Vedanta

Advaita Vedānta is a form of idealism in Indian philosophy which views consensus reality as illusory.[57] Anand Vaidya and Purushottama Bilimoria have argued that it can be considered a form of panpsychism or cosmopsychism.[58]

Animism and hylozoism

Further information: Animism and Hylozoism

Animism maintains that all things have a soul, and hylozoism maintains that all things are alive.[8] Both could reasonably be interpreted as panpsychist, but both have fallen out of favour in contemporary academia.[8] Modern panpsychists have tried to distance themselves from theories of this sort, careful to carve out the distinction between the ubiquity of experience and the ubiquity of mind and cognition.[1][11]

Panpsychism and metempsychosis

Between 1840 and 1864, the Austrian mystic Jakob Lorber claimed to have received a 26-volume revelation. Various books of the Lorber Revelations say that specifica, closely resembling Leibniz's monads, form the most basic, irreducible substance of all physical and metaphysical creation.[59][60][61][62][63] According to the Lorber Revelations, specifica grow in complexity and intelligence to form ever higher level clusters of intelligence until a fully intelligent human soul is reached.[64] In this scenario panpsychism and metempsychosis are used to overcome the combination problem.

Buddha-nature

Main article: Buddha-nature

In the art of the Japanese rock garden, the artist must be aware of the "ishigokoro" ('heart', or 'mind') of the rocks.[65]

Buddha-nature is an important and multifaceted doctrine in Mahayana Buddhism that is related to the capacity to attain Buddhahood.[66][67] In numerous Indian sources, the idea is connected to the mind, especially the Buddhist concept of the luminous mind.[68] In some Buddhist traditions, the Buddha-nature doctrine may be interpreted as implying a form of panpsychism. Graham Parks argues that most "traditional Chinese, Japanese and Korean philosophy would qualify as panpsychist in nature".[65]

The Huayan, Tiantai, and Tendai schools of Buddhism explicitly attribute Buddha-nature to inanimate objects such as lotus flowers and mountains.[7]: 39 This idea was defended by figures such as the Tiantai patriarch Zhanran, who spoke of the Buddha-nature of grasses and trees.[65][69] Similarly, Soto Zen master Dogen argued that "insentient beings expound" the teachings of the Buddha, and wrote about the "mind" (心, shin) of "fences, walls, tiles, and pebbles". The 9th-century Shingon figure Kukai went so far as to argue that natural objects such as rocks and stones are part of the supreme embodiment of the Buddha. According to Parks, Buddha-nature is best described "in western terms" as something "psychophysical".[65]

Scientific theories

Conscious realism

It is a natural and near-universal assumption that the world has the properties and causal structures that we perceive it to have; to paraphrase Einstein's famous remark, we naturally assume that the moon is there whether anyone looks or not. Both theoretical and empirical considerations, however, increasingly indicate that this is not correct.

—Donald Hoffman, Conscious agent networks: Formal analysis and applications to cognition

See also: Map–territory relation

Conscious realism is a theory proposed by Donald Hoffman, a cognitive scientist specialising in perception. He has written numerous papers on the topic[70] which he summarised in his 2019 book The Case Against Reality: How evolution hid the truth from our eyes. [35] Conscious realism builds upon Hoffman's former User-Interface

Theory. In combination they argue that (1) consensus reality and spacetime are illusory, and are merely a "species specific evolved user interface"; (2) Reality is made of a complex, dimensionless, and timeless network of "conscious agents".[71]

The consensus view is that perception is a reconstruction of one's environment. Hoffman views perception as a construction rather than a reconstruction. He argues that perceptual systems are analogous to information channels, and thus subject to data compression and reconstruction. The set of possible reconstructions for any given data set is quite large. Of that set, the subset that is homomorphic in relation to the original is minuscule, and does not necessarily—or, seemingly, even often—overlap with the subset that is efficient or easiest to use.

For example, consider a graph, such as a pie chart. A pie chart is easy to understand and use not because it is perfectly homomorphic with the data it represents, but because it is not. If a graph of, for example, the chemical composition of the human body were to look exactly like a human body, then we could not understand it. It is only because the graph abstracts away from the structure of its subject matter that it can be visualized. Alternatively, consider a graphical user interface on a computer. The reason graphical user interfaces are useful is that they abstract away from lower-level computational processes, such as machine code, or the physical state of a circuit-board. In general, it seems that data is most useful to us when it is abstracted from its original structure and repackaged in a way that is easier to understand, even if this comes at the cost of accuracy. Hoffman offers the "fitness beats truth theorem"[72] as mathematical proof that perceptions of reality bear little resemblance to reality's true nature.[73] From this he concludes that our senses do not faithfully represent the external world.

Even if reality is an illusion, Hoffman takes consciousness as an indisputable fact. He represents rudimentary units of consciousness (which he calls "conscious agents") as Markovian kernels. Though the theory was not initially panpsychist, he reports that he and his colleague Chetan Prakash found the math to be more parsimonious if it were.[74] They hypothesize that reality is composed of these conscious agents, who interact to form "larger, more complex" networks.[75][35]

Main article: Integrated information theory

Integrated information theory (IIT) was first proposed by Giulio Tononi in 2004,[76] and it has undergone two major revisions since then.[77][78] Tononi approaches consciousness from a scientific perspective, and has expressed frustration with philosophical theories of consciousness for lacking predictive power.[34] Though integral to his theory, he refrains from philosophical terminology such as qualia or the unity of consciousness, instead opting for mathematically precise alternatives like entropy function and information integration.[76] This has allowed Tononi to create a measurement for integrated information, which he calls phi (Φ). He believes consciousness is nothing but integrated information, so Φ measures consciousness.[79] As it turns out, even basic objects or substances have a nonzero degree of Φ . This would mean that consciousness is ubiquitous, albeit to a minimal degree.[80]

The philosopher Hedda Hassel Mørch's views IIT as similar to Russellian monism,[81] while other philosophers, such as Chalmers and John Searle, consider it a form of panpsychism.[82][83] IIT does not hold that all systems are conscious, leading Tononi and Koch to state that IIT incorporates some elements of panpsychism but not others.[34] Koch has called IIT a "scientifically refined version" of panpsychism.[84]

In relation to other theories

A diagram depicting four positions on the mind-body problem. Versions of panpsychism have been likened to each of these positions as well as contrasted to them. Because panpsychism encompasses a wide range of theories, it can in principle be compatible with reductive materialism, dualism, functionalism, or other perspectives depending on the details of a given formulation.[8]

Dualism

Further information: Mind–body dualism

David Chalmers and Philip Goff have each described panpsychism as an alternative to both materialism and dualism.[9][5] Chalmers says panpsychism respects the conclusions of both the causal argument against dualism and the conceivability argument for dualism.[9] Goff has argued that panpsychism avoids the disunity of dualism, under which mind and matter are ontologically separate, as well as dualism's problems explaining how mind and matter interact.[1] By contrast, Uwe Meixner argues that panpsychism has dualist forms, which he contrasts to idealist forms.[85]

Emergentism

Further information: Emergentism

Panpsychism is incompatible with emergentism.[8] In general, theories of consciousness fall under one or the other umbrella; they hold either that consciousness is already present at a fundamental level of reality (panpsychism) or that it emerges as a higher-order phenomenon out of the composite interaction of fundamental parts (emergentism).[8]

Idealism

Further information: Idealism

There is disagreement over whether idealism is a form of panpsychism or a separate view. Both views hold that everything that exists has some form of experience.[citation needed] According to the philosophers William Seager and Sean Allen-Hermanson, "idealists are panpsychists by default".[14] Charles Hartshorne contrasted panpsychism and idealism, saying that while idealists rejected the existence of the world observed with the senses or understood it as ideas within the mind of God, panpsychists accepted the reality of the world but saw it as composed of minds.[86] Chalmers also contrasts panpsychism with idealism (as well as materialism and dualism).[87] Meixner writes that formulations of panpsychism can be divided into dualist and idealist versions.[85] He further divides the latter into "atomistic idealistic panpsychism", which he ascribes to David Hume, and "holistic idealistic panpsychism", which he favors.[85]

Main article: Neutral monism

Neutral monism rejects the dichotomy of mind and matter, instead taking a third substance as fundamental that is neither mental nor physical. Proposals for the nature of the third substance have varied, with some theorists choosing to leave it undefined. This has led to a variety of formulations of neutral monism, which may overlap with other philosophies. In versions of neutral monism in which the world's fundamental constituents are neither mental nor physical, it is quite distinct from panpsychism. In versions where the fundamental constituents are both mental and physical, neutral monism may lead to panpsychism, panprotopsychism, or dual aspect theory.[88]

In The Conscious Mind, David Chalmers writes that, in some instances, the differences between "Russell's neutral monism" and his property dualism are merely semantic.[47] Philip Goff believes that neutral monism can reasonably be regarded as a form of panpsychism "in so far as it is a dual aspect view".[1] Neutral monism, panpsychism, and dual aspect theory are grouped together or used interchangeably in some contexts.[47][89][6]

Physicalism and materialism

Further information: Physicalism and Materialism

Chalmers calls panpsychism an alternative to both materialism and dualism.[9]

Similarly, Goff calls panpsychism an alternative to both physicalism and substance dualism.[5] Strawson, on the other hand, describes panpsychism as a form of physicalism, in his view the only viable form.[29] Panpsychism can be combined with reductive materialism but cannot be combined with eliminative materialism because the latter denies the existence of the relevant mental attributes.[8]

Arguments for

Hard problem of consciousness

But what consciousness is, we know not; and how it is that anything so remarkable as a state of consciousness comes about as the result of irritating nervous tissue, is just as unaccountable as the appearance of the Djinn when Aladdin rubbed his lamp in the story, or as any other ultimate fact of nature.

—Thomas Henry Huxley (1896)

Main article: Hard problem of consciousness

It evidently feels like something to be a human brain.[90] This means that when things in the world are organised in a particular way, they begin to have an experience. The questions of why and how this material structure has experience, and why it has that particular experience rather than another experience, are known as the hard problem of consciousness.[6] The term is attributed to Chalmers. He argues that even after "all the perceptual and cognitive functions within the vicinity of consciousness" are accounted for, "there may still remain a further unanswered question: Why is the performance of these functions accompanied by experience?"[91]

Though Chalmers gave the hard problem of consciousness its present name, similar views were expressed before. Isaac Newton,[92] John Locke,[93] Gottfried Leibniz,[94] John Stuart Mill,[95] Thomas Henry Huxley,[96] Wilhelm Wundt,[4] all wrote about the seeming incompatibility of third-person functional descriptions of mind and matter and first-person conscious experience. Likewise, Asian philosophers like Dharmakirti and Guifeng Zongmi discussed the problem of how consciousness arises from unconscious matter.[97][98][99][100] Similar sentiments have been articulated through philosophical inquiries such as the problem of other minds, solipsism, the explanatory gap, philosophical zombies, and Mary's room. These problems have caused Chalmers to consider panpsychism a viable solution to the hard problem,[89][9][101] though he is not committed to any single view.[89]

Brian Jonathan Garrett has compared the hard problem to vitalism, the now discredited hypothesis that life is inexplicable and can only be understood if some vital life force exists. He maintains that given time, consciousness and its evolutionary origins will be understood just as life is now understood.[102] Daniel Dennett called the hard problem a "hunch", and maintained that conscious experience, as it is usually understood, is merely a complex cognitive illusion.[103][104] Patricia Churchland, also an eliminative materialist, maintains that philosophers ought to be more patient: neuroscience is still in its early stages, so Chalmers's hard problem is premature. Clarity will come from learning more about the brain, not from metaphysical speculation.[105][106]

Solutions

In The Conscious Mind (1996), Chalmers attempts to pinpoint why the hard problem is so hard. He concludes that consciousness is irreducible to lower-level physical facts, just as the fundamental laws of physics are irreducible to lower-level physical facts. Therefore, consciousness should be taken as fundamental in its own right and studied as such. Just as fundamental properties of reality are ubiquitous (even small objects have mass), consciousness may also be, though he considers that an open question.[47]

In Mortal Questions (1979), Thomas Nagel argues that panpsychism follows from four premises:[1][28]: 181

P1: There is no spiritual plane or disembodied soul; everything that exists is material.

P2: Consciousness is irreducible to lower-level physical properties.

P3: Consciousness exists.

P4: Higher-order properties of matter (i.e., emergent properties) can, at least in principle, be reduced to their lower-level properties.

Before the first premise is accepted, the range of possible explanations for consciousness is fully open. Each premise, if accepted, narrows down that range of possibilities. If the argument is sound, then by the last premise panpsychism is the only possibility left.

If (P1) is true, then either consciousness does not exist, or it exists within the physical world.

If (P2) is true, then either consciousness does not exist, or it (a) exists as distinct property of matter or (b) is fundamentally entailed by matter.

If (P3) is true, then consciousness exists, and is either (a) its own property of matter or (b) composed by the matter of the brain but not logically entailed by it.

If (P4) is true, then (b) is false, and consciousness must be its own unique property of matter.

Therefore, if all four premises are true, consciousness is its own unique property of matter and panpsychism is true.[28]: 187[4]

Mind-body problem

Dualism makes the problem insoluble; materialism denies the existence of any phenomenon to study, and hence of any problem.

—John R. Searle, Consciousness and Language, p. 47

Further information: Mind–body problem

In 2015, Chalmers proposed a possible solution to the mind-body problem through the argumentative format of thesis, antithesis, and synthesis.[9] The goal of such arguments is to argue for sides of a debate (the thesis and antithesis), weigh their vices and merits, and then reconcile them (the synthesis). Chalmers's thesis, antithesis, and synthesis are as follows:

Thesis: materialism is true; everything is fundamentally physical.

Antithesis: dualism is true; not everything is fundamentally physical.

(1) A centerpiece of Chalmers's argument is the physical world's causal closure.

Newton's law of motion explains this phenomenon succinctly: for every action there is an equal and opposite reaction. Cause and effect is a symmetrical process. There is no room for consciousness to exert any causal power on the physical world unless it is itself physical.

(2) On one hand, if consciousness is separate from the physical world then there is no room for it to exert any causal power on the world (a state of affairs philosophers call epiphenomenalism). If consciousness plays no causal role, then it is unclear how Chalmers could even write this paper. On the other hand, consciousness is irreducible to the physical processes of the brain.

(3) Panpsychism has all the benefits of materialism because it could mean that consciousness is physical while also escaping the grasp of epiphenomenalism. After some argumentation Chalmers narrows it down further to Russellian monism, concluding that thoughts, actions, intentions and emotions may just be the quiddities of neurotransmitters, neurons, and glial cells.[9]

Problem of substance

Physics is mathematical, not because we know so much about the physical world, but because we know so little: it is only its mathematical properties that we can discover. For the rest our knowledge is negative.

—Bertrand Russell, An Outline of Philosophy (1927)

See also: Intrinsic and extrinsic properties

Rather than solely trying to solve the problem of consciousness, Russell also attempted to solve the problem of substance, which is arguably a form of the problem of infinite regress.[citation needed]

(1) Like many sciences, physics describes the world through mathematics. Unlike other sciences, physics cannot describe what Schopenhauer called the "object that grounds" mathematics.[107] Economics is grounded in resources being allocated, and population dynamics is grounded in individual people within that population. The objects that ground physics, however, can be described only through more mathematics.[108] In Russell's words, physics describes "certain equations giving abstract properties of their changes". When it comes to describing "what it is that changes, and what it changes from and to—as to this, physics is silent".[49] In other words, physics describes matter's extrinsic properties, but not the intrinsic properties that ground them.[109]

(2) Russell argued that physics is mathematical because "it is only mathematical properties we can discover". This is true almost by definition: if only extrinsic properties are outwardly observable, then they will be the only ones discovered.[49] This led Alfred North Whitehead to conclude that intrinsic properties are "intrinsically unknowable".[4]

(3) Consciousness has many similarities to these intrinsic properties of physics. It, too, cannot be directly observed from an outside perspective. And it, too, seems to ground many observable extrinsic properties: presumably, music is enjoyable because of the experience of listening to it, and chronic pain is avoided because of the experience of pain, etc. Russell concluded that consciousness must be related to these extrinsic properties of matter. He called these intrinsic properties quiddities. Just as extrinsic physical properties can create structures, so can their corresponding and identical quiddities. The conscious mind, Russell argued, is one such structure.[49]

Proponents of panpsychism who use this line of reasoning include Chalmers, Annaka Harris,[110] and Galen Strawson. Chalmers has argued that the extrinsic properties of physics must have corresponding intrinsic properties; otherwise the universe would be "a giant causal flux" with nothing for "causation to relate", which he deems a logical impossibility. He sees consciousness as a promising candidate for that role.[47] Galen Strawson calls Russell's panpsychism "realistic physicalism". He argues that "the experiential considered specifically as such" is what it means for something to be physical. Just as mass is energy, Strawson believes that consciousness "just is" matter.[111]: 7

describable by math but is math; comparing physics to economics or population dynamics is a disanalogy. While population dynamics may be grounded in individual people, those people are grounded in "purely mathematical objects" such as energy and charge. The universe is, in a fundamental sense, made of nothing.[108]

Quantum mechanics

In a 2018 interview, Chalmers called quantum mechanics "a magnet for anyone who wants to find room for crazy properties of the mind", but not entirely without warrant.[112] The relationship between observation (and, by extension, consciousness) and the wave-function collapse is known as the measurement problem. It seems that atoms, photons, etc. are in quantum superposition (which is to say, in many seemingly contradictory states or locations simultaneously) until measured in some way. This process is known as a wave-function collapse. According to the Copenhagen interpretation of quantum mechanics, one of the oldest interpretations and the most widely taught,[113][114] it is the act of observation that collapses the wave-function. Erwin Schrödinger famously articulated the Copenhagen interpretation's unusual implications in the thought experiment now known as Schrödinger's cat. He imagines a box that contains a cat, a flask of poison, radioactive material, and a Geiger counter. The apparatus is configured so that when the Geiger counter detects radioactive decay, the flask will shatter, poisoning the cat. Unless and until the Geiger counter detects the radioactive decay of a single atom, the cat survives. The radioactive decay the Geiger counter detects is a quantum event; each decay corresponds to a quantum state transition of a single atom of the radioactive material. According to Schrödinger's wave equation, until they are observed, quantum particles, including the atoms of the radioactive material, are in quantum state superposition; each unmeasured atom in the radioactive material is in a quantum superposition of decayed and not decayed. This means that while the box remains sealed and its contents unobserved, the Geiger counter is also in a superposition of states of decay detected and no decay detected; the vial is in a superposition of both shattered and not shattered and the cat in a superposition of dead and alive. But when the box is unsealed, the observer finds a cat that is either dead or alive; there is no superposition of states. Since the cat is no longer in a superposition of states, then neither is the radioactive atom (nor the vial or the Geiger counter). Hence Schrödinger's wave function no longer holds and the wave function that described the atom—and its superposition of states—is said to have "collapsed": the atom now has only a single state, corresponding to the cat's observed state. But until an observer opens the box and thereby causes the wave function to collapse, the cat is both dead and alive. This has raised questions about, in John S. Bell's words, "where the observer begins and ends".[115]

The measurement problem has largely been characterised as the clash of classical physics and quantum mechanics. Bohm argued that it is rather a clash of classical physics, quantum mechanics, and phenomenology; all three levels of description seem to be difficult to reconcile, or even contradictory.[24] Though not referring specifically to quantum mechanics, Chalmers has written that if a theory of everything is ever discovered, it will be a set of "psychophysical laws", rather than simply a set of physical laws.[47] With Chalmers as their inspiration, Bohm and Pylykänen set out to do just that in their panprotopsychoism. Chalmers, who is critical of the Copenhagen interpretation and most quantum theories of consciousness, has coined this "the Law of the Minimisation of Mystery".[91]

Schrödinger's cat simultaneously dead and alive in a quantum superposition
According to the Copenhagen interpretation of quantum mechanics, Schrödinger's cat is both dead and alive until observed or measured in some way.

The many-worlds interpretation of quantum mechanics does not take observation as central to the wave-function collapse, because it denies that the collapse happens. On the many-worlds interpretation, just as the cat is both dead and alive, the observer both sees a dead cat and sees a living cat. Even though observation does not play a central role in this case, questions about observation are still relevant to the discussion. In Roger Penrose's words:

I do not see why a conscious being need be aware of only "one" of the alternatives in a linear superposition. What is it about consciousnesses that says that consciousness must not be "aware" of that tantalising linear combination of both a dead and a live cat? It seems to me that a theory of consciousness would be needed for one to square the many world view with what one actually observes.

Chalmers believes that the tentative variant of panpsychism outlined in The Conscious Mind (1996) does just that. Leaning toward the many-worlds interpretation due to its mathematical parsimony, he believes his variety of panpsychist property dualism may be the theory Penrose is seeking. Chalmers believes that information will play an integral role in any theory of consciousness because the mind and brain have corresponding informational structures. He considers the computational nature of physics further evidence of information's central role, and suggests that information that is physically realised is simultaneously phenomenally realised; both regularities in nature and conscious experience are expressions of information's underlying character. The theory implies panpsychism, and also solves the problem Penrose poses. On Chalmers's formulation, information in any given position is phenomenally realised, whereas the informational state of the superposition as a whole is not.[101] Panpsychist interpretations of quantum mechanics have been put forward by such philosophers as Whitehead,[4] Shan Gao,[116] Michael Lockwood,[4] and Hoffman, who is a cognitive scientist.[117] Protopanpsychist interpretations have been put forward by Bohm and Pylkkänen.[24]

Tegmark has formally calculated the "decoherence rates" of neurons, finding that the brain is a "classical rather than a quantum system" and that quantum mechanics does not relate "to consciousness in any fundamental way".[118] Hagan et al. criticize Tegmark's estimate and present a revised calculation that yields a range of decoherence rates within the realm of physiological relevance.[119]

In 2007, Steven Pinker criticized explanations of consciousness invoking quantum physics, saying: "to my ear, this amounts to the feeling that quantum mechanics sure is weird, and consciousness sure is weird, so maybe quantum mechanics can explain consciousness"; a view echoed by physicist Stephen Hawking.[120][121] In 2017, Penrose rejected these characterizations, stating that disagreements are about the nature of quantum mechanics.[121]

Arguments against

Theoretical issues

See also: Falsifiability

One criticism of panpsychism is that it cannot be empirically tested.[9] A corollary of this criticism is that panpsychism has no predictive power. Tononi and Koch write: "Besides claiming that matter and mind are one thing, [panpsychism] has little constructive to say and offers no positive laws explaining how the mind is organized and works".[34]

John Searle has alleged that panpsychism's unfalsifiability goes deeper than run-of-the-mill untestability: it is unfalsifiable because "It does not get up to the level of being false. It is strictly speaking meaningless because no clear notion has been given to the claim".[82] The need for coherence and clarification is accepted by David Skrbina, a proponent of panpsychism.[19]: 15

Many proponents of panpsychism base their arguments not on empirical support but on panpsychism's theoretical virtues. Chalmers says that while no direct evidence exists for the theory, neither is there direct evidence against it, and that "there are indirect reasons, of a broadly theoretical character, for taking the view seriously".[9]

Notwithstanding Tononi and Koch's criticism of panpsychism, they state that it integrates consciousness into the physical world in a way that is "elegantly unitary".[34]

A related criticism is what seems to many to be the theory's bizarre nature.[9] Goff dismisses this objection:[1] though he admits that panpsychism is counterintuitive, he argues that Einstein's and Darwin's theories are also counterintuitive. "At the end of the day", he writes, "you should judge a view not for its cultural associations but by its explanatory power".[30]

Problem of mental causation

Further information: Problem of mental causation

Philosophers such as Chalmers have argued that theories of consciousness should be capable of providing insight into the brain and mind to avoid the problem of mental causation.[9][122] If they fail to do that, the theory will succumb to epiphenomenalism,[122] a view commonly criticised as implausible or even self-contradictory.[101][123][124] Proponents of panpsychism (especially those with neutral monist tendencies) hope to bypass this problem by dismissing it as a false dichotomy; mind and matter are two sides of the same coin, and mental causation is merely the extrinsic description of intrinsic properties of mind.[125] Robert Howell has argued that all causal functions are still accounted for dispositionally (i.e., in terms of the behaviors described by science), leaving phenomenality causally inert.[126] He concludes, "This leaves us once again with epiphenomenal qualia, only in a very surprising place".[126] Neutral monists reject such dichotomous views of mind-body interaction.[125][48]

Combination problem

The combination problem (which is related to the binding problem) can be traced to William James,[11] but was given its present name by William Seager in 1995.[127][11] The problem arises from the tension between the seemingly irreducible nature of consciousness and its ubiquity. If consciousness is ubiquitous, then in panpsychism, every atom (or every bit, depending on the version of panpsychism) has a minimal level of it. How then, as Keith Frankish puts it, do these "tiny consciousnesses combine" to create larger conscious experiences such as "the twinge of pain" he feels in his knee?[128] This objection has garnered significant attention,[11][128][1] and many have attempted to answer it.[110][129] None of the proposed answers has gained widespread acceptance.[11]

Concepts related to this problem include the classical sorites paradox (aggregates and organic wholes), mereology (the philosophical study of parts and wholes), Gestalt psychology, and Leibniz's concept of the vinculum substantiale.^[citation needed]

A dragon king event is one that is both extremely large in size or effect (a "king") and born of unique origins (a "dragon") relative to other events from the same system. DK events are generated by or correspond to mechanisms such as positive feedback, tipping points, bifurcations, and phase transitions, that tend to occur in nonlinear and complex systems, and serve to amplify dragon king events to extreme levels. By understanding and monitoring these dynamics, some predictability of such events may be obtained.[1][2][3]

The dragon king theory was developed by Didier Sornette, who hypothesizes that many crises are in fact DKs rather than black swans, i.e., they may be predictable to some degree. Given the importance of crises to the long-term organization of a variety of systems, the DK theory urges that special attention be given to the study and monitoring of extremes, and that a dynamic view be taken. From a scientific viewpoint, such extremes are interesting because they may reveal underlying, often hidden, organizing principles. Practically speaking, one should study extreme risks, but not forget that significant uncertainty will almost always be present, and should be rigorously considered in decisions regarding risk management and design.

The dragon king theory is related to concepts such as black swan theory, outliers, complex systems, nonlinear dynamics, power laws, extreme value theory, prediction, extreme risks, and risk management.

Black swans and dragon kings

A black swan can be considered a metaphor for an event that is surprising (to the observer), has a major effect, and, after being observed, is rationalized in hindsight. The theory of black swans is epistemological, relating to the limited knowledge and understanding of the observer. The term was introduced and popularized by Nassim Taleb and has been associated with concepts such as heavy tails, non-linear payoffs, model error, and even Knightian uncertainty, whose "unknowable unknown" event terminology was popularized by former United States Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld. Taleb claims that black swan events are not predictable, and in practice, the theory encourages one to "prepare rather than predict", and limit one's exposure to extreme fluctuations.

The black swan concept is important and poses a valid criticism of people, firms, and societies that are irresponsible in the sense that they are overly confident in their ability to anticipate and manage risk. However, claiming that extreme events are—in general—unpredictable may also lead to a lack of accountability in risk management roles. In fact, it is known that in a wide range of physical systems that extreme events are predictable to some degree.[4][5][2][3] One simply needs to have a sufficiently deep understanding of the structure and dynamics of the focal system, and the ability to monitor it. This is the domain of the dragon kings. Such events have been referred to as "grey swans" by Taleb. A more rigorous distinction between black swans, grey swans, and dragon kings is difficult as black swans are not precisely defined in physical and mathematical terms. However, technical elaboration of concepts in the Black Swan book are elaborated in the Silent Risk document. An analysis of the precise definition of a black swan in a risk management context was written by professor Terje Aven.[6]

Beyond power laws

The 5000 largest drawdowns for 8 different futures contracts plotted according to their empirical CCDF, shifted by factors of 10 for visibility. The dashed lines are power law fits.[7]

Many phenomena in both the natural and social sciences have power law statistics (Pareto distribution).[8][9][10] Furthermore, from extreme value theory, it is known that a broad range of distributions (the Frechet class) have tails that are asymptotically power law. The result of this is that, when dealing with crises and extremes, power law tails are the "normal" case. The unique property of power laws is that they are scale-invariant, self-similar and fractal. This property implies that all events—both large and small—are generated by the same mechanism, and thus there will be no distinct precursors by which the largest events may be predicted. A well-known conceptual framework for events of this type is self-organized criticality. Such concepts are compatible with the theory of the black swan. However Taleb has also stated that considering the power law as a model instead of a model with lighter tails (e.g., a Gaussian) "converts black swans into gray ones", in the sense that the power law model gives non-negligible probability to large events.

In a variety of studies it has been found that, despite the fact that a power law models the tail of the empirical distribution well, the largest events are significantly outlying (i.e., much larger than what would be expected under the model).[7][11][12] Such events are interpreted as dragon kings as they indicate a departure from the generic process underlying the power law. Examples of this include the largest radiation release events occurring in nuclear power plant accidents, the largest city (agglomeration) within the sample of cities in a country, the largest crashes in financial markets, and intraday wholesale electricity prices.[7][13]

Mechanisms

Fold bifurcation in ecology[14]

Physically speaking, dragon kings may be associated with the regime changes, bifurcations, and tipping points of complex out-of-equilibrium systems.[1] For instance, the catastrophe (fold bifurcation) of the global ecology illustrated in the figure could be considered to be a dragon king: Many observers would be surprised by such a dramatic change of state. However, it is well known that in dynamic systems, there are many precursors as the system approaches the catastrophe.

Positive feedback is also a mechanism that can spawn dragon kings. For instance, in a stampede the number of cattle running increases the level of panic which causes more cattle to run, and so on. In human dynamics such herding and mob behavior has also been observed in crowds, stock markets, and so on (see herd behavior). The role of positive feedback loops in dragon king formation is well documented, particularly in oscillatory and cascading networks. Such a system periodically reaches a tipping point, becoming unstable and triggering a self-amplifying cascade of cascades, leading to a dragon king.[15]

Left: Illustration of the system trajectory in the vicinity of a bubbling event. Right: empirical pdf (histogram) of peak heights in trajectories in double logarithmic scale[16] Dragon kings are also caused by attractor bubbling in coupled oscillator systems.[16] Attractor bubbling is a generic behavior appearing in networks of coupled oscillators where the system typically orbits in an invariant manifold with a chaotic attractor (where the peak trajectories are low), but is intermittently pushed (by noise) into a region where orbits are locally repelled from the invariant manifold (where the peak trajectories are large). These excursions form the dragon kings, as illustrated in the figure. It is claimed that such models can describe many real phenomena such as earthquakes, brain activity, etc.[16] A block and spring mechanical model, considered as a model of geological faults and their earthquake dynamics, produced a similar distribution.[17]

It could also be the case that dragon kings are created as a result of system control or intervention. That is, trying to suppress the release of stress or death in dynamic complex systems may lead to an accumulation of stress or a maturation towards instability. For instance, brush/forest fires are a natural occurrence in many areas. Such fires are inconvenient and thus we may wish that they are diligently extinguished. This leads to long periods without inconvenient fires, however, in the absence of fires, dead wood accumulates. Once this accumulation reaches a critical point, and a fire starts, the fire becomes so large that it cannot be controlled—a singular event that could be considered to be a dragon king. Other policies, such as doing nothing (allowing for small fires to occur naturally), or performing strategic controlled burning, would avoid enormous fires by allowing for frequent small ones. Another example is monetary policy. Quantitative easing programs and low interest rate policies are common, with the intention of avoiding recessions, promoting growth, etc. However, such programs build instability by increasing income inequality, keeping weak firms alive, and inflating asset bubbles.[18][19] Ultimately such policies, aimed at smoothing out economic fluctuations, will enable an enormous correction—a dragon king.

The taxonomy of dragon kings.[20] Examples of systems include:

- A: City sizes
- B: Inoculation model [21]
- C: Complex contagion model [21]
- D: Quasicritical neuronal models[22], rice-pile[23]
- E: BTW–Kuramoto[15], Facilitated sandpile[24]
